I. PARTIES AND JURISDICTION

1. Charles Ballard is a former resident of Idaho and a current resident of Florida as an active-duty member of the United States Air Force. He is the surviving spouse of Krystal Melissa Ballard, deceased, who up until the time of her death was also an active-duty member of the United States Air Force.

2. Defendant Brian Calder Kerr, M.D. ("Defendant Kerr") is a licensed medical doctor who resides in Idaho and who practiced medicine in the City of Eagle, County of Ada, State of Idaho, at all relevant times in the Complaint, including on and after July 21, 2010.

Chinden Blvd., Suite 113, Boise, Idaho 83616 ("the Silk Touch clinic"). This Defendant has operated its business under its own name and under the trade names, or doing-business-as names, of Silk Touch Med Spa, Silk Touch Med Spa and Laser Center, and Silk Touch Med Spa, Laser and Lipo of Boise. All of these Defendants, trade names, and doing-business-as names, are collectively referred to herein as the "Silk Touch Defendants."

6. At all material times herein, Defendant Kerr was an employee of the Silk Touch Defendants acting within the course and scope of his employment.

II. FACTS

9. Plaintiff Charles Ballard is a Staff Sergeant in the United States Air Force and is now stationed in Florida. He was a Staff Sergeant at all times relevant to this Complaint. Prior to being stationed in Florida, Plaintiff was stationed and resided in Idaho with his wife, Krystal Ballard, up until the time of her death.

10. At the time of her death, Krystal Ballard was also a Staff Sergeant in the United States Air Force.

11. At the time of Krystal's death, Charles and Krystal Ballard were married and living together in Mountain Home, Idaho, while both were stationed at the Mountain Home Air Force Base in Mountain Home, Idaho.

12. Leading up to, and on July 21, 2010, Krystal Ballard was 27 years old and in good health.

13. At all times material herein, Defendant Kerr and the Silk Touch Defendants held themselves out to the public as individually and collectively competent providers of cosmetic and plastic surgery services.

14. Prior to the time he began providing cosmetic and plastic surgery services, Defendant Kerr was primarily engaged in providing anesthesiology services to the public.

15. On July 21, 2010, Defendants Kerr and the Silk Touch Defendants, and upon information and belief, other agents, employees, and servants of these Defendants, performed cosmetic surgery on Krystal Ballard at the Silk Touch clinic.

16. The medical care provided by, including but not limited to the sterilization procedures and techniques implemented, used, and performed by, Defendant Kerr and the Silk Touch Defendants, and upon information and belief, other agents, employees, and servants of these Defendants, while providing cosmetic surgery services to Krystal Ballard, fell below the standards of care owed to the patient by physicians and facilities providing cosmetic and plastic surgery services.

17. As a direct and proximate result of this care by these Defendants, including sterilization procedures and techniques falling below applicable standards of care, Krystal Ballard suffered during surgery, and/or developed and continued to suffer from afterward, a life-threatening infection and/or condition, and died.

18. The surgery and post-surgery care and monitoring procedures and techniques implemented, used, and performed by Defendant Kerr and the Silk Touch Defendants, and upon information and belief, other agents, employees, and servants of these Defendants, while providing cosmetic surgery services to Krystal Ballard and monitoring and/or caring for her afterward, fell below the applicable standards of care owed to the patient by physicians and facilities providing surgery and post-surgery cosmetic and plastic surgery services.

19. As a direct and proximate result of these surgery and post-surgery procedures and techniques falling below the applicable standards of care, Krystal Ballard suffered during surgery, and/or developed and continued to suffer from afterward, a life-threatening infection and/or condition, and died.

20. In the early morning hours of July 26, 2010, Krystal Ballard died at St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise, Idaho, as a direct and proximate result of the acts and/or omissions of Defendant Kerr and the Silk Touch Defendants, and upon information and belief, other agents, employees, and servants of these Defendants, in providing cosmetic surgery services, surgical monitoring services, and/or post-surgical monitoring services.

III. MEDICAL CAUSATION

21. Plaintiff realleges the allegations contained in all the prior and subsequent paragraphs of this Complaint.

22. The negligence and other wrongful conduct of the Defendants as alleged in this Complaint were a direct and proximate cause of Krystal Ballard's death.

23. The damages Plaintiff suffered and will suffer are a direct and proximate result of each of the Defendants' negligence and other wrongful conduct.

IV. CLAIMS

24. Plaintiff realleges the allegations contained in all the prior and subsequent paragraphs of this Complaint.

25. Each of the Defendants were negligent in the manner in which they treated Krystal Ballard. To a reasonable medical certainty, the care rendered by the Defendants fell below the applicable standard of care in the community in which it was provided.

26. Each of the Defendants were negligent in providing Krystal Ballard medical and cosmetic surgery care and services, surgical care and monitoring services, and/or post-surgical care and monitoring services (including up to the time of her death) that fell below the applicable standard of care in the community in which it was provided.

27. These acts of negligence were a direct and proximate cause of the special and general damages sustained by Plaintiff, which damages are described in the "Damages" section below.

28. Defendant Silk Touch Laser, LLP is responsible under the doctrine of respondeat superior for the acts and omissions of its employees, including Defendant Kerr and its nursing staff and/or others for whom it may be legally liable and for the acts and omissions of the same performed under the trade names, or doing-business-as names, of Silk Touch Med Spa, Silk Touch Med Spa and Laser Center, and Silk Touch Med Spa, Laser and Lipo of Boise.

29. The Defendants' misconduct was willful or reckless pursuant to Idaho Code § 6-1603(4)(a).

V. DAMAGES

30. Plaintiff realleges the allegations contained in all the prior and subsequent paragraphs of this Complaint.

31. As a direct and proximate result of Defendants' negligence, Plaintiff has sustained both economic and non-economic losses, which include but are not limited to, damages in the form of:

(a) The decedent's funeral expenses;

(b) Loss of wages and other benefits of employment which would have been earned by Krystal Ballard and shared with her husband, Plaintiff, during the course of her normal work life expectancy;

(c) The reasonable value attributable to the loss of service, care, comfort and society of Krystal Ballard; and

(d) As a result of Defendants' negligence and other wrongful conduct, Plaintiff has been forced to employ attorneys for the prosecution of this action and Plaintiff is entitled to recover reasonable costs and attorneys' fees pursuant to Idaho Code § 12-121, and Rule 54(d)(1) of the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure.

WHEREFORE, Plaintiff respectfully prays for judgment against the Defendants as follows:

1. For the recovery of all special and general compensatory damages sustained as a direct and proximate result of the negligence of the Defendants, all in a precise amount to be proven at the time and place of trial of this action, but which in any event exceed the jurisdictional limits of $10,000;

2. For the recovery of all reasonable costs and attorneys' fees pursuant to Idaho law; and

3. For such other and further relief as the Court deems just and equitable.

DEMAND FOR JURY TRIAL

Plaintiff hereby demands a trial by jury on all issues in accordance with Rule 38(b) of the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure.

DATED this the 16th day of March, 2012.

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO COMPEL DEFENDANTS' ANSWERS TO PLAINTIFF'S FIRST SET OF INTERROGATORIES

ORIGINAL

COMES NOW Plaintiff, Charles Ballard, by and through his attorneys, pursuant to Rule 37(a)(2) of the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure, and moves this Court to compel Defendants' answers to Plaintiff's first set of interrogatories. This Motion is supported by a memorandum of law and an affidavit of counsel, both of which have been contemporaneously filed herewith.

On June 6, 2012, Plaintiff served twenty-three interrogatories, among other discovery requests, upon Defendants. Defendants asserted an objection to Plaintiff's interrogatories and refused to answer any of them on the grounds that the number of interrogatories exceed forty -- the number allowed under Rule 33(a)(3) of the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure. Plaintiff made numerous good faith attempts to resolve this discovery dispute and avoid the Court's involvement, but to no avail. Despite Plaintiff's best efforts to reach an amicable resolution, Defendants continue to refuse to answer any of Plaintiff's interrogatories.

Plaintiff now has no alternative but to respectfully move the Court to compel Defendants to answer Plaintiff's interrogatories. Pursuant to Rule 37(a)(4) of the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure, Plaintiff also seeks reasonable expenses incurred in obtaining the order, including attorney's fees.

Dated this 24th day of August, 2012.

Re: Charles Ballard v. Brian Kerr, M.D., et al, Case No. CV OC 1204792

Dear Mr. Quane,

You objected to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories on the grounds that the number of interrogatories exceeds the number allowed by Rule 33(a)(3), I.R.C.P. We believe such an objection and refusal to answer the discovery on that basis is meritless and made in bad faith. Plaintiff propounded twenty-three (23) interrogatories – a number far fewer than the 40 interrogatories allowed by Rule 33. Defendant has not identified any basis for how Plaintiff's Interrogatories might exceed 40 separate interrogatories and has thus not even made a half-hearted attempt to formulate a meritorious objection.

Of course, no objection to Plaintiff's Interrogatories based on excessiveness could have merit. "[S]ubparts directed at eliciting details concerning a common theme should be considered a single question." Charles A. Wright, et al, Federal Practice and Procedure, § 2168.1 (3d ed. 2002). See Swackhammer v. Sprint Corp. PCS, 225 F.R.D. 658, 664 (D. Kan. 2004) (finding that subparts relating to a common theme were not separate interrogatories). Each of Plaintiff's Interrogatories pertains to a common theme and counts as a single interrogatory. Further, "recipients of interrogatories are not entitled to object based on a selective count of the various clauses contained in the requests." Richardson v. State of Montana, 130 P.3d 634, 644 (Mont. 2006) (concluding that the State's objection to interrogatories on excessiveness grounds "was without merit"); 27 C.J.S. Discovery § 83 (citing Richardson). Accordingly, Defendant cannot object to Plaintiff's Interrogatories because an interrogatory may have more than one clause. See Richardson, 130 P.3d at 644 ("common sense dictates that one sentence containing three clauses does not constitute three separate interrogatories").

Rule 33 is given a "liberal interpretation." Smith v. Big Lost River Irrigation District, 83 Idaho 374, 383 (Idaho 1961). Plaintiff has made a good faith attempt to comply with the permissible number of interrogatories under Rule 33 and is confident that the Court will compel Defendant to answer Plaintiff's Interrogatories.

Prior to seeking the Court's involvement, we ask that you meet and confer with us about your objection to Plaintiff's Interrogatories. Prior to our discussing this matter, we ask that within seven (7) days of this letter, you provide a detailed basis for its excessiveness objection and a date and time in the next two weeks that you are available to discuss Defendant's objection. If we do not hear from you within seven (7) days, then Plaintiff will have no alternative but to move to compel Defendant's response to Plaintiff's Interrogatories. You can reach me at the number above or contact my law partner, J.B. Perrine, at (334) 262-6485.

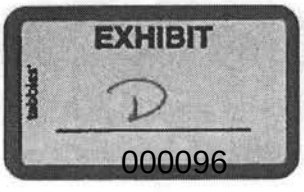
Dear Mr. Quane,

By letter dated July 6, 2012 we requested you provide us a written response as to the legal basis for your objections to our first set of discovery based on the alleged excessive number of interrogatories. We have yet to receive a written response, although acknowledge your office did call mine about setting up a call to discuss. I was in trial the week of July 9 and following went on a vacation the week of the 16th. I understand you may have been out of the office as well, but notwithstanding that fact, we have not received any written response as requested in our letter. This letter would precede any telephone conversations in an attempt to resolve this discovery dispute. I am somewhat pessimistic that we can resolve the dispute short of court intervention, but always like to be able to represent to the court our efforts prior to filing a motion to compel. I recognize there are attorneys whose litigation strategy is to delay the discovery process through meritless objections. Having not litigated any matters with you previously, I am willing to give everyone the benefit of the doubt, but find your objections without legal foundation.

Given the fact over two weeks has passed since our letter of July 6, I am requesting yet again written response setting forth the legal basis for your calculation that our interrogatories exceed those permitted. I will need the response by Friday, July 27 to avoid our having to file a motion to compel. If we do not receive the response by close of business on Friday, I will assume you stand by your objection as stated in your discovery responses and we will proceed on that basis. If you wish to reconsider your objection and respond to the discovery requests as propounded, then we will be happy to give you an additional two weeks to file responses.

Be assured that I always prefer to litigate cases amicably. However, having an obligation to my client, I will aggressively deal with any attempt to derail what should be an open and free flow of information as part of the discovery process.



Sincerely,

P. Gregory Haddad

Re: Ballard v. Kerr
Our File No. 1107/25-938

Dear Mr. Haddad:

This is the first opportunity I have had to respond to your letter of July 6 due to my commitments in cases in eastern Idaho, although my assistant telephoned your office July 16 and informed the person who answered the phone that I was unavailable until today or yesterday.

I would like to offer you my comments regarding your letter of July 6. I understand the position you have taken in regard to my objections to the interrogatories on the grounds that they exceed the number allowed by our rule of civil procedure. My objection to the interrogatories stated the grounds and this is all that is required for such an objection. In your letter, you state that I have not even made a half-hearted attempt to formulate a meritorious objection. Since your letter states your position on the number of interrogatories, your statement in the letter has no bearing upon the issue and it makes no difference what you assume I did or did not do in formulating the objections. In fact, your statement is false and you had no basis to even make such a statement. I consider this to be an irrelevant comment that is meant to be derogatory of me.

In your letter, you arbitrarily and unilaterally give me seven days to provide a detailed basis for my objections and if I do not respond within seven days, you will file a motion to compel. This deadline does not take into consideration my availability to respond and, of course, it is made irrespective of my availability. Most experienced lawyers would have stated that they would like to have my response as soon as I am available to give a response. Since this is apparently your policy, there will be in, all likelihood, situations in this case where I will be forced to adhere to your policy, such as the scheduling of matters and court appearances.

I have another specific instance where you and your local counsel arbitrarily selected July 31 for the date for the subpoena of records of Sprint Nextel Corporate Security. The subpoena I received specifies July 31, office of your local counsel, but a time is not listed, even though the form of the subpoena calls for a place, date and time. No one contacted me to see if I was available and I am not, which is not the way things are done in Boise. Because this seems to be the way you and local counsel practice, I will take the liberty of scheduling matters, including the deposition of your client on a date, time and place I choose, without obtaining your availability.

Your letter of July 25 also demands my reaction. In that letter, you state that there are attorneys whose litigation strategy is to delay the litigation process through meritless objections, although you say you are willing to give everyone the benefit of the doubt. This statement has no bearing whatsoever on the objections I have asserted and your position on the objections. I fail to understand why you included this statement unless it was meant to disparage me.

In your letter of July 25 you also arbitrarily set a deadline of July 27. I will not be in my office July 27 because I must travel to another city on business. It is not the custom in Boise to impose such unilateral and arbitrary deadlines, which give no difference to the opposing attorney's availability.

I would also like to state that threats from an attorney serve no purpose or worthwhile function. You have stated your position on the number of interrogatories, which is fine, but the threats you assert are irrelevant and do not serve as a means of reaching an agreement on answering the interrogatories. In fact, they have the opposite effect.

Rule 33(a)(3), I.R.C.P. reads in relevant part:

> "No party shall serve upon any other single party to an action more than forty (40) interrogatories, in which sub-parts of interrogatories shall count as separate interrogatories. . .".

The key to the interpretation of this Rule is whether the other parts of the interrogatory, in addition to the primary interrogatory require answers on specific issues that are designated. Looking at Interrogatory No. 1, it asks for the identity of the person or persons responding to these Interrogatories and Requests. This is one Interrogatory if only Dr. Kerr is identified. The other parts of the Interrogatory specify two distinct and separate subjects that are in addition to the identity of Dr. Kerr, namely their date(s) of birth and addresses for the past five years. These two parts require answers for each that are different from each other and are not embodied in the identity of Dr. Kerr. As respects Dr. Kerr, this constitutes three interrogatories. If more than Dr. Kerr is identified in responding to the interrogatories, such as one person, this is three more interrogatories, or a total of six. If there are three people who responded to the Interrogatory in addition to Dr. Kerr, this is nine more interrogatories.

The same analysis of Interrogatory No. 2 applies, although No. 2 is far more extensive than No. 1. The Interrogatory asks for the employment history for the last ten years of Dr. Kerr and any agent, servant, or employee who had any interaction or communication with Krystal Ballard. In addition to this, there are six specific questions to answer, each of which require separate answers that are different and distinct for one another. They are: 1) employer name; 2) job title; 3) job duties, 4) dates of employment; 5) reason for leaving employment; and 6) salary or wages for each employment. This is a total of six separate interrogatories for Dr. Kerr. Add to this other agents and employees of Dr. Kerr who had any interaction or communication with Krystal Ballard, and the number of interrogatories is increased dramatically by a multiplication of six for each employee or agent.

Interrogatory No. 3 contains five separate subjects that require answers and each of them is distinct and separate from the others.

Interrogatory No. 8 is actually two separate interrogatories, despite the fact that they are designated as Interrogatory No. 8.

Interrogatory No. 10 contains three separate subjects or categories to answer, each of which are distinct and different from one another.

Interrogatory No. 11 refers to Dr. Kerr a nd the agents, servants and employees of Silk Touch Laser. It then has four separate subjects that require answers by Dr. Kerr and the employees of Silk Touch Laser.

Interrogatory No. 16 specifies four specific subjects or categories that require answers, each of which are different from the others, despite the fact that the Interrogatory is directed to Dr. Kerr and Krystal Ballard and Charles Ballard.

Interrogatory No. 19 applies to Dr. Kerr, Silk Touch Laser and/or any employee of either which involves separate answers for each. In addition to this, the Interrogatory specifies six subjects that require answers by each person and entity to whom the Interrogatory is directed. Each subject is different from the others.

Interrogatory No. 20 is actually two separate interrogatories, even though they are listed as one interrogatory. The Interrogatory asks the identity of each witness and for each witness a brief summary of their expected trial testimony.

Interrogatory No. 23 is directed to Dr. Kerr, and agents, servants and employees of Silk Touch Laser. It then designates four separate categories that require answers, each of which are distinct and different from the others.

Several of the interrogatories request the production of documents, data and tangible items. Rule 33 for interrogatories does not require or pertain to the production of such material.

When I prepared the objections to the interrogatories, I conducted an analysis of each one in the fashion and way I have set forth in this letter. I did not, as you put it, even made a half-hearted attempt to formulate a meritorious objection. In my opinion, my chances of prevailing on my objections are at the least equal to your chances of prevailing on your position. Even so, I think we must make every effort to reach an accord.

According to our Rules, if you file a motion to compel answers, you must certify that you have tried to resolve our dispute without court action. Your letter of July 6 simply provides that you are right and I am wrong and that the court will compel answers to the interrogatories. For a starting point on our efforts to reconcile our differences, I suggest that you submit a revised set of interrogatories that come close to meeting the Rule on 40 interrogatories, which I can then consider and hopefully agree to answer, even if they slightly exceed 40 in number. I think that our Rules and practices require you to give some respect or recognition to my position as well as yours, and in an effort to reach an agreement. Your position that I am wrong and you are right is not compatible with this requirement and practice.

Very truly yours,

Jeremiah A. Quane

Re: Charles Ballard v. Brian Kerr, M.D., et al, Case No. CV OC 1204792

Dear Mr. Quane,

I am in receipt of your letter faxed to me July 26, 2012 and thank you for your response. While undoubtedly given the tenor of your letter we will be at loggerheads with respect to reaching a resolution concerning the objections made based on what you perceive to be an excessive number of interrogatories, I nonetheless think it best to try to resolve these issues short of court intervention. If not, then I want to be able to represent to the Court that every effort has been made to resolve this dispute.

First, Rule 33 of the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure indicate that "no party shall serve upon any other single party to any action, more than forty (40) interrogatories, in which subparts of interrogatories shall count as separate interrogatories..." As you can see from the interrogatories, they were directed both to Silk Touch as well as Dr. Kerr individually. Because your "math" and mine may differ, I will identify which interrogatories are directed at Dr. Kerr and which at Silk Touch so I can place your mind at ease with respect to the number of interrogatories we served on your respective clients. I will also withdraw certain interrogatories as indicated below. This is being done solely to avoid the need to waste the Court's time on a discovery dispute, not that I believe your objection is valid. Further, while we disagree as to how you have calculated the number of interrogatories, we are calculating the number based on your math only as a means of resolving this dispute without court intervention.

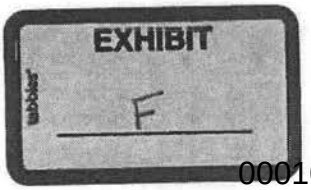
We would request that you provide an answer as to the person or persons responding to these interrogatories and requests. You need not provide dates of birth or addresses for these individuals. This would account for arguably no more than 1 interrogatory to each of your clients based on your "math."



Interrogatory No 2

Interrogatory No. 2 is directed to both Dr. Kerr individually as well as Silk Touch. We withdraw the reason for leaving employment and salary/wage information. This would amount to three interrogatories directed at Dr. Kerr and three interrogatories directed at Silk Touch Spa based upon your "math."

Interrogatory No. 3

This interrogatory would be directed at each of your clients. Assuming your math is correct, this would involve six interrogatories.

Interrogatory No. 4

Interrogatory No. 4 is directed to both of your clients and it is a single interrogatory to each.

Interrogatory No. 5

This interrogatory is directed to Silk Touch and is a single interrogatory. Attempting to suggest that producing information regarding manufacturer, model and serial number would be separate interrogatories is absurd.

Interrogatory No. 6

This is both an interrogatory and request for production. As for the interrogatory, Dr. Kerr can speak to his education, training and experience and it is a single interrogatory. I have never had it suggested that education, training and experience are three separate and distinct as those terms are used interchangeably, and are typically reflected in a CV.

Interrogatory No. 7

This is a single interrogatory directed at Dr. Kerr.

Interrogatory No. 8

Withdraw the interrogatory.

Interrogatory No. 9

This is a single interrogatory directed at Silk Touch.

Interrogatory No. 10

According to your math, this would be four interrogatories directed at Dr. Kerr.

Interrogatory No. 11

This interrogatory would be five interrogatories directed at each of your clients, according to your math.

Interrogatory No. 12

This is a single interrogatory directed at Dr. Kerr.

Interrogatory No. 13

This would be arguably, pursuant to your math, two interrogatories directed at Silk Touch since it requests names and addresses.

Interrogatory No. 14

We will withdraw Interrogatory No. 14 as it would be encompassed by Interrogatory No. 13.

Interrogatory No. 15

This encompasses both an interrogatory and request for production. As to the interrogatory, it is a single interrogatory directed at Silk Touch.

Interrogatory No. 16

I think you would be hard-pressed to argue that trying to account for all communications would be more than a single interrogatory even though you have to identify the manner in which you communicated. This is directed at Dr. Kerr.

Interrogatory No. 17

This would be two interrogatories directed at both Dr. Kerr and Silk Touch based on your math. One asking who was in the room and the second who made contact or inserted any instruments during the procedure.

Interrogatory No. 18

Interrogatory No. 18 is directed exclusively to Silk Touch and is a single interrogatory.

Interrogatory No. 19

This would be exclusively directed at Silk Touch and it has five subparts basically asking for information concerning inspections. According to your math, this would be five interrogatories directed at Silk Touch.

Interrogatory No. 20

Interrogatory No. 20 is directed to both Dr. Kerr and Silk Touch, and your math would have it at two interrogatories.

Interrogatory No. 21

Interrogatory No. 21 is essentially asking for what is on a Dec sheet and would be directed at both of your clients. Not even for sake of argument would I consider that to be separate interrogatories, but rather one toward each.

Interrogatory No. 22

Interrogatory No. 22 is directed at Silk Touch and Dr. Kerr and would be two interrogatories to each, one how they sterilized themselves and second, how they sterilized equipment.

Interrogatory No. 23

This interrogatory would be directed to both your clients and it would be five interrogatories according to your math.

Having totaled this out, I account for 39 interrogatories directed at Silk Touch and 36 interrogatories directed at Dr. Kerr. Hopefully, we can agree to move this along rather than delaying discovery. Please respond to whether you will agree to respond to the discovery requests based on the modifications and clarifications set forth in this letter by Friday, August 10, 2012. Otherwise, we will move the court to compel responses.

In any event, irrespective of our ability to work out our differences as to these discovery requests, we would request dates on which Dr. Kerr can be deposed. While the deposition may not occur until late August or early September, I would like to have some dates within the next two weeks to consider.

Thank you for your attention to this matter. If we do not hear from you, we will assume you continue to take issue and stand by your objections. We will then file a motion to compel.

Sincerely,

P. Gregory Haddad

Our File No. 1107/25-938

Dear Mr. Haddad:

Your interrogatories are addressed separately to four Defendants being Dr. Kerr, Silk Touch Laser, LLP, Silk Touch MedSpa and Laser Center, and Silk Touch MedSpa, Laser, and Lipo of Boise and each Defendant is requested to answer the full set of the Interrogatories. The format, style and description of the interrogatories does not separate or identify which of the interrogatories any one Defendant is requested to answer. Section Q, page 5, of the interrogatories states "you and/or "yours" means Dr. Kerr, Silk Touch Laser, LLP, Silk Touch MedSpa and Laser Center, and Silk Touch MedSpa, Laser, and Lipo of Boise. I fail to understand your logic and contention in your letter of August 6 that some of the interrogatories are directed only to a particular Defendant, such as your reference to numbers 5, 7, 9, 12, 13, 15, 18 and 19. You then go on to state that you account for 39 interrogatories directed at Silk Touch Laser, LLP and 36 interrogatories directed at Dr. Kerr. Your statements are simply not in conformity with the style, description and format of the interrogatories.

It is impossible to figure out which of the interrogatories are directed to whom, despite the explanation in your letter. There is no reason not to send separate sets of interrogatories directed to a particular Defendant. If we end up in Court over this, we should and must have a clear and concise record for the Judge to assess and your letter of August 6 does not fulfill this need. I need interrogatories directed to a particular

Defendant instead of the method you have employed. As a solution, I strongly recommend you do this and we can then go forward and hopefully agree.

You again, in your letter of August 6, impose an arbitrary, unilateral deadline of August 10 for me to respond, without knowing if I am alive or in China. This is not the way things are done in Boise, even if you do it this way in West Virginia. You also threaten to move the Court to compel responses if I do not respond by August 10. Again, you do not take into account my availability to respond by August 10, but nevertheless, I am responding before August 10. Threats get you nothing.

You have asked for dates for the deposition of Dr. Kerr within the next two weeks of your letter with the suggestion that the deposition may not occur until late August or early September. I take it from this that you want dates in this time frame. Here again, you unilaterally impose a time frame for the deposition, which is very narrow in scope. I will tell you that my business makes it impossible to have the deposition in August and early September, much less the availability of Dr. Kerr. With this in mind, I will get you dates for our availability, but I am putting you on notice that they will not be in the time frame you demand. At the best, I am looking at October because I am booked solid in most of September, especially the later half.

Very truly yours,

Jeremiah A. Quane

Attorneys for Plaintiff

IN THE DISTRICT COURT FOR THE FOURTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF

THE STATE OF IDAHO, IN AND FOR THE COUNTY OF ADA

CHARLES BALLARD,

Plaintiff,

vs.

BRIAN CALDER KERR, M.D.; SILK TOUCH LASER, LLP, an Idaho limited liability partnership; and SILK TOUCH LASER, LLP, an Idaho limited liability partnership, d/b/a SILK TOUCH MED SPA, and/or SILK TOUCH MED SPA AND LASER CENTER, and/or SILK TOUCH MED SPA, LASER, and LIPO OF BOISE,

Case No. CV OC 1204792

PLAINTIFF'S MEMORANDUM OF LAW IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO COMPEL DEFENDANTS' ANSWERS TO PLAINTIFF'S FIRST SET OF INTERROGATORIES

COMES NOW Plaintiff, Charles Ballard, by and through his attorneys, pursuant to Rule 37(a)(2) of the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure, and provides this Memorandum of Law in Support of Plaintiff's Motion to Compel Defendants' Answers to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories. A motion and affidavit of counsel has been contemporaneously filed herewith.

I. Factual Background

On March 16, 2012, Plaintiff filed the Complaint. In the Complaint, Plaintiff alleges, inter alia, that Defendants negligently performed cosmetic surgery upon, and negligently provided post-operative care to, Krystal Ballard, causing her death on July 26, 2010. (Compl. ¶¶ 18-20.)

On June 6, 2012, Plaintiff served on Defendants' counsel his First Set of Interrogatories, Requests for Production of Documents and Requests for Admission (attached to Affidavit of Counsel at Exhibit A).

On June 29, 2012, Defendants responded to Plaintiff's interrogatories with a single sentence objection: "Defendants object to the Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories on the grounds that the number of interrogatories, including sub-parts of interrogatories[,] exceed the number of interrogatories allowed by [Rule 33(a)(3) of the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure]." (Defs.' Obj. to Pl.'s First Set of Interrogs. 1 (attached to Affidavit of Counsel at Exhibit B).) Defendants provided no explanation for, nor asked to speak to Plaintiff's counsel about, their objection.

On July 6, 2012, Plaintiff's counsel sent a letter via facsimile to Defendants' counsel (attached to Affidavit of Counsel at Exhibit C), and requested a written explanation as to why Defendants believed Plaintiff's twenty-three interrogatories exceeded the forty interrogatory limit. In an attempt to avoid the Court's involvement, Plaintiff's counsel also requested a phone call with Defendants' counsel to follow Defendants' written response.

On July 16, 2012, an assistant from Defendants' counsel's office telephoned Plaintiff's counsel to advise that Defendants' counsel would be unavailable until the latter part of the month. On July 25, 2012, having received no written, legal basis for Defendants' objection, Plaintiff's counsel sent another letter by facsimile (attached to Affidavit of Counsel at Exhibit D), which again requested a written justification for Defendants' objection to Plaintiff's interrogatories. The next day, Defendants' counsel faxed a letter (attached to Affidavit of Counsel at Exhibit E), which sets forth an extraordinarily narrow reading of Rule 33(a)(3) with respect to counting interrogatories. For example, according to Defendants, Plaintiff's Interrogatory No. 1, which seeks the identity of the person providing answers, including that person's date of birth and addresses for the past five years, must be counted as three interrogatories. Likewise, Defendants assert that Plaintiff's Interrogatory No. 6, which calls upon Defendant Kerr to state with specificity the education, training, and experience that qualified him to perform the cosmetic procedure at issue, must be counted as three interrogatories. Defendants further assert that the total of all subparts to a particular interrogatory must be multiplied by the number of individuals called upon to respond to same. Defendants apply this reasoning to Plaintiff's Interrogatory Nos. 2, 3, 8, 10, 11, 16, 19, 20, and 23.

By letter dated, and sent by facsimile to Defendants' counsel, on August 6, 2012 (attached to Affidavit of Counsel at Exhibit F), Plaintiff's counsel, having applied Defendants' method of computation to each and every one of Plaintiff's interrogatories, limited the scope of particular interrogatories, expressly assigned particular interrogatories to specific Defendants, and withdrew some interrogatories entirely. Using Defendants' narrow (and incorrect) construction of Rule 33, Plaintiff propounded thirty-six interrogatories upon Defendant Kerr and thirty-nine interrogatories upon the Silk Touch Defendants.

Three days later, on August 9, 2012, Defendants' counsel faxed a response letter (attached to Affidavit of Counsel at Exhibit G) to Plaintiff's counsel. By this letter, Defendants' counsel expressed incredulity regarding Plaintiff's counsel's application of Defendants' counsel's methodology to address Defendants' objection and resolve the discovery dispute.

Defendants have not answered any of Plaintiff's interrogatories. Accordingly, Plaintiff now has no alternative but to ask the Court to compel full, good-faith responses to Plaintiff's interrogatories.

II. Argument

Rule 33(a)(3) provides as follows:

> No party shall serve upon any other single party to an action more than forty (40) interrogatories, in which subparts of interrogatories shall count as separate interrogatories, without first obtaining a stipulation of such party to additional interrogatories or obtaining an order of the court upon a showing of good cause granting leave to serve a specific number of additional interrogatories.

Idaho R. Civ. P. 33(a)(3). Though the Court has much discretion in addressing the scope of interrogatories in the face of objections, it is well-established that "[Rule 33] should be accorded a liberal interpretation" in effectuating its purpose: "to afford parties information regarding facts involved in the issues in suit to enable the proposing party to prepare for trial and to reduce the possibility of surprise in the trial." Smith v. Big Lost River Irr. Dist., 83 Idaho 374, 383, 364 P.2d 146, 151 (1961).

And while liberal interpretation of discovery rules is certainly justified, this in no way precludes application of common sense. While addressing a similar discovery dispute, the Montana Supreme Court found that "[w]hile [Rule 33(a) of the Montana Rules of Civil Procedure] does not define the term 'subpart,' common sense dictates that one sentence containing three clauses does not constitute three separate interrogatories." Richardson v. Montana, 331 Mont. 231, 243, 130 P.3d 634, 644 (2006). This is especially true when subparts are drafted to elicit information pertaining to a common theme. Charles A. Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure, § 2168.1 (3d ed. 2002) ("Subparts directed at eliciting details concerning a common theme should be considered a single question."); Swackhammer v. Sprint Corp. PCS, 225 F.R.D. 658, 664-665 (D. Kan. 2004) (finding that subparts relating to a common theme are not separate interrogatories). For this reason, "recipients of interrogatories are not entitled to object based on a selective count of the various clauses contained in the requests." Richardson, 331 Mont. at 233-234, 130 P.3d at 644.

Plaintiff filed this action in March. He propounded discovery requests upon Defendants on June 6, 2012. On August 6, 2012, Plaintiff, in great deference to Defendants' interpretation of Rule 33, made a good faith effort to resolve the dispute and to preclude the Court's involvement. Plaintiff's efforts have been met only with recalcitrance. Therefore, in an effort to move this case more efficiently toward disposition, Plaintiff asks the Court to compel Defendants to fully and completely answer his interrogatories. Pursuant to Rule 37(a)(4) of the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure, Plaintiff also seeks reasonable expenses incurred in obtaining the order, including attorney's fees.

AFFIDAVIT OF COUNSEL FOR THE DEFENDANTS AND CERTIFICATION PER RULE 37(a)(2), I.R.C.P.

STATE OF IDAHO)
: ss.
County of Ada)

I, Jeremiah A. Quane, having been first duly sworn upon oath, deposes and says:

W

1. I am the attorney of record for Defendants in the above-captioned action, and the following statements are made of my own personal knowledge and are true and correct.

2. Attached hereto, marked Exhibit A, is a true and correct copy of a letter from counsel for the Plaintiff dated August 6, 2012.

3. Attached hereto, marked Exhibit B, is a true and correct copy of a letter from counsel for the Defendants dated August 9, 2012.

4. Attached hereto, marked Exhibit C, is a true and correct copy of a letter from counsel for the Defendants dated August 29, 2012.

5. Attached hereto, marked Exhibit D, is a true and correct copy of a letter from counsel for the Defendants dated July 26, 2012.

6. Exhibits D, B and C were sent to counsel for the Plaintiff via facsimile on the respective dates of each letter.

7. Counsel for the Plaintiff has never responded to Exhibits B and C by any means or in any form.

8. Notwithstanding Exhibits B and C, counsel for the Plaintiff filed the Motion to Compel Defendants' answers to Plaintiff's first set of interrogatories.

9. Although not required by Rule 37(a)(2), I.R.C.P, counsel for the Defendants has in good faith conferred and attempted to confer with Plaintiff's counsel in an effort to resolve the issues regarding answers to Plaintiff's interrogatories without court action, as set forth in Exhibits B and C.

10. The failure of Plaintiff's counsel to respond to Exhibits B and C, but instead filing the motion to compel answers to interrogatories, does not constitute a good-faith attempt to resolve or arrive at a mutually agreeable means of providing answers to interrogatories so as to avoid court action.

11. Taking into account Exhibits A, B, D and C in combination, it is Affiant's opinion and position that the discovery dispute between the parties can and should be resolved without court intervention on Plaintiff's motion to compel answers to interrogatories.

12. Although the affidavit of Plaintiff's counsel, Mr. Haddad, in paragraph 10 states that Plaintiff has in good faith conferred or attempted to confer with the Defendants in an effort to secure Defendants' answers to Plaintiff's interrogatories without court action, this statement is not supported by the content of Exhibits A, B and C and in particular the fact that Mr. Haddad has never responded to Exhibits B and C, which are an effort on the part of defense counsel to resolve the dispute and avoid court action.

13. It is the position of defense counsel that the affidavit of Mr. Haddad is not a valid certification under Rule 37(a)(2), I.R.C.P., which provides that the motion to compel answers to interrogatories must include a certification.

14. It is the position of defense counsel that without a valid certification by Mr. Haddad, the Plaintiff's motion to compel answers to the interrogatories is not subject to adjudication by the Court.

15. It is the position and opinion of defense counsel that Plaintiff's interrogatories, addressed separately to each of the four Defendants in the case, exceed the number of interrogatories allowed by Rule 33(a)(3), I.R.C.P. and that Plaintiff's counsel did not obtain a stipulation from defense counsel or an order of the Court to serve a specific number of additional interrogatories.

Dear Mr. Quane,

I am in receipt of your letter faxed to me July 26, 2012 and thank you for your response. While undoubtedly given the tenor of your letter we will be at loggerheads with respect to reaching a resolution concerning the objections made based on what you perceive to be an excessive number of interrogatories, I nonetheless think it best to try to resolve these issues short of court intervention. If not, then I want to be able to represent to the Court that every effort has been made to resolve this dispute.

First, Rule 33 of the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure indicate that "no party shall serve upon any other single party to any action, more than forty (40) interrogatories, in which subparts of interrogatories shall count as separate interrogatories..." As you can see from the interrogatories, they were directed both to Silk Touch as well as Dr. Kerr individually. Because your "math" and mine may differ, I will identify which interrogatories are directed at Dr. Kerr and which at Silk Touch so I can place your mind at ease with respect to the number of interrogatories we served on your respective clients. I will also withdraw certain interrogatories as indicated below. This is being done solely to avoid the need to waste the Court's time on a discovery dispute, not that I believe your objection is valid. Further, while we disagree as to how you have calculated the number of interrogatories, we are calculating the number based on your math only as a means of resolving this dispute without court intervention.

We would request that you provide an answer as to the person or persons responding to these interrogatories and requests. You need not provide dates of birth or addresses for these individuals. This would account for arguably no more than 1 interrogatory to each of your clients based on your "math."

Interrogatory No 2

Interrogatory No. 2 is directed to both Dr. Kerr individually as well as Silk Touch. We withdraw the reason for leaving employment and salary/wage information. This would amount to three interrogatories directed at Dr. Kerr and three interrogatories directed at Silk Touch Spa based upon your "math."

Interrogatory No. 3

This interrogatory would be directed at each of your clients. Assuming your math is correct, this would involve six interrogatories.

Interrogatory No. 4

Interrogatory No. 4 is directed to both of your clients and it is a single interrogatory to each.

Interrogatory No. 5

This interrogatory is directed to Silk Touch and is a single interrogatory. Attempting to suggest that producing information regarding manufacturer, model and serial number would be separate interrogatories is absurd.

Interrogatory No. 6

This is both an interrogatory and request for production. As for the interrogatory, Dr. Kerr can speak to his education, training and experience and it is a single interrogatory. I have never had it suggested that education, training and experience are three separate and distinct as those terms are used interchangeably, and are typically reflected in a CV.

Interrogatory No. 7

This is a single interrogatory directed at Dr. Kerr.

Interrogatory No. 8

Withdraw the interrogatory.

Interrogatory No. 9

This is a single interrogatory directed at Silk Touch.

Interrogatory No. 10

According to your math, this would be four interrogatories directed at Dr. Kerr.

Interrogatory No. 11

This interrogatory would be five interrogatories directed at each of your clients, according to your math.

Interrogatory No. 12

This is a single interrogatory directed at Dr. Kerr.

Interrogatory No. 13

This would be arguably, pursuant to your math, two interrogatories directed at Silk Touch since it requests names and addresses.

Interrogatory No. 14

We will withdraw Interrogatory No. 14 as it would be encompassed by Interrogatory No. 13.

Interrogatory No. 15

This encompasses both an interrogatory and request for production. As to the interrogatory, it is a single interrogatory directed at Silk Touch.

Interrogatory No. 16

I think you would be hard-pressed to argue that trying to account for all communications would be more than a single interrogatory even though you have to identify the manner in which you communicated. This is directed at Dr. Kerr.

Interrogatory No. 17

This would be two interrogatories directed at both Dr. Kerr and Silk Touch based on your math. One asking who was in the room and the second who made contact or inserted any instruments during the procedure.

Interrogatory No. 18

Interrogatory No. 18 is directed exclusively to Silk Touch and is a single interrogatory.

Interrogatory No. 19

This would be exclusively directed at Silk Touch and it has five subparts basically asking for information concerning inspections. According to your math, this would be five interrogatories directed at Silk Touch.

Interrogatory No. 20

Interrogatory No. 20 is directed to both Dr. Kerr and Silk Touch, and your math would have it at two interrogatories.

Interrogatory No. 21

Interrogatory No. 21 is essentially asking for what is on a Dec sheet and would be directed at both of your clients. Not even for sake of argument would I consider that to be separate interrogatories, but rather one toward each.

Interrogatory No. 22

Interrogatory No. 22 is directed at Silk Touch and Dr. Kerr and would be two interrogatories to each, one how they sterilized themselves and second, how they sterilized equipment.

Interrogatory No. 23

This interrogatory would be directed to both your clients and it would be five interrogatories according to your math.

Having totaled this out, I account for 39 interrogatories directed at Silk Touch and 36 interrogatories directed at Dr. Kerr. Hopefully, we can agree to move this along rather than delaying discovery. Please respond to whether you will agree to respond to the discovery requests based on the modifications and clarifications set forth in this letter by Friday, August 10, 2012. Otherwise, we will move the court to compel responses.

In any event, irrespective of our ability to work out our differences as to these discovery requests, we would request dates on which Dr. Kerr can be deposed. While the deposition may not occur until late August or early September, I would like to have some dates within the next two weeks to consider.

Thank you for your attention to this matter. If we do not hear from you, we will assume you continue to take issue and stand by your objections. We will then file a motion to compel.

Sincerely,

P. Gregory Haddad

Re: Ballard v. Kerr
Our File No. 1107/25-938

Dear Mr. Haddad:

Your interrogatories are addressed separately to four Defendants being Dr. Kerr, Silk Touch Laser, LLP, Silk Touch MedSpa and Laser Center, and Silk Touch MedSpa, Laser, and Lipo of Boise and each Defendant is requested to answer the full set of the interrogatories. The format, style and description of the interrogatories does not separate or identify which of the interrogatories any one Defendant is requested to answer. Section Q, page 5, of the interrogatories states "you and/or "yours" means Dr. Kerr, Silk Touch Laser, LLP, Silk Touch MedSpa and Laser Center, and Silk Touch MedSpa, Laser, and Lipo of Boise. I fail to understand your logic and contention in your letter of August 6 that some of the interrogatories are directed only to a particular Defendant, such as your reference to numbers 5, 7, 9, 12, 13, 15, 18 and 19. You then go on to state that you account for 39 interrogatories directed at Silk Touch Laser, LLP and 36 interrogatories directed at Dr. Kerr. Your statements are simply not in conformity with the style, description and format of the interrogatories.

It is impossible to figure out which of the interrogatories are directed to whom, despite the explanation in your letter. There is no reason not to send separate sets of interrogatories directed to a particular Defendant. If we end up in Court over this, we should and must have a clear and concise record for the Judge to assess and your letter of August 6 does not fulfill this need. I need interrogatories directed to a particular

Defendant instead of the method you have employed. As a solution, I strongly recommend you do this and we can then go forward and hopefully agree.

You again, in your letter of August 6, impose an arbitrary, unilateral deadline of August 10 for me to respond, without knowing if I am alive or in China. This is not the way things are done in Boise, even if you do it this way in West Virginia. You also threaten to move the Court to compel responses if I do not respond by August 10. Again, you do not take into account my availability to respond by August 10, but nevertheless, I am responding before August 10. Threats get you nothing.

You have asked for dates for the deposition of Dr. Kerr within the next two weeks of your letter with the suggestion that the deposition may not occur until late August or early September. I take it from this that you want dates in this time frame. Here again, you unilaterally impose a time frame for the deposition, which is very narrow in scope. I will tell you that my business makes it impossible to have the deposition in August and early September, much less the availability of Dr. Kerr. With this in mind, I will get you dates for our availability, but I am putting you on notice that they will not be in the time frame you demand. At the best, I am looking at October because I am booked solid in most of September, especially the later half.

Very truly yours,

Re: Ballard v. Kerr
Our File No. 1107/25-938

Dear Mr. Haddad:

I am disappointed that you did not respond to my letter of August 9 (Exhibit G to your affidavit), but instead filed your motion to compel answers to your interrogatories and scheduled the hearing on the motion September 12. Before I go on in this letter, I want you to know that I have a deposition scheduled September 12 that makes it impossible for me to attend the hearing on September 12, and this deposition has been scheduled for over one month of my client in an Ada County case. I was not contacted to see if I was available on the 12th and if this date remains, I will not be able to attend the hearing. I leave this to you.

I do not believe we have exhausted our negotiations toward a resolution of our differences, based on your letter of August 6 and my letter of August 9, which I think we are obligated to do, in lieu of your motion to compel. To reiterate, your First Set of Interrogatories are directed, in their entirety to each Defendant in the case (four) and according to the style and format of the interrogatories, each Defendant is required to answer the full set of the interrogatories. I addressed this point in my letter of August 9, in which I stated that the interrogatories do not separate or identify which of the interrogatories any one Defendant is requested to answer. Your letter of August 6 contains several matters that appear to be conducive of the possible resolution of our respective positions, as does my letter of August 9. In your letter of August 6, you withdrew some of the interrogatories and specify that Interrogatory Nos. 5, 9, 13, 15, 18 and 19 are directed only to Silk Touch and that by my math, there are 39 interrogatories directed at Silk Touch and 36 directed at Dr. Kerr. You then go on to say that you would like my response and agreement to answer the interrogatories based on the modifications and clarifications set forth in your letter of August 6. In my letter to you of August 9, in response to your letter of August 6, I proposed what I believe to be a suitable and reasonable way to resolve our differences, so as to conform to to the points you set forth in your letter of August 6, by suggesting that you submit separate sets of interrogatories to a particular Defendant. If you would do this, along the lines described in your letter of August 6, it is likely that we can agree and avoid court intervention, which is not too late to do. From my perspective, the problem is that your interrogatories are still the interrogatories in dispute, despite your letter of August 6. Your letter of August 6 does not change the existing interrogatories, such as the withdrawal of some and the specification of those that are directed to Dr. Kerr and Silk Touch. To me, this would be an easy and uncomplicated task on your part and it would rectify and resolve our differences. You would by this means, simply incorporate the points set forth in your letter of August 6 in the form of substitute interrogatories addressed to Dr. Kerr and Silk Touch, with the deletion of the interrogatories you withdraw in your letter of August 6. I assume your motion to compel is a flat rejection of this proposal on my part and the reason why I am disappointed by your not responding to my letter of August 9. My proposal is not to be considered a retreat from my objection to your interrogatories, but made in the spirit of compromise and to avoid a court hearing, which I am sure the Judge would like to avoid.

Dr. Kerr is available to be deposed in my office at 1:30 p.m. on October 10 through 12 and October 23 through 26. Would you please select one of these dates, if any of them are available to you, as soon as possible in order for Dr. Kerr to make his arrangements?

Very truly yours,

Jeremiah A. Quane

Re: Ballard v. Kerr
Our File No. 1107/25-938

Dear Mr. Haddad:

This is the first opportunity I have had to respond to your letter of July 6 due to my commitments in cases in eastern Idaho, although my assistant telephoned your office July 16 and informed the person who answered the phone that I was unavailable until today or yesterday.

I would like to offer you my comments regarding your letter of July 6. I understand the position you have taken in regard to my objections to the interrogatories on the grounds that they exceed the number allowed by our rule of civil procedure. My objection to the interrogatories stated the grounds and this is all that is required for such an objection. In your letter, you state that I have not even made a half-hearted attempt to formulate a meritorious objection. Since your letter states your position on the number of interrogatories, your statement in the letter has no bearing upon the issue and it makes no difference what you assume I did or did not do in formulating the objections. In fact, your statement is false and you had no basis to even make such a statement. I consider this to be an irrelevant comment that is meant to be derogatory of me.

In your letter, you arbitrarily and unilaterally give me seven days to provide a detailed basis for my objections and if I do not respond within seven days, you will file a motion to compel. This deadline does not take into consideration my availability to respond and, of course, it is made irrespective of my availability. Most experienced lawyers would have stated that they would like to have my response as soon as I am available to give a response. Since this is apparently your policy, there will be in, all likelihood, situations in this case where I will be forced to adhere to your policy, such as the scheduling of matters and court appearances.

I have another specific instance where you and your local counsel arbitrarily selected July 31 for the date for the subpoena of records of Sprint Nextel Corporate Security. The subpoena I received specifies July 31, office of your local counsel, but a time is not listed, even though the form of the subpoena calls for a place, date and time. No one contacted me to see if I was available and I am not, which is not the way things are done in Boise. Because this seems to be the way you and local counsel practice, I will take the liberty of scheduling matters, including the deposition of your client on a date, time and place I choose, without obtaining your availability.

Your letter of July 25 also demands my reaction. In that letter, you state that there are attorneys whose litigation strategy is to delay the litigation process through meritless objections, although you say you are willing to give everyone the benefit of the doubt. This statement has no bearing whatsoever on the objections I have asserted and your position on the objections. I fail to understand why you included this statement unless it was meant to disparage me.

In your letter of July 25 you also arbitrarily set a deadline of July 27. I will not be in my office July 27 because I must travel to another city on business. It is not the custom in Boise to impose such unilateral and arbitrary deadlines, which give no difference to the opposing attorney's availability.

I would also like to state that threats from an attorney serve no purpose or worthwhile function. You have stated your position on the number of interrogatories, which is fine, but the threats you assert are irrelevant and do not serve as a means of reaching an agreement on answering the interrogatories. In fact, they have the opposite effect.

Rule 33(a)(3), I.R.C.P. reads in relevant part:

> "No party shall serve upon any other single party to an action more than forty (40) interrogatories, in which sub-parts of interrogatories shall count as separate interrogatories. . .".

The key to the interpretation of this Rule is whether the other parts of the interrogatory, in addition to the primary interrogatory require answers on specific issues that are designated. Looking at Interrogatory No. 1, it asks for the identity of the person or persons responding to these Interrogatories and Requests. This is one Interrogatory if only Dr. Kerr is identified. The other parts of the Interrogatory specify two distinct and separate subjects that are in addition to the identity of Dr. Kerr, namely their date(s) of birth and addresses for the past five years. These two parts require answers for each that are different from each other and are not embodied in the identity of Dr. Kerr. As respects Dr. Kerr, this constitutes three interrogatories. If more than Dr. Kerr is identified in responding to the interrogatories, such as one person, this is three more interrogatories, or a total of six. If there are three people who responded to the Interrogatory in addition to Dr. Kerr, this is nine more interrogatories.

The same analysis of Interrogatory No. 2 applies, although No. 2 is far more extensive than No. 1. The Interrogatory asks for the employment history for the last ten years of Dr. Kerr and any agent, servant, or employee who had any interaction or communication with Krystal Ballard. In addition to this, there are six specific questions to answer, each of which require separate answers that are different and distinct for one another. They are: 1) employer name; 2) job title; 3) job duties, 4) dates of employment; 5) reason for leaving employment; and 6) salary or wages for each employment. This is a total of six separate interrogatories for Dr. Kerr. Add to this other agents and employees of Dr. Kerr who had any interaction or communication with Krystal Ballard, and the number of interrogatories is increased dramatically by a multiplication of six for each employee or agent.

Interrogatory No. 3 contains five separate subjects that require answers and each of them is distinct and separate from the others.

Interrogatory No. 8 is actually two separate interrogatories, despite the fact that they are designated as Interrogatory No. 8.

Interrogatory No. 10 contains three separate subjects or categories to answer, each of which are distinct and different from one another.

Interrogatory No. 11 refers to Dr. Kerr a nd the agents, servants and employees of Silk Touch Laser. It then has four separate subjects that require answers by Dr. Kerr and the employees of Silk Touch Laser.

Interrogatory No. 16 specifies four specific subjects or categories that require answers, each of which are different from the others, despite the fact that the Interrogatory is directed to Dr. Kerr and Krystal Ballard and Charles Ballard.

Interrogatory No. 19 applies to Dr. Kerr, Silk Touch Laser and/or any employee of either which involves separate answers for each. In addition to this, the Interrogatory specifies six subjects that require answers by each person and entity to whom the Interrogatory is directed. Each subject is different from the others.

Interrogatory No. 20 is actually two separate interrogatories, even though they are listed as one interrogatory. The Interrogatory asks the identity of each witness and for each witness a brief summary of their expected trial testimony.

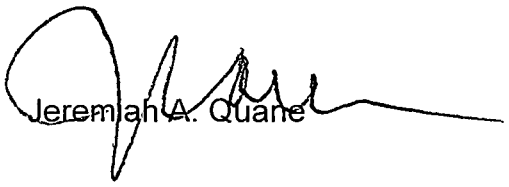
Interrogatory No. 23 is directed to Dr. Kerr, and agents, servants and employees of Silk Touch Laser. It then designates four separate categories that require answers, each of which are distinct and different from the others.

Several of the interrogatories request the production of documents, data and tangible items. Rule 33 for interrogatories does not require or pertain to the production of such material.

When I prepared the objections to the interrogatories, I conducted an analysis of each one in the fashion and way I have set forth in this letter. I did not, as you put it, even made a half-hearted attempt to formulate a meritorious objection. In my opinion, my chances of prevailing on my objections are at the least equal to your chances of prevailing on your position. Even so, I think we must make every effort to reach an accord.

According to our Rules, if you file a motion to compel answers, you must certify that you have tried to resolve our dispute without court action. Your letter of July 6 simply provides that you are right and I am wrong and that the court will compel answers to the interrogatories. For a starting point on our efforts to reconcile our differences, I suggest that you submit a revised set of interrogatories that come close to meeting the Rule on 40 interrogatories, which I can then consider and hopefully agree to answer, even if they slightly exceed 40 in number. I think that our Rules and practices require you to give some respect or recognition to my position as well as yours, and in an effort to reach an agreement. Your position that I am wrong and you are right is not compatible with this requirement and practice.

Very truly yours,



Jeremiah A. Quane

IN THE DISTRICT COURT OF THE FOURTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF THE STATE OF IDAHO, IN AND

CHARLES BALLARD,

Plaintiff,

vs.

BRIAN CALDER KERR, M.D., SILK TOUCH LASER, LLP, an Idaho limited liability partnership; and SILK TOUCH LASER, LLP, an Idaho limited liability partnership, dba SILK TOUCH MED SPA and/or SILK TOUCH MED SPA AND LASER CENTER, and/or SILK TOUCH MED SPA, LASER AND LIPO OF BOISE, Defendants.

Case No. CV OC 1204792

DEFENDANTS' LEGAL MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO COMPEL DEFENDANTS' ANSWERS TO PLAINTIFF'S FIRST SET OF INTERROGATORIES AND PROPOSAL

This matter is before the Court on Plaintiff's Motion to Compel Defendants' Answers to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories, supported by Plaintiff's memorandum of law and the affidavit, with exhibits, of Plaintiff's counsel Philip Haddad and opposed by this Legal Memorandum and Proposal and the Affidavit of Counsel for the Defendants, Jeremiah A. Quane, with exhibits. Defendants' position is threefold:

1. The Interrogatories exceed the number allowed by Rule 33(a)(3), I.R.C.P.

2. Plaintiff's Motion does not include a valid certification as required by Rule 37(a)(2), I.R.C.P., and is therefor not subject to an adjudication by the court.

3. The refusal or failure of counsel for the Plaintiff to continue negotiations that are reflected in Exhibits A, B, and C to the Affidavit of Jeremiah A. Quane, which in all likelihood, would resolve the issues regarding Answers to Interrogatories and render Plaintiff's Motion moot.

I.
PROPOSAL

The Plaintiff's Interrogatories are directed separately in their entirety to Dr. Kerr, Silk Touch Laser, L.L.P., and two other entity Defendants, and each Defendant is requested to answer the full set of the Interrogatories. The style, format and description of the Interrogatories do not separate or identify which of the Interrogatories any one Defendant is asked to answer, i.e., every Interrogatory must be answered in full by each Defendant, irrespective of the answers provided by any other Defendant. This point was discussed in Exhibits B and C to the Affidavit of Jeremiah A. Quane. Exhibit A to the Affidavit of Jeremiah A. Quane sets forth the Plaintiffs' response to Exhibit D of the Affidavit of Jeremiah A. Quane, and contains several modifications and changes to Plaintiff's Interrogatories, as follows:

1. Complete withdrawal of Interrogatory numbers 8 and 14.

2. Withdrawal of portions of Interrogatory numbers 1 and 2.

3. The designation of Interrogatories to both Dr. Kerr and Silk Touch, being numbers 1, 2, 3, 4, 11, 17, 20, 21, 22, and 23.

4. The designation of Interrogatories to only Dr. Kerr, being numbers 6, 7, 10, 12, and 16.

5. The designation of Interrogatories to only Silk Touch, being numbers 5, 9, 13, 15, 18, and 19.

Exhibits B and C to the Affidavit of Jeremiah A. Quane set forth solutions and approaches to the dispute that embrace and incorporate the foregoing matters as expressed in Exhibit A to the Affidavit of Jeremiah A. Quane. The solutions and approaches simply ask that the Plaintiff serve substitute separate sets of Interrogatories to a particular Defendant that conform to the matters outlined in Exhibit A to the Affidavit of Jeremiah A. Quane. If this was to be done, the discovery dispute would be resolved without the need for a Court hearing on the Motion to Compel and doing so by Plaintiff's counsel would be an easy and uncomplicated undertaking. It is the position and request of defense counsel that the Court enter an Order for the Plaintiff's submission of substitute Interrogatories as set forth above as a means of facilitating the resolution of this discovery dispute. If the Court will do this, there will be no reason for the Court to decide the issue on the number of Interrogatories, and the issue on the adequacy of the certification of Plaintiff's counsel required by Rule 37(a)(2), I.R.C.P. This proposal by defense counsel is made in the spirit of compromise and to avoid a Court hearing on Plaintiff's Motion to Compel.

II.
CALCULATION OF THE NUMBER OF INTERROGATORIES PER RULE 33(A)(3), I.R.C.P.

The Rule provides in part that "no party shall serve upon any other single party to an action more than forty (40) interrogatories, in which sub-parts of interrogatories shall count as separate interrogatories." There must be a reason why the Rule mandates that sub-parts of interrogatories shall count as separate interrogatories. The Plaintiff's Interrogatories do not specify sub-parts specifically, but not doing so does not exclude the existence of sub-parts. The Plaintiff's Legal Memorandum is replete with references to a common theme and therefor sub-parts concerning a common theme are considered a single question or interrogatory. If this is the case, the limitation on the number of interrogatories per Rule 33(a)(3) could and would be rendered nugatory and inapplicable. A simple and analogous scenario could be devised for an interrogatory that in effect would nullify the limitation of Rule 33(a)(3), such as an interrogatory that specifies the common theme "did you witness the motor vehicle accident between A and B, and if you did, set forth and describe facts and events that are specifically specified in the interrogatory." By this means, an unlimited number of parts associated with the common theme could be used in the interrogatory and void the limitations of Rule 33(a)(3). In looking at Plaintiff's Interrogatory No. 11, this situation is exemplified. This Interrogatory contains four parts consisting of a list of date and each training, the individuals who attended each training, the person and/or entity which provided the training, and a description of the matters discussed during the training. These are sub-parts that require different and separate answers by Dr. Kerr and Silk Touch Laser.

A sub-part by definition must relate to some other aspect or provision of an interrogatory, otherwise that term would not have been used in Rule 33(a)(3). A key to the interpretation of Rule 33(a)(3), in which sub-parts of interrogatories shall count as separate interrogatories, is whether the other parts of the interrogatory, in addition to the primary or initial part of the interrogatory, require answers on specific issues or matters that are designated and Plaintiff's Interrogatory numbers 1, 2, 3, 9, 10, 11, 14, 15, 16, 17, 19, 20, and 23 do just this. Interrogatory number 8 is actually two separate Interrogatories that are denoted as one Interrogatory. To the best of undersigned counsel's knowledge, there are no Idaho Supreme Court decisions that define sub-part or the meaning of sub-parts as that term is used in Rule 33(a)(3). The same is true as respects Idaho Court of Appeals decisions.

Plaintiff cites to the Idaho case, Smith v. Big Lost River Irr. Dist., 83 Idaho 374, 383, 364 P.2d 146, 151 (1961). Smith, it should be noted, was a case which preceded the current rule, 33 (a)(3). The Smith Court makes no mention of how the number of interrogatories, or sub-parts, is to be calculated. In fact, Smith, relies in part on a federal case in which the trial court was sustained on its ruling that a party was not obligated to answer certain interrogatives. See Newall v. Phillips Petroleum Co., 144 F.2d 338, 1944 U.S. App LEXIS 4268 *8. There, the Plaintiffs had served 352 discovery requests. The 10th Circuit Affirmed the trial court's decision to sustain the objections to the requests, which the Court found onerous and cumulative.

It was these very abuses of the discovery process that led the federal courts to limit the number of interrogatories in 1993. The Federal Rules Advisory Committee noted "Experience in over half of the district courts has confirmed that limitations on the number of interrogatories are useful and manageable." Charles A Wright et al., Federal Practice and Procedure, p.213.

When making its rule change, though, the federal rule, as well as the Montana state rule (see below), were changed to read that the number of interrogatives which may be served should include "discrete sub-parts," only, in the count. See F.R.C.P. 33(a)(1) and Mont.R.Civ.P 33.

The following cases are pertinent on the subject of counting sub-parts. Valdez v. Ford Motor Co., 134 F.R.D. 296, 298 (D. Nev. 1991) (holding that local rule limiting interrogatories to "40 including subparts" "requires that every part of an interrogatory be counted and subject to the limitation of 40 . . . even when a subpart relates to the main interrogatory."). In Aetna Casualty and Surety Co. v. W.W. Grainger, Inc., 170 F.R.D. 454, 454 (E.D. Wis 1997), the court rejected the contention that subparts need not be counted if they are a logical extension of or directly related to a basic interrogatory. The use of the word "discrete" gets at the heart of the distinction in the cases cited by Plaintiff and to the heart of the matter at bar. Idaho's rule, pointedly, unlike the federal rule does not use the term "discrete subparts." Montana's rule does. Thus, when Plaintiff cites to a Montana Supreme Court case for support, the support is misplaced. See Richardson v. Montana, 130 P.3d 243 (Mont. 2006). There, the Court distinguish the various "clauses" contained within the questions posed by the State from "sub-parts" Id., 130 P.3d at 244. Idaho's Rules' drafters have made a clear choice of the approach set out in Aetna and Valdez. Subparts, not discrete subparts, are to be counted as individual interrogatories. To find otherwise would make the Idaho rule meaningless. Plaintiffs could, as they have done here, pick a theme, and then ask numerous questions relating to that theme, and call it one interrogatory.

III.
CERTIFICATION REQUIRED BY RULE 37(a)(2), I.R.C.P.

The Plaintiff's Motion to Compel must include a certification that the Plaintiff has in good faith conferred or attempted to confer with defense counsel in an effort to secure the resolution of the discovery dispute without court action. Rule 37(a)(2), I.R.C.P. In the absence of a valid and accurate certification, the Plaintiff's Motion to Compel is not ripe for a decision of the Court.

The Affidavit of Jeremiah A. Quane sets forth the facts and events that support the conclusion that there is not an adequate certification as required by Rule 37(a)(2), primarily because Plaintiffs' counsel has not seen fit to respond to Exhibits B and C, which constitute, in effect, a departure from good faith efforts to resolve the dispute. Since Plaintiff's counsel has not provided a reason or explanation in regard to the proposals contained in Exhibits B and C, it is clear that he no longer wants to continue with negotiation or efforts to reach an agreement, despite his comments in Exhibit A that read "Having totaled this out, I account for 39 Interrogatories directed at Silk Touch and 36 Interrogatories directed at Dr. Kerr. Hopefully, we can agree to move this along rather than delaying discovery. Please respond to whether you will agree to respond to the discovery requests based on the modifications and clarifications set forth in this letter by Friday, August 10, 2012. Otherwise we will move the Court to compel responses." Exhibit B, dated August 9, 2012 and Exhibit C, dated August 29, 2012 are defense counsel's responses. They essentially specify agreement to Exhibit A, subject to the condition that separate sets of Interrogatories be submitted to Dr. Kerr and Silk Touch that delete the Interrogatories withdrawn in Exhibit A. Exhibits B and C also describe the reasons for the proposal of separate Interrogatories to Dr. Kerr and Silk Touch. It is indeed puzzling and difficult to understand why Plaintiff's counsel has not responded to the proposals in Exhibits B and C which fact is not conducive of reaching a solution of the parties' differences.

IV.
CONCLUSION

The Defendants respectfully urge the Court to enter an Order for the Plaintiff's submission of substitute Interrogatories, an Order denying the Plaintiff's Motion to Compel Answers to Interrogatories, and an award of costs and attorney fees to the Defendants for opposing Plaintiff's Motion to Compel.

Case No. CV OC 1204792

OBJECTIONS TO PLAINTIFF'S PROPOSED ORDER ON PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO COMPEL DEFENDANTS' ANSWERS TO PLAINTIFF'S FIRST SET OF INTERROGATORIES AND PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM FOR EXPENSES AND ATTORNEY FEES

I.
OBJECTIONS TO THE PROPOSED ORDER

Plaintiff's Motion to Compel was based entirely and exclusively on the Defendants' objection to Plaintiff's Interrogatories on the grounds that the number of Interrogatories, including sub-parts, exceed the number of Interrogatories allowed by Rule 33(a)(3), I.R.C.P.

Plaintiff's Memorandum in Support of the Motion to Compel was directed at the Defendant's objection that the number of Interrogatories exceed the number allowed by Rule 33(a)(3). The Defendants' Opposing Legal Memorandum section on calculation of the number of interrogatories per Rule 33(a)(3) addressed the same issue. The other two sections of Defendants' Legal Memorandum comprised a proposal and the certification of Plaintiff's counsel per Rule 37(a)(2), I.R.C.P.

Oral argument on the Plaintiff's Motion to Compel was basically directed at the issue framed by the Plaintiff's Motion and the Defendants' objection. Plaintiff's Motion, supporting Memorandum, and Defendants' Legal Memorandum in Opposition did not pertain to or involve any issue regarding Defendants' right to assert objections to specific interrogatories in the event the Court should grant the Plaintiffs' Motion and overrule the Defendant's objection. Plaintiff's proposed Order contains the provision that Defendants are ordered to answer the Interrogatories without objection. The without objection part of the Order was not present to the Court for adjudication, if this part means the right of the Defendants to assert objections to specific interrogatories when the Defendants provide answers to the interrogatories. When the Defendants provide their answers to the interrogatories and if objections are asserted to any specific interrogatory, the validity or invalidity of any objection will be ripe for adjudication by the Court at that time.

The proposed Order also contains the provision that the Defendants answer the Interrogatories within 14 days of the hearing. At the hearing, the Court said that the Defendants will answer the Interrogatories within 14 days, but the Court did not say when the 14 day period would start to run. Absent this, the Order should state when the 14 day period begins, taking into account Rule 6(a), I.R.C.P. that provides in part: "In computing any period of time prescribed or allowed by . . . order of court . . . the day of the act, event . . . after which the designated period of time begins to run is not to be included." The Plaintiff's proposed Order is not in compliance with Rule 6(a).

At the hearing, the Court said that the Defendants, when answering the Plaintiff's Interrogatories, can designate which of the Interrogatories apply to any particular Defendant and provide answers accordingly. The proposed Order does not contain this provision. The first full paragraph of the proposed Order is in conformity with the sole issue framed by the arguments of counsel, Plaintiff's Motion, and Defendants' opposition. Defendants propose that the second paragraph or sentence of the Order be deleted entirely and the date for answering the Interrogatories be incorporated, which the Defendants believe should be the date that an Order is entered by the Court, as opposed to the date of the hearing. The last part of the proposed Order and the Defendants objection is addressed below.

II.
CLAIM FOR EXPENSES AND ATTORNEY FEES

Shortly after the Court announced its ruling on the Plaintiff's Motion to Compel, counsel for the Plaintiff informed the Court that a claim for expenses and attorney fees had been asserted and the Court immediately replied that a claim would be granted. No hearing was conducted on this claim and there were no briefs or documents filed by either parties on this subject, except for the fact that a claim was asserted in the Motion to Compel that reads: "Pursuant to Rule 37(a)(4), of the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure, Plaintiff also seeks reasonable expenses incurred in obtaining the Order, including attorney's fees."

Rule 37(a)(4) reads in pertinent part:

> "Award of expenses of motion. If the motion is granted, the court shall, after opportunity for hearing, require the party or deponent whose conduct necessitated the motion or the party or attorney advising such conduct or both of them to pay to the moving party the reasonable expenses incurred in obtaining the order, including attorney's fees, unless the court finds that the opposition to the motion was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust."

With no disrespect intended, the Court did not provide opportunity for hearing or make a finding on whether the opposition to the Motion was substantially justified or that other circumstances make an award of expenses unjust. Just because a claim is asserted by the prevailing party does not automatically mean that an award is proper or warranted. The Rule also provides that expenses and attorney's fees be reasonable.

It is the Defendants' position that their objection to the Plaintiff's Interrogatories was substantially justified and that the circumstances were such that an award of expenses is unjust. The following points, arguments and authorities are outlined and discussed for consideration by the Court in regard to the Defendants' position.

1. Rule 33(a)(3) itself provides for counting sub-parts of interrogatories as separate interrogatories and there are no Idaho Appellate Court decisions that have holdings that invalidate or make Defendants' objections invalid. Likewise, there are no Idaho Appellate Court decisions that define the meaning of Rule 33(a)(3) or the meaning of sub-parts and their application and interpretation. Thus, the Defendants' position on the number of interrogatories, including sub-parts, was not contrary to any Idaho Appellate Court decisions.

2. Defense counsel's letter of July 26, 2012 to Plaintiff's attorney, Exhibit D to the Affidavit of Jeremiah A. Quane, sets forth in detail the basis and means by which defense counsel arrived at his count of the numbers of Interrogatories. This count was made and arrived at in a careful and considered manner and was not made to impede or restrict discovery or frivolous in nature. It was an honest attempt by defense counsel to inform Plaintiff's attorney of the bassi for the objection and methodology of gauging the number of Interrogatories. In the letter of Plaintiff's attorney to defense counsel dated August 6, 2012, Exhibit A to the Affidavit of Jeremiah A. Quane, he identified which Interrogatories are directed to Dr. Kerr and which to Silk Touch, although he disagreed with defense counsel's count. There was also disagreement on whether the entirety of the Interrogatories were directed to each Defendant to answer, even though the Interrogatories were addressed to each Defendant and that Rule 33 provides that no party shall serve upon any other single party more than 40 interrogatories. In the same letter, Plaintiff's attorney also stated that by defense counsel's count, 39 Interrogatories are directed to Silk Touch and 36 Interrogatories directed to Dr. Kerr, for a total of 75 Interrogatories. The total count of 75 is based on the position that both Silk Touch and Dr. Kerr must each answer the full set of the Interrogatories, which was a reasonable conclusion by defense counsel, taking into account Rule 33 and the manner in which the Interrogatories were stated and formulated for each Defendant.

3. In Defense counsel's Legal Memorandum, two Federal cases are cited that fully support the position of defense counsel and they are on point and relevant. None of the cases cited in Plaintiff's Memorandum are relevant or do they constitute precedent for the Plaintiff's position and Motion. In fact, the decision in the case of Swackhammer v. Sprint Corp. cited in Plaintiff's Memorandum contains a holding that supports the Defendants' position. Therefor, the Court has not been provided with legal authority or precedent in the briefing that was filed that supports the Plaintiff's position, whereas the Defendants provided authority and precedent that supports their position. The Plaintiff did not file a reply memorandum to the Legal Memorandum filed by the Defendants. At oral argument, Plaintiff's attorney referred to a Nevada decision of a Federal Magistrate and told the Court that it invalidated or overruled the case of Valdez v. Ford Motor Co., cited in Defendants' Legal Memorandum. Since this case, believed to be Ginn v. Gemini (137 F.R.D. 320, 1991), was not cited in advance of the hearing by Plaintiff's attorney in any manner or by a memorandum, defense counsel had no way to respond to it or challenge the interpretation of the case by Plaintiff's attorney.

After the hearing, defense counsel read the full decision of the case and represents to the Court that it did not overrule the Valdez case or invalidate the holding of the Valdez case. It simply disagreed with the decision in Valdez and therefor in the Federal Court of Nevada, according to two Federal magistrates, there is a difference of opinion on the calculation of sub-parts of Interrogatories. When the Defendants' position is supported by relevant on point court decisions and precedent, albeit from other jurisdictions in the absence of controlling Idaho court appellate decisions, it is difficult to understand or believe that the Defendants' objection was not substantially justified.

4. As mentioned above, at the hearing the Court stated that the Defendants, when answering the Plaintiff's Interrogatories, can designate which of the Interrogatories apply to any particular Defendant and provide answers accordingly. In Plaintiff attorney's letter of August 6, 2012, Exhibit A, the Interrogatories for Dr. Kerr and Silk Touch are specified by number and defense counsel is asked to respond based on the modifications and clarifications in the letter. In defense counsel's letters of August 9, 2012 (Exhibit B to the Affidavit of Jeremiah A. Quane) and August 29, 2012 (Exhibit C to the Affidavit of Jeremiah A. Quane) defense counsel agreed to answer the Interrogatories for Dr. Kerr and Silk Touch as specified in the letter of Plaintiff's attorney dated August 6, 2012 (Exhibit A), except for a request that substitute separate Interrogatories be served on Silk Touch and Dr. Kerr, which would essentially resolve the dispute. The remark of the Court at the hearing, described in this paragraph, is basically tantamount to the method for the Defendants to answer the Interrogatories as proposed in the letters of Plaintiff's attorney and defense counsel, with the one exception that the Plaintiff need not serve substitute separate Interrogatories to Dr. Kerr and Silk Touch. In effect, the Court fashioned a procedure by virtue of which the Defendants could specify the Interrogatories to answer for each Dr. Kerr and Silk Touch without requiring separate substitute Interrogatories. The Defendants agreed in advance of the hearing to answer the Plaintiff's Interrogatories if they were separately diercted to Dr. Kerr and Silk Touch, advocated by Plaintiff's attorney in his letter of August 6, 2012, when combined with the subject statement of the Court at the hearing, constitute circumstances that make an award unjust.

5. The Defendants duly considered and relied upon the case of Valdez v. Ford Motor Company, 134 F.R.D. 296, Nevada 1991 when the objection to the plaintiff's interrogatories was asserted, in addition to other court decisions. In the Valdez case, the court stated:

> Local Rule 190-1(c) provides in relevant part that "the total number of interrogatories propounded to each party by any other party pursuant to Fed. R. Civ. P. 33 shall be limited to 40 including suparts." The plain meaning of the language in the rule is clear and unambiguous. Local Rule 190-1(c) requires that every part of an interrogatory be counted and subject to the limitation of 40.

The court in Valdez also stated:

> The procedure for interpreting a local rule should parallel the process used in the construction of statutes. "In construing a statute, this court first looks to the plan meaning of the language in question." Pyramid Lake Paiute Tribe v. U.S. Dept. of Navy, 898 F.2d 1410, 1417 (9th Cir. 1990). "The plain meaning governs . . . . unless such plain meaning would lead to absurd results." Dyer v. U.S., 832 F.2d 1062, 1066 (9th Cir. 1987).

In addition to these statements the court in Valdez went on to say:

> 2. All propounded interrogatories and subparts should be counted by the parties. If the parties disagree on the count, they should use the count that produces the greatest number of interrogatories. This interpretation will avoid litigation over the routine tabulation of interrogatories and subparts in a propounded set of interrogatories.

Valdez has not been overruled and it has been cited with approval in other cases, albeit there are cases that do not follow Valdez. Counsel for the Defendants shepardized the Valdez decision and found nothing that would invalidate his reliance on Valdez or establish a reason not to object to the Plaintiff's Interrogatories. This research helped convince defense counsel that the objection to Plaintiff's Interrogatories was substantially justified. The fact that this Court granted the Plaintiff's Motion to Compel does not prove or establish that the Defendants' objection was without substantial justification such as to allow an award of expenses and attorney fees.

6. Defense counsel tried to continue with efforts to reach an agreement with Plaintiff's attorney and avoid a Court appearance. His letter to Plaintiff's attorney dated August 9, 2012 (Exhibit B to Affidavit of Jeremiah A. Quane) was unanswered and obviously ignored by Plaintiff's attorney. Again by letter dated August 29, 2012 (Exhibit C), further attempt was made and this letter was also ignored by Plaintiff's attorney. The letter of August 29, 2012 contained the following statement: "I do not believe we have exhausted our negotiations toward a resolution of our differences, based on your letter of August 6 and my letter of August 9, which I think we are obligated to do, in lieu of your motion to compel." Had Plaintiff's attorney responded to these letters, instead of ignoring them, it is very likely an agreement would have been reached and the Motion to Compel would have become moot and unnecessary. The conduct of Plaintiff's attorney was not the exercise of good faith on his part whereas defense counsel diligently tried to reach an agreement in the exercise of good faith.

Rule 37(a)(4), is confined to reasonable expenses and attorney fees incurred in obtaining the Order on the Plaintiff's Motion to Compel. This provision of the Rule covers Plaitniff's preparation of the Motion to Compel, preparation of the supporting documentation for the Motion, and the Court appearance for the hearing on the Motion. The supporting documentation in this case consists of the Memorandum and the Affidavit, with Exhibits, of Plaintiff's counsel. The proposed Order of Plaintiff's attorney provides for an award of reasonable expenses and attorney fees in obtaining the Order as specifically stated in Rule 37(a)(4).

Plaintiff's Motion to Compel contains the same language and is a one page document, excluding the caption of the first page. The body of the motion is confined to one and only one issue - Defendants' objection to Plaintiff's Interrogatories on the grounds that the number of Interrogatories exceed forty, the number allowed under Rule 33(a)(3), I.R.C.P. The Motion and the legal issue it embodies is uncomplicated, straightforward and clearly defined and does not involve complex, sophisticated, and multiple legal concepts. No depositions have been taken in the case. The Affidavit of Plaintiff's attorney that accompanied the motion merely referred to and incorporated the Interrogatories to the Defendants, Defendants' objection, five letters exchanged between Plaintiff's attorney, and defense counsel that were prepared and sent before the Mmotion was filed and the sentences that the Plaintiff has yet to receive answers to the Interrogatories and that Plaintiff has in good faith conferred or attempted to confer with the Defendants in an effort to secure Defendants' answers to Plaintiff's Interrogatories without court action. The Plaintiff's supporting Memorandum for the Motion consists of four pages, excluding the first caption page, the signature page, and the certificate of service. The Memorandum cites to Rule 33(a)(3), three cases and Federal Practice and Procedure which are identical to the citations and references in Plaintiff attorney's letter to defense counsel dated July 6, 2012 (Exhibit C to the Affidavit of Plaintiff's counsel P. Gregory Haddad). The citations in the letter of July 6, 2012 were obviously identified and researched sometime before or on July 6, 2012, which was at least 50 days before the Motion to Compel was filed on August 24, 2012. The Memorandum of Plaintiff also contains discussions of each letter exchanged between defense counsel and Plaintiff's attorney, referred to in the Affidavit of Plaintiff's attorney as Exhibits C, D, E, F and G, and a reference to a telephone call from defense counsel's office to Plaintiff's attorney, all of which predated the filing of the Motion to Compel. In essence, everything that was done by Plaintiff's attorney had been done before the Motion to Compel was filed. It is the position of the Defendants that the activities and legal work performed by counsel for the Plaintiff before the Motion to Compel was filed was undertaken and devoted to the attempted resolution of the Defendants' objection to the Interrogatories and the reconciliation of the differences between Plaintiff's attorney and defense counsel so as to avoid the necessity of filing the Motion to Compel. In fact, several of the letters of Plaintiff's attorney state this very thing. Rule 37(a)(4), speaks to reasonable expenses and attorney fees incurred in obtaining the Order and nothing other than that. Although Plaintiff's Motion, Affidavit and Memorandum borrow from and incorporate the legal work performed before the Motion to Compel was filed, this activity and legal work was performed for reasons other than expenses and fees incurred in obtaining the Order on the Motion to Compel.

The proposed Order of Plaintiff's attorney states that Plaintiff be awarded reasonable expenses in obtaining the Order including attorney fees and a reference to the Affidavit of Plaintiff's attorney that sets forth the expenses and attorney fees. The Affidavit of Plaintiff's attorney, P. Gregory Haddad, states that Plaintiff's attorney fees and expenses associated with procuring Defendants' answers to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories is $5,244.00 for his law firm and attorney fees related to the efforts of Nevin, Benjamin, McKay, and Bartlett to procure Defendants' Answers to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories is $1,858.00, for a total combination of $7,151.36 that includes expenses of $49.36. In combination the two Plaintiff's law firms had four attorneys working on the case starting on July 3, 2012 according to the billing records attached to the Affidavit of P. Gregory Haddad, one paralegal and one legal assistant. The four attorneys, per the billing records, are P. Gregory Haddad, James Perrine, Brian McAllister and Scott McKay. The paralegal is Rebecca Bombard and the legal assistant is identified with the initials D.P.

The hourly rates for Mr. Haddad and Mr. Perrine is $325.00. The hourly rate for Mr. McAllister is $225.00. The hourly rate for Mr. McKay is $265.00. The hourly rate for Mr. McKay's legal assistant D.P. is $65.00. The hourly rate for paralegal Rebecca Bombard is $95.00. The total time for Mr. McAllister that pertains to the Motion to Compel, research, and the supporting documents for the Motion is 18.3 hours. Mr. Haddad had no time for the Motion except for a letter to defense counsel dated July 31, 2012 in the billing record. Defendants provided answers to Plaintiff's Requests for Admissions and Responses to Plaintiff's Requests for Production of Documents and the entry of Mr. Perrine of July 3, 2012 refers to his review of them. The billing record of Mr. Haddad's firm for the period July 5, 2012 through July 26, 2012 for Mr. Perrine and Rebecca Bombard pertains to the letters that were generated and a phone call from defense counsel. Mr. Perrine had one entry of August 20, 2012 of 0.10 time that related to the Motion to Compel. Several entries in the billing of Mr. Haddad's firm related to conferences and communications among and between several different individuals. The billing record of Mr. McKay of August 24, 2012, 1.40 in time, relates to conferences with his legal assistant, telephone conversation with co-counsel, preparation of case email and coordinate filing for Motion to Compel. The time of Mr. McKay's legal assistant D.P. totals 2.9 hours in connection with the Motion to Compel. Mr. McKay's time that is reflected for the Motion to Compel is 4.30 hours. His time on September 13, 2012, 0.60 hours, relates to a letter from Mr. McAllister, and a telephone conversation with him and preparation of the Order on the Motion to Compel and letter to the Court. The billing of Mr. McKay reflects several conversations and communications between and among various individuals just like the billing of Mr. Haddad's firm does. Between Mr. McKay, Mr. Perrine, Mr. McAllister, and legal assistant D.P., a total of 25.6 hours is recorded for the Motion to Compel, Court appearance, and the documentation and research for the Motion.

There is considerable time that involves unnecessary and wasted duplication of work among attorneys and D.P. The research for and citations in the Plaintiff's Memorandum for the Motion was actually performed on or before July 6, 2012 (see Exhibit C to the Affidavit of Mr. Haddad) in connection with the efforts and negotiations of counsel to try and reach an agreement for the Answers to the Interrogatories and avoid court intervention which is required by Rule 37(a)(2), certification.

The Court hearing on the Motion lasted about ½ hour, give or take a few minutes either way. Mr. McKay's billing record for September 10, 2012 and September 12, 2012 show total time of 3.90 hours to prepare for the hearing and attendance at the hearing, that includes a telephone conversation with Mr. Haddad in regard to the hearing and a confernce with David Nevin.

Counsel for the Plaintiff can spend all the time they want, charge whatever hourly rate they choose and have as many attorneys and paralegals work on the case as they want, but this is not the standard or basis for the issue at hand, which is the amount, if any, to be assessed against the Defendants. Rule 37(a)(4) calls for reasonable expenses and attorney fees, not what Plaintiff's counsel accumulates or charges. The customary and standard fees and legal work required on a project is that which prevails in the District Court of Ada County and other surrounding district courts. Hourly rates and the time devoted to a particular legal topic or issue that prevails in West Virginia (locale of Mr. Haddad and Mr. McAllister) is not applicable. Furthermore, the hourly rates of Mr. Haddad, Mr. McAllister, and Mr. Perrine are not in line with the customary, usual and standard hourly rates that prevail in Ada County for the type and nature of the motion to compel and legal work done in tort cases of any type. The same is true of Mr. McKay. Their hourly rates are substantially higher than the accepted, customary and usual rates that prevail in Ada County and the Court should approve the hourly rates established in Ada County, if the Court does enter an award against the Defendants. The same is true as respects the time reasonably required and necessitated for the Motion to Compel. Frankly, in the opinion of defense counsel, the amount claimed for attorney fees is unbelievable, preposterous and totally out of line. In the opinion of defense counsel, the reasonable time required to prepare the Motion to Compel, supporting Memorandum and Affidavit of Plaintiff's counsel and attendance at Court for the hearing on the Motion should not exceed four to five hours at the most, and the hourly rate to be applied should conform to the customary and established rates in Ada County, which is described and set forth in the Affidavit of Jeremiah A. Quane. Defendants respectfully urge the Court to consider the factors and matters set forth in Rule 54(e)(3), I.R.C.P.

III.
CONCLUSION

The objection to the proposed Order of Plaintiff's attorney be granted and the Order modified by deleting the portions that follow the first paragraph and adding the provisions that the Defendants respond to the Plaintiff's Interrogatories, as allowed by the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure, within 14 days of the entry of an order in conformity with the time computation of Rule 6(a), I.R.C.P, and that the Plaintiff's request for expenses and attorney fees is denied. Alternatively, if the Court grants the Plaintiff's request for attorney fees and expenses, a reasonable amount be awarded for the actual expenses and attorney fees incurred in obtaining the order as opposed to the amount set forth in the Affidavit of P. Gregory Haddad and the billing records attached to the Affidavit. Defendants pray that the Court not enter the proposed order of Plaintiff's attorney until the issues raised in these objections have been decided by the Court and that the time period for the Defendants to answer the interrogatories be set, as a preliminary order, within 14 days after the Court enters its final order. A hearing is requested.

Respectfully submitted.

Case No. CV OC 1204792

AFFIDAVIT OF JEREMIAH A. QUANE FOR OBJECTIONS TO PLAINTIFF'S PROPOSED ORDER ON PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO COMPEL AND PLAINTIFF'S CLAIM FOR EXPENSES AND ATTORNEY FEES

: ss.
County of Ada)

I, Jeremiah A. Quane, having been first duly sworn upon oath, deposes and says:

2. I have handled hundreds of civil tort cases that involved numerous and varying legal issues, including discovery issues, some of which involved disputes regarding answers to interrogatories. Of these civil tort cases, many were medical malpractice cases. I have handled and/or tried civil tort and medical malpractice cases in all but 8 of the 44 counties in the State of Idaho and the Federal District Court of Idaho. Of these cases, a great number of them were in the District Court of Ada County.

3. Based on my experience, I am familiar with and have knowledge of the attorney fee hourly rates customarily and usually charged by attorneys in civil tort and medical malpractice cases that include cases in the District Court of Ada County and its surrounding counties. I have acquired this knowledge by means of discussing hourly rates with attorneys, reviewing billing statements of attorneys and claims asserted by attorneys in connection with litigated cases and decisions of courts for the assessment of attorney fees. I have testified as an expert witness in the District Court of Ada County on the subject of reasonable and customary attorney fee hourly rates and observed other attorneys doing the same. In these cases, the presiding judge accepted me as a qualified expert witness.

4. I am qualified to render the opinions stated in this Affidavit.

5. The customary, usual and accepted hourly rates for attorneys in the Fourth and other Judicial Districts of the State of Idaho in civil tort and malpractice cases is in the range of $150 to $190, and $190 is the outer or highest rate.

6. In my opinion, these are the ranges for the assessment of attorney fees in connection with the Plaintiff's motion to compel answers to interrogatories.

7. My experience and acquired knowledge set forth above, covers, applies and relates to the attorney time necessary and reasonably required to perform legal services for varying subjects and I believe that I am qualified to render an opinion on the time that was customarily reasonably necessary and required of Plaintiff's attorney to obtain the order on the Plaintiff's motion to compel answers to the interrogatories.

8. To obtain the order on the Plaintiff's motion to compel, specified in Rule 37(a)(4), I.R.C.P., the reasonable attorney time and activity consisted of the preparation of the motion, supporting memorandum and affidavit of Plaintiff's attorney and attendance at Court for the hearing on the motion. The reasonable time required for this, in order to be consistent with the customary, usual standards that are applicable, is in the range of four to five hours, at the most.

9. The Plaintiff's motion was uncomplicated, straight forward, involved a single issue that required minimal research and analysis and factual foundation, and limited time in Court for the hearing on the motion. These factors are consistent with and adequate for the time reasonably required to obtain the Court order on the motion.

Case No. CV OC 1204792

PLAINTIFF'S RESPONSE IN OPPOSITION TO DEFENDANTS' OBJECTION TO PLAINTIFF'S PROPOSED ORDER AND CLAIM FOR FEES AND EXPENSES RELATED TO PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO COMPEL DEFENDANTS' ANSWERS TO PLAINTIFF'S FIRST SET OF INTERROGATORIES

ORIGINAL

COMES NOW Plaintiff, Charles Ballard, by and through his attorneys, and responds in opposition to Defendants' objection to Plaintiff's proposed order and claim for fees and expenses related to Plaintiff's Motion to Compel Defendants' Answers to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories. To avoid belaboring these issues, many of which have already been decided by the Court, Plaintiff's response is brief and should not be interpreted as conceding the various points Defendants now attempt to reargue.

On the afternoon of September 12, 2012, the Court heard arguments related to Plaintiff's Motion to Compel Defendants' Answers to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories. After the presentation of arguments, the Court, quite properly, overruled Defendants' objection to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories and granted Plaintiff's motion. The Court ordered Defendants to respond to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories within 14 days, and granted Plaintiff's request for expenses, including attorney fees, as provided in Rule 37(a)(4) of the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure.

On September 14, 2012, Plaintiff's counsel submitted a proposed order to the Court, as well as to Defendants. The proposed order was accompanied by an Affidavit of Counsel, by which Plaintiff set forth the expenses, including attorney fees, related to the procurement of Defendants' Answers to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories. On September 18, Defendants filed objections to Plaintiff's proposed order, as well as to Plaintiff's fees and expenses.

The Plaintiff's proposed order reflects the Court's rulings of September 12, 2012. Defendants take issue with that Order because they now wish to assert additional objections which they failed to timely assert in response to the first set of interrogatories; that is not a valid basis for the Court to withhold entry of the Order. Defendants asserted only one objection to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories during the standard answer period. See Defs.' Objections to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories, attached as Exhibit B to the Affidavit of Counsel filed on August 24, 2012. Specifically, Defendants asserted that the number of interrogatories, including subparts, exceeded the number permitted by Rule 33(a)(3) of the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure. No other objections were stated by Defendants either individually or collectively to these interrogatories. Accordingly, because Rule 33(a)(2) states that "[t]he party upon whom the interrogatories have been served shall serve the original of the answers, and the objections, if any, within 30 days after the service," (emphasis added), Defendants have waived any further objection to these interrogatories, and any objections they now raise would be untimely.[1] Given Defendants' approach to discovery to date, allowing such objections would invariably lead to delays and additional disputes. In any event, the Court was correct to overrule Defendants' sole objection to the interrogatories and should now order Defendants to answer Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories without objection.

Moreover, by their objection to Plaintiff's fees and expenses, Defendants claim that Plaintiff's pro hac vice and local attorneys charge rates well in excess of the prevailing rates in Ada County. As evidenced by the decision appended hereto, the Unites States District Court for the District of Idaho disagrees with Defendants' conclusion. Exhibit A, LaPeter v. Canada Life

[1] While the undersigned has not located any Idaho appellate cases discussing waiver for failure to timely state objections, numerous other jurisdictions have so held. See, e.g. Drew v. Hagy, 134 Ga. App. 852, 216 S.E.2d 676, 677 (1975) (failure to file timely objections to interrogatories is a waiver of the right to object); Leach v. Superior Court, 111 Cal. App. 3d 902, 903, 169 Cal. Rptr. 42, 43 (Ct. App. 1980) (same); Wright and Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, § 2173 (same): Hobson v. Moore, 734 S.W.2d 340, 341 (Tex. 1987) ("A failure to timely object to interrogatories waives any objection, unless an extension of time is granted or good cause is shown for the delay."); Garrity v. Kemper Motor Sales, 280 Minn. 202, 206, 159 N.W.2d 103, 106-07 (1968) (holding that "because no objections to the interrogatories were made within the time specified by the rules, all objections except those related to privilege, work product, and experts' conclusions were waived."); Golding v. Taylor, 19 N.C. App. 245, 248, 198 S.E.2d 478, 480 (1973) (not finding a waiver because defendant asserted right against self-incrimination in not responding but noting "ordinarily, in the absence of an extension of time, failure to object to interrogatories within the time fixed by the rule is a waiver of any objection.").

Ins. Of Amer., No. 1:06-CV-00121-BLW, 2007 WL 4287489, at *1-2 (Dec. 4, 2007) (finding hourly rates consistent with those at issue here to be "within the Boise community standard").[2] Therefore, the hourly rates of Plaintiff's counsel are consistent with the Boise community standard and reasonable, as is the time expended by Plaintiff's counsel in obtaining this order compelling discovery.[3]

Defendants' objections are an attempt to reargue the issues presented by oral argument on September 12, 2012. Additionally, the filing of Defendants' objections is a transparent attempt to avoid their discovery obligations to Plaintiff.

The Court's rulings of September 12, 2012, were proper: Defendants' Answers to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories are due, without objection, in fourteen days (thus, on September 26, 2012), and Plaintiff is entitled to reasonable expenses, including attorney fees, which are properly set forth in the Affidavit of Counsel filed on September 14, 2012. Accordingly, Defendants' objections should be overruled.

[2] Pursuant to Idaho Rule of Evidence 201, Plaintiff respectfully requests that the Court take judicial notice of this decision.

[3] By virtue of the objections necessitating the instant response, Plaintiff has now expended additional time in seeking the order compelling discovery. Accordingly, it would be appropriate for the Court to enter the submitted Order, award expenses, including attorney fees, as reflected in Plaintiff's prior submission, and permit Plaintiff to augment his prior submission to include these additional fees.

Dated this 20th day of September, 2012.

INTRODUCTION

1 The Court has before it Canada Life Insurance Company of America's ("Canada Life") Motion for Attorney Fees and Costs (Docket No. 94), Plaintiffs' Motion to Strike Second Declaration of Robert A. Faucher (Docket No. 105), and Plaintiffs' Motion to Consolidate Cases (Docket No. 108).

ANALYSIS

I. Motion for Attorney Fees and Costs

Idaho law governs the award of attorney fees in this matter because federal courts follow state law as to attorney fee awards in diversity actions. See Interform Co. v. Mitchell, 575 F.2d 1270, 1280 (9th Cir.1978) (applying Idaho law). Pursuant to Idaho Code § 12-120(3), the prevailing party is entitled to an award of attorney fees when a commercial transaction is the gravamen of the lawsuit. See Erickson v. Flynn, 64 P.3d 959 (Idaho Ct.App.2002).

"The determination of whether a litigant is the prevailing party is committed to the discretion of the trial court." Sanders v. Lankford, 1 P.3d 823, 826 (Idaho Ct.App.2000); see also I.R.C.P. 54(d)(1)(B). In Idaho, governing legal standards on the prevailing party issue are provided by IRCP 54(d)(1)(B). "[T]here are three principal factors the trial court must consider when determining which party, if any, prevailed: (1) the final judgment or result obtained in relation to the relief sought; (2) whether there were multiple claims or issues between the parties; and (3) the extent to which each of the parties prevailed on each of the claims or issues." Id.

There is no dispute that this case involved a commercial transaction for purposes of Idaho Code § 12-120(3). Moreover, based on the Court's final Judgment in this matter, Canada Life is clearly the prevailing party. In litigation, avoiding liability is as good for a defendant as winning a money judgment is for a plaintiff. See Eighteen Mile Ranch, LLC v. Nord Excavating & Paving, Inc., 117 P.3d 130, 133 (Idaho 2005). Canada Life avoided liability in this matter when the Court granted summary judgment in its favor on all of Plaintiffs' remaining claims.

A. Amount of Attorney Fees and Costs

Plaintiffs contend that Canada Life's requested attorney fees should be reduced because their hourly rates are too high and the time expended was excessive.

1. Hourly Rates

The Court must determine a reasonable hourly rate by considering the experience, skill and reputation of the attorneys requesting fees. See Schwarz v. Secretary of Health and Human Services, 73 F.3d 895, 906 (9th Cir.1995). "A district court should calculate this reasonable hourly rate according to the prevailing market rates in the relevant community, which typically is the community in which the district court sits." Id. (internal quotations and citations omitted). The relevant community in this case is Boise, Idaho, where this Court sits.

Here, Plaintiffs specifically object to the rates charged by Newal Squyres and Bob Foucher, who charged $350.00 and $335.00/$355.00 respectively for their time. This Court is intimately familiar with the hourly rates charged in the Boise market because the Court deals with motions for attorney fees on a constant basis. Canada Life correctly points out that this Court recently awarded fees to a party based on typical hourly rates charged by Canada Life's attorneys at Holland & Hart.

Canada Life has also provided the Court with Mr. Faucher's declaration, which establishes the credentials and billing rates for the Holland & Hart professionals who worked on this matter. (See Faucher Declaration, pp. 2-3). It has also been this Court's experience that attorneys at regional firms, such as Holland & Hart, charge hourly rates at or near, but not above, the high end of acceptable rates for the Boise area.

*2 Based on the Court's knowledge of typical attorney rates in the Boise area, coupled with Mr. Faucher's affidavit, the Court finds that the rates charged by Canada Life's professionals are within the Boise community standard, with the exception of Mr. Faucher's rate. Mr. Faucher's hourly rate is near, and even exceeds for some tasks, Mr. Squyres' hourly rate, even though Mr. Squyres has practiced for over 30 years, but Mr. Faucher has practiced for less than 20 years. (See Faucher Declaration, pp. 2-3). Although Mr. Faucher indicates that he represents lending institutions throughout the country, he has not persuaded the Court that his rate should exceed that of his colleague who has practiced for over 30 years. Accordingly, the Court will reduce Mr. Faucher's rate to $300.00 per hour. [1]

2. Number of Hours Charged

Plaintiffs also contend that the number of hours claimed by Canada Life are excessive. Plaintiffs essentially contend that Canada Life's attorneys spent too much time researching, drafting, editing and finalizing briefs, and too much time preparing for oral argument. Plaintiffs contend that any fee award should be reduced by at least 30 percent.

The Court recalls that the briefs were well organized and well researched, and that counsel's oral argument was persuasive. It has been the Court's experience that the more concise briefs, and more persuasive arguments, require the most preparation. The high quality of the work, coupled with the Court's decision to grant summary judgment in favor of Canada Life, and against Plaintiffs, reveals that the significant effort spent on the briefs and preparation for oral argument in this case was warranted. Additionally, the high quality work done at the front end of this case saved the parties the additional expense of trying this matter.

Moreover, Canada Life's attorneys sufficiently itemized their fees by describing the services performed. (Faucher Declaration, Ex. A). Accordingly, the Court does not find that the number of hours charged by Canada Life's attorneys were excessive.

3. Declaration Related to Mr. LaPeter's Conviction

Plaintiffs argue that Canada Life's attorney fees should be reduced as a sanction for Canada Life's filing of a declaration attaching documentation of Mr. LaPeter's felony convictions. Plaintiffs suggest that Canada Life introduced Mr. LaPeter's criminal convictions into the record as an attempt to intimidate Mr. LaPeter and blacken Mr. LaPeter's reputation in they eyes of the Court. Plaintiffs also ask the Court to strike that declaration.

Based on the record, it is clear that Plaintiffs, not Canada Life, introduced Mr. LaPeter's criminal history into this litigation. Plaintiffs first disclosed Mr. LaPeter's criminal record to the Court in Mr. LaPeter's affidavit filed in December 2006 in support of Plaintiffs' motion for a protective order. (See Docket nos. 21-22). Thus, it was not improper for Canada Life to address the issue or to file the records with the Court. Accordingly, there is no reason to sanction Canada Life. Likewise, there is no reason to strike Mr. Faucher's declaration.

4. Non-Taxable Costs

*3 Canada Life requests its non-taxable costs pursuant to IRCP 54(d)(1)(D). Plaintiffs do not dispute application of IRCP 54(d)(1)(D), but argue that Canada Life has not fulfilled the rule's requirement that the costs were necessary and exceptional. Rule 54(d)(1)(D) states that additional, non-taxable, costs "may be allowed upon a showing that said costs were necessary and exceptional costs reasonably incurred, and should in the interest of justice be assessed against the adverse party." IRCP 54(d)(1)(D). Discretionary costs may include costs related to long distance telephone calls, photocopying, faxes, travel expenses, and expert witnesses. See Hayden Lake Fire Protection Dist. v. Alcorn, 109 P.3d 161, 168 (Idaho 2005). The Court must make express findings as to why a party's discretionary costs should or should not be allowed. Id.; see also I.R.C.P. 54(d)(1)(D). The Court need not evaluate the requested costs item by item. Instead, "express findings as to the general character of requested costs and whether such costs are necessary, reasonable, exceptional, and in the interests of justice is sufficient to comply with this requirement." Puckett v. Verska, 158 P.3d 937, 945-946 (Idaho 2007).

Here, the Court finds that although Canada Life's discretionary costs were for the most part reasonable and necessary, they were not exceptional. The nature of this case, essentially a breach of contract case, was not exceptional. The Idaho Supreme Court has consistently construed the requirement that costs be "exceptional" under IRCP 54(d)

(1)(D) "to include those costs incurred because the nature of the case was itself exceptional." The Idaho Supreme Court has also stated that "[c]ertain cases, such as personal injury cases generally involve copy, travel and expert witness fees such that these costs are considered ordinary rather than "exceptional" under I.R.C.P. 54(d)(1)(D)." Id. (citing Inama v. Brewer, 973 P.2d 148, 155 (Idaho 1999). This case is more akin to the ordinary personal injury case. Canada Life's discretionary costs were "routine costs associated with modern litigation overhead" in commercial litigation. City of McCall v. Seubert, 130 P.3d 1118, 1126-27 (Idaho 2006). Accordingly, the Court will deny Canada Life's request for non-taxable costs.

5. Idaho Code §§ 45-15-3 and 45-1512

Idaho's anti-deficiency statute provides that in order to recover a deficiency from a grantor personally after foreclosure, the beneficiary must sue the grantor within three months after the trustee's sale. Additionally, the beneficiary can recover only the difference between the debt and the fair market value of the property at the date of sale or the sale amount, whichever is greater. I.C. § 45-1512. Idaho's single action statute provides that a beneficiary under a deed of trust cannot sue the grantor on the debt except under certain limited circumstances. I.C. § 45-1503. The statute's purpose is to compel a creditor who is secured by real property to recover from the grantor's pledged real estate before recovering from the grantor's other assets. Plaintiffs contend that these statutes prevent Canada Life from recovering its attorney fees and costs.

*4 Plaintiffs' argument is based on a contention that Canada Life, for all intents and purposes, is the beneficiary of the deed of trust that secures the ParkCenter Mall. However, Canada Life is not the beneficiary of that deed of trust. Through assignment, Canada Life Assurance Company is the beneficiary of the deed of trust. (See Schwartz Aff., ¶ 7-10, Exs. 1-3, Docket No. 57). Plaintiffs admit as much, but contend that because Canada Life and Canada Life Assurance Company are both subsidiaries of Great West Insurance, the Court should regard the two companies as the same entity. Plaintiffs cite no case law or rules explaining why the Court should not treat the separate entities as separate entities. Accordingly, the Court will not treat them as the same entity.

The anti-deficiency and single action statutes do not apply to parties, like Canada Life, who are not beneficiaries of a deed of trust securing indebtedness owed by the grantor. Accordingly, the Court finds that the statutes do not preclude recovery of attorney fees and costs in this case.

6. Total Fees and Costs

Based on the above analysis, Canada Life is entitled to $437,742.50 in attorney fees. The Court reached this amount by reducing Mr. Faucher's hourly rate from $335.00/355.00 to $300.00 per hour, which reduced Mr. Faucher's bill by $51,498.50. The Court then subtracted that amount from the total amount outlined and claimed in Canada Life's fee bill ($491,310.00-$51,498.50 = $439,811.50). The Court then subtracted an additional $2,069.00 based on Canada Life's concession that it mistakenly included $2,069 .00 in fees for work pertaining to the receivership litigation (See Canada Life Reply Brief, p. 8, n. 18). The Court will not award any non-taxable costs.

II. Motion to Consolidate

Months ago, the Court suggested that, at least for purposes of appeal, the parties should consider whether it would be in the interest of judicial economy to consolidate this case with the other two related matters-Case Nos. 07-254 and 07-228. However, because Plaintiffs have already separately appealed all three cases, the Court finds no reason to consolidate them at this point. Based on the outcome of the appeals, the Court may revisit this issue. However, at this point, the Court will deny the Motion to Consolidate.

ORDER

NOW THEREFORE IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Canada Life's Motion for Attorney Fees and Costs (Docket No. 94) shall be, and the same is hereby, GRANTED IN PART and DENIED IN PART. Plaintiffs shall pay Canada Life $437,742.50 in attorney fees.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Plaintiffs' Motion to Strike Second Declaration of Robert A. Faucher (Docket No. 105) shall be, and the same is hereby, DENIED.

IT IS FURTHER ORDERED that Plaintiffs' Motion to Consolidate Cases (Docket No. 108) shall be, and the same is hereby, DENIED.

Footnotes

1 Mr. Faucher's declaration lists the following attorneys, their experience level and billing rates: (1) Mr. Bithell-nearly 40 years-$405.00 per hour; (2) Mr. Squyers-over 30 years-$350.00 per hour; (3) Mr. Braley-9 years-$235.00 per hour; (4) Mr. Goergen-5 years-$185.00; (5) Mr. Fischenich-3 years-$185.00; and (6) Ms. Davis-2 years-$175.00. Considering the experience and billing rates of Mr. Faucher's colleagues, $300.00 per hour is the reasonable rate for Mr. Faucher in this matter.

Case No. CV OC 1204792

PLAINTIFF'S RESPONSES TO DEFENDANTS' NOTICE DUCES TECUM OF TAKING THE VIDEO DEPOSITION OF CHARLES BALLARD

ORIGINAL

COMES NOW Plaintiff, Charles Ballard, by and through his attorneys, pursuant to Rules 26(b)(1), 30(b)(5), and 34 of the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure, and hereby responds to Defendants' Notice Duces Tecum of Taking the Video Deposition of Charles Ballard.

On January 11, 2013, Defendants, by facsimile, served upon Plaintiff's counsel a Notice Duces Tecum of Taking the Video Deposition of Charles Ballard. The Notice advised that Mr. Ballard's deposition would take place on February 1, 2013, and set forth twenty-eight requests for production of documents.

Defendants have provided Plaintiff only twenty-one days notice of Mr. Ballard's deposition. Despite the shortened notice, Plaintiff has made a diligent and good faith effort to respond to Defendants' requests, and will supplement accordingly.

General Statements and Objections

A. Representations of fact and law herein are made in good faith without the benefit of complete discovery. These responses represent Plaintiff's best efforts at this stage of the litigation and are based on currently available, non-privileged, and non-work product information and documents.

B. Plaintiff objects to each and every request to the extent that it calls for information subject to the attorney-client privilege, the work product privilege, the privilege for critical self-examination, or any other privilege. To the extent that documents or information arguably subject to such privileges may be provided by Plaintiff, such privileges are not waived beyond the precise extent of the disclosure made, and no waiver of privilege may be implied in that no disclosure of anything which is actually privileged is intended.

C. Plaintiff objects to each and every request to the extent that it may be vague, ambiguous, confusing, nonsensical, incomprehensible, or involves usage of words other than those commonly and customarily used, or assumes matters contrary to fact.

D. Plaintiff objects to providing information not within its knowledge, custody, possession, or control, or which does not exist.

E. Plaintiff objects to each and every request to the extent it may be overly broad, unduly burdensome, irrelevant, and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible and/or relevant evidence.

No objection, general or specific, which has been raised herein is waived by the provision of any response herein unless specifically stated to be waived by such answer.

Responses

Requests No. 1 and 2 seek Plaintiff's federal tax returns for the years 2000 through 2012, and Krystal Ballard's federal tax returns for the years 2000 through 2010. Plaintiff objects to these requests to the extent they are overly broad, unduly burdensome, irrelevant, and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible and/or relevant evidence. The tax returns of Charles Ballard have no relevance to any issue in this case. The tax returns for Krystal Ballard for a decade are not relevant to any issue in this case. Without waiving or limiting these objections, Plaintiff is in the process of obtaining federal tax information for Krystal Ballard.

Request No. 3 seeks "[d]ocuments, such as a Marriage Certificate, that reflect and pertain to the marriage of Charles Ballard to Krystal Ballard." Plaintiff objects to this request to the extent that it is overly broad and unduly burdensome as Defendant's request for "documents" is overly broad. Without waiving or limiting these objections, Plaintiff hereby produces the requested marriage certificate (BALLARD000001-BALLARD000002).

Request No. 4 requests that "[i]f Charles Ballard is married at the time of his deposition on February 1, 2013, documents, such as a marriage certificate, that reflect and pertain to his marriage to the person he is married to." Mr. Ballard is not married presently. Plaintiff has no documents responsive to this request.

Request No. 5 requests that "[i]f Charles Ballard is not married at the time of his depositions on February 1, 2013, documents, that reflect and pertain to any marriages he has had since July 26, 2010, such as marriage certificates." Mr. Ballard has not been married since July 26, 2010. Plaintiff has no documents responsive to this request.

Request No. 6 requests as follows: "Any and all documents, records, writings and physical things that pertain to and reflect in any way the following response of Charles Ballard in his Answer to Interrogatory No. 3 of the Defendants:

a. Loss of support to Charles Ballard from the death of Krystal Ballard.
b. Depletion of community assets.
c. Reduction of the community to earn income.
d. Costs and expenses changeable against community property arising from the injuries to Krystal Ballard prior to her death.
e. Funeral expenses.
f. Loss of income from Krystal Ballard.
g. Loss of pension and/or retirement benefits of Krystal Ballard.
h. Loss of health insurance benefits from Krystal Ballard."

Plaintiff hereby produces an invoice from Rost Funeral Home (000015BILL-000018BILL), an invoice from Tillman Funeral Home (BALLARD000132), an invoice from Artistic Flowers (BALLARD000133), receipts for items related to Krystal Ballard's funeral (BALLARD000134), a 2011 United States Air Force pay table (BALLARD000101), 2010 United States Air Force pay tables (BALLARD000102-BALLARD000115), and Air Force Benefits Fact Sheets (BALLARD000116-BALLARD000131). Tax returns, pension and retirement benefit information for Krystal Ballard will be supplemented. Further, pursuant to the scheduling order deadlines, the Plaintiff will produce and economic report reflecting economic losses to Charles Ballard.

Request No. 7 requests "[a]ny and all documents, records, writings and physical things that support and are relied upon by Charles Ballard for his response to the Defendants' Interrogatory No. 3." In his response to Defendants' Interrogatory No. 3, Plaintiff stated that he "claims as special damages all those damages entitled to be claimed under the laws of the State of Idaho . . . ." Plaintiff refers Defendants to the documents referenced in response to Request No. 6.

Request No. 8 requests "[a]ny and all documents, records, writings and physical things that pertain to and support in any way the following allegations in the Complaint:

a. Decedent's funeral expenses,
b. Loss of wages and other benefits of employment which would have been earned by Krystal Ballard and shared with her husband, Plaintiff, during the course of her normal work life expectancy.
c. The reasonable value attributable to the loss of service, care, comfort and society of Krystal Ballard."

Plaintiff hereby produces the documents referenced in response to Request No. 6.

Request No. 9 requests "[b]ills, invoices, charges and documents that pertain to and reflect the amounts of the services, medical care and treatment provided for Krystal Ballard from the time of the surgery of Dr. Kerr until her death." Plaintiff hereby produces medical records from St. Alphonsus Medical Center (SAMC000001-SDAMC000192), medical records from Elmore Medical Center (EMC000001-EMC000029), medical records from Silk Touch Med Spa (STMS000001-STMS00023), medical records from Elmore Ambulance Service (EAS000001-EAS000034), medical records from Life Flight Network (LFN000001-LFN000005), billing records from Elmore Medical Center (000001BILL-000003BILL), billing records from St. Alphonus Medical Center (000004BILL-000013BILL), a billing record from Elmore Ambulance Service (000014BILL), and a billing record from Life Flight Network (000019BILL).

Request No. 10 requests "[b]ills, invoices, changes and documents that pertain to and reflect the amounts for funeral, burial and last rites having to do with Krystal Ballard." Plaintiff hereby produces an invoice from Rost Funeral Home (000015BILL-000018BILL), an invoice from Tillman Funeral Home (BALLARD000132), an invoice from Artistic Flowers (BALLARD000133), and receipts for items related to Krystal Ballard's funeral (BALLARD000134).

Request No. 11 requests "[a]ny and all documents, records, writings and physical things that pertain to and reflect payment of all or any portion of the items described in paragraphs 9 and 10 above." Plaintiff currently has no responsive documents in his possession.

Request No. 12 requests "[r]ecords, files, documents and reports of all physicians, health care providers, hospitals, institutions and service providers of Krystal Ballard during the time frame of 2000 to the date of her death." Plaintiff objects to this request to the extent it is overly broad, unduly burdensome, irrelevant and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible and/or relevant evidence. The medical records of Krystal Ballard for a decade are not relevant to any issue in this case. Without waiving or limiting these objections, Plaintiff produces Air Force medical records (USAF000001-USAF000044), a Patient Medical History Form (BALLARD000020), medical records from St. Alphonsus Med. Ctr. (SAMC000001-SAMC000192), medical records from Elmore Medical Center (EMC000001-EMC000029), medical records from Silk Touch Med Spa (STMS000001-STMS00023), medical records from Elmore Ambulance Service (EAS000001-EAS000034), Life Flight Network medical records (LFN000001-LFN000005), Elmore Medical Center billing records (000001BILL-000003BILL), billing records from St. Alphonus Medical Center (000004BILL-000013BILL), billing records from Elmore Ambulance Service (000014BILL), and billing records from Life Flight Network (000019BILL).

Request No. 13 requests "[r]ecords of the United States Air Force for Krystal Ballard that relate to the time period 2005 until her death." Plaintiff objects to this request on the grounds it is overly broad, unduly burdensome, irrelevant, and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible and/or relevant evidence. Defendant's request for "records" is unduly broad. Certainly every United States Air Force record for Krystal Ballard is not relevant to the claims and defenses in this case. Without waiving or limiting these objections, Plaintiff hereby produces USAF Interim Report of Casualty and Final Report of Casualty (BALLARD000017-BALLARD000018), Air Force Medical Records (USAF000001-USAF000044); Geneva Conventions Identification Card (BALLARD000021-BALLARD000022), Performance Feedback Worksheets (BALLARD000024-BALLARD000027), Reenlistment Eligibility Annex to DD Form 4 (BALLARD000028), Request and Authorization for TDY Travel of DOD Personnel (BALLARD000029-BALLARD000030), Joint Spouse Assignment Requests (BALLARD000031-BALLARD000032), Transcript Request - Community College of the AF (BALLARD000033-BALLARD000034), Mountain Home AFB Memorandum Re: Application for Join Spouse Assignment (BALLARD000035), Financial Management and Comptroller Craftsman Workbook (BALLARD000039-BALLARD000100), Change of Projected Assignment Data (BALLARD000038), Servicemembers' Group Life Insurance Election and Certificate (BALLARD000019), United States Air Force Interim and Final Reports of Casualty (BALLARD000017-BALLARD000018), travel voucher or subvoucher for travel to Iraq (BALLARD000036), Department of Air Force memorandum to Krystal Ballard Re: Extension of Enlistment for PCS (BALLARD000037), 2011 United States Air Force pay table (BALLARD000101), 2010 United States Air Force pay tables (BALLARD000102-BALLARD000115), and Air Force Benefit Fact Sheets (BALLARD000116-BALLARD000131).

Request No. 14 requests "[a] list of all physicians, health care providers and hospitals who provided services to Krystal Ballard from 2000 to her death." Plaintiff objects to this request to the extent it is overly broad, unduly burdensome, irrelevant and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible and/or relevant evidence. The requested records of Krystal Ballard for a decade are not relevant to any issue in this case. Without waiving or limiting these objections, Plaintiff produces the documents set forth in Request No. 12.

Request No. 15 requests "[p]hotographs of Krystal Ballard taken during the last 5 years of her life." Plaintiff objects to this request on the grounds it is overly broad, unduly burdensome, irrelevant and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible and/or relevant evidence. . Without waiving or limiting these objections, Plaintiff produces photographs contained within Krystal Ballard's funeral program (BALLARD000004-BALLARD000008), a number of separate photographs (BALLARD000135-BALLARD000149), as well as a video of Krystal Ballard's funeral.

Request No. 16 requests "[p]hotographs of the gravesite of Krystal Ballard including a headstone or marker that depicts wording or comments." Plaintiff produces a photograph (BALLARD000150).

Request No. 17 requests "[r]ecords, reports, files, documents, tangible things and objects of the Ada County Coroner and/or Ada County." Plaintiff hereby produces an Application for Informal Probate of Will and Informal Appointment of Personal Representative (BALLARD000009-BALLARD000012) and the Ada County Coroner Investigative Report, Narrative Report, and Autopsy Report (ADA000001-ADA000011).

Request No. 18 requests the production of "[r]ecords, reports, files, documents, tangible things and objects, of the Office of Special Investigations, United States Air Force, Mountain Home Air Force Base or elsewhere." Plaintiff objects to this request on the grounds it is overly broad, irrelevant and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible and/or relevant evidence. . Without waiving or limiting these objections, Plaintiff produces any and all such records in his possession, which relate to the matters alleged in Plaintiff's Complaint, namely the United States Air Force Interim and Final Reports of Casualty (BALLARD000017-BALLARD000018). Plaintiff will supplement his Response to this Request if he comes into possession of any additional responsive documents.

Request No. 19 requests "[r]ecords, reports, files, documents, tangible things and objects of Dr. Glen Groben and Ada County for the and in conjunction with the autopsy performed on Krystal Ballard." Plaintiff hereby produces a Certificate of Death (BALLARD000003) and the Ada County Coroner Investigative Report, Narrative Report, and Autopsy Report (ADA000001-ADA000011).

Request No. 20 asks Plaintiff to provide "[a]uthorizations signed by Charles Ballard that will allow counsel for Dr. Kerr to obtain the material and items described in paragraphs 12, 13, 17, 18 and 19 directly." Plaintiff incorporates herein each of his objections and responses made to Requests 12, 13, 17, 18, and 19 and refers Defendants to the documents produced in response to each such Request.

Request No. 21 requests "[d]ocuments and records that pertain to and involve the Estate of Krystal Ballard, its administration, adjudication, wrapping up and closure." Plaintiff objects to this request on the grounds it is overly broad, irrelevant, and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible and/or relevant evidence. Without waiving or limiting these objections, Plaintiff produces an Application for Informal Probate of Will and Informal Appointment of Personal Representative (BALLARD000009-BALLARD000012), Information to Heirs and Devisees / Notice of Appointment (BALLARD000013-BALLARD000014), and Letters Testamentary (BALLARD000015-BALLARD000016).

Request No. 22 requests "[t]he last will and testament of Krystal Ballard and any codicils." Request No. 23 requests "[r]ecords, documents and writings that relate to or involve any inheritance for Charles Ballard due to the death of Krystal Ballard and life insurance benefits for Charles Ballard that are due Charles Ballard from life insurance on Krystal Ballard." Request No. 24 requests documents "that reflect and pertain to the current net worth of Charles Ballard." Plaintiff objects to each of these requests (Request Nos. 22, 23, 24) on the grounds they are overly broad, irrelevant, and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible and/or relevant evidence. None of these Requests seek information which has any relevance to the issues in this case.

Request No. 25 requests "[d]ocuments and records that pertain to and reflect prescriptions for medications purchased or acquired by Krystal Ballard from the time of the operation by Dr. Kerr until her death." Plaintiff hereby produces the above-referenced medical records.

Request No. 26 requests the "[d]rivers license of Krystal Ballard that was in effect on the date of her death." Plaintiff hereby produces the requested driver's license (BALLARD000023).

Request No. 27 requests "[d]ocuments, records and writings for applications of Krystal Ballard for any type of insurance that she initiated during the last 3 years before her death." Plaintiff objects to this request on the grounds it is overly broad, irrelevant, and not reasonably calculated to lead to the discovery of admissible and/or relevant evidence. The Request seeks information which has no relevance to the issues in this case.

Request No. 28 requests "[w]ritings, diaries, notes and recordings of Krystal Ballard and Charles Ballard that pertain to and reflect events, facts, conversations with Dr. Kerr and his office staff/employees of Silk Touch Laser." Plaintiff does not possess responsive documents beyond the applicable medical records referenced above.

PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE CUMULATIVE EXPERT WITNESSES

ORIGINAL

COMES NOW the Plaintiff, Charles Ballard, by and through his attorneys, pursuant to Rule 403 of the Idaho Rules of Evidence, and moves this Court to strike cumulative experts. This motion is supported by a memorandum of law, as well as an Affidavit of Counsel, both filed contemporaneously herewith.

On June 3, 2013, Defendants served their First Supplemental Answers to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories, which identifies highly cumulative expert witness testimony. Because Defendants' disclosed expert witness testimony is so blatantly in violation of Rule 403, Defendants should not simply be precluded from introducing such cumulative evidence at trial, but Plaintiff should be spared the undue and unfair prejudice of incurring the expense of a discovery effort, including depositions, involving experts whose role in this case is necessarily limited to offering cumulative testimony.

Though Plaintiff's counsel made an effort to address this issue in good faith with defense counsel, the parties reached no resolution. Therefore, the Court's involvement is now required. Accordingly, Plaintiff now moves this Court for an order limiting Defendants to two expert witnesses, including Defendant, Dr. Kerr, on any single topic.

Dated this 26th day of June, 2013.

SUPPLMENTAL ANSWER TO INTERROGATORY NO. 3:

1) Brian C. Kerr, M.D.
C/o Quane Jones McColl PLLC
101 S. Capitol Blvd. Suite 1601
Boise, Idaho 83701
(208) 780-3939

Subject Matter: Facts of case, applicable standards of health care practice, causation, damages and the care and treatment of Krystal Ballard.

Substance of facts and opinions held: Dr. Kerr is a physician licensed by the state of Idaho to practice medicine and surgery. Dr. Kerr has engaged in the medical specialty of anesthesiology and cosmetic surgery at all times relevant herein. Dr. Kerr will testify as a non-retained expert witness at the trial as to his compliance with the applicable standard of health care practice with respect to all of the medical services rendered to the patient/decedent Krystal Ballard. Dr. Kerr will testify that he has actual knowledge of the standard of health care practice applicable to physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise, Idaho in 2010 and that he met such standard taking into account his background, training, experience and field of medical specialization with respect to any and all medical services rendered to the patient.

Part of the basis for Dr. Kerr's opinions include: his background, training, research, practice and experience in performing cosmetic procedures as a licensed physician in Boise, Idaho, his prior involvement in the peer review process while working as an anesthesiologist, his involvement as an anesthesiologist on thousands of surgeries, his prior medical staff privileges, his knowledge of how cosmetic procedures like liposuction are performed in Boise in 2010, his experience in performing a large volume of liposuction and fat transfer procedures, his knowledge of how the Vaser ultrasonic liposuction procedure is performed, how fat transfers/grafting procedures are performed, his knowledge of the types of equipment and instruments needed to perform the nature and types of cosmetic procedures at issue in this case, his knowledge of the scope of practice of cosmetic providers in Boise, Idaho and elsewhere, and his knowledge of the types of medical providers who perform cosmetic procedures like the ones at issue in this case and his knowledge of the manner and method by which surgical equipment and surgical procedure facilities are maintained in a sterile fashion. Dr. Kerr will explain his training and experience at the Mayo Clinic during his residency in anesthesiology 1989-1992 as it relates to sterile operating conditions for the anesthetic procedures he performed, was taught and observed. He will explain the same matters for his experience as a staff anesthesiologist at Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise from 1992 to 2008.

Dr. Kerr will discuss the standard of health care practice employed at Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center for achieving sterile operating conditions and the disinfection of instruments and equipment and that the similar matters undertaken for the procedure on Krystal Ballard were used and exceeded.

Dr. Kerr will testify that the infection rates at Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center were and are for in excess of any infections he has encountered which are essentially zero, with possibly one or two minor cellulitis cases that were easily treated successfully with no adverse consequences.

By way of these and other professional experiences in Boise, Idaho, Dr. Kerr will testify that he has actual knowledge of community standards of health care practice applicable to him. During his professional career in Boise, Idaho, he has been acquainted with physicians who perform cosmetic procedures who are not plastic surgeons, but rather come from a number of different medical backgrounds including: family practice, anesthesia, general surgery, dermatology and obstetrics and gynecology. Dr. Kerr has become acquainted with the nature and scope of the practice of these other cosmetic procedure providers and the procedures utilized by them in this specialty in Boise, Idaho in 2010, including the procedures utilized for maintaining a sterile field and how to properly clean and maintain the surgical equipment and instruments utilized for cosmetic procedures including the procedures at issue in this case. Dr. Kerr will explain that the standard of health care practice for plastic surgeons is not the standard of health care practice for him or physicians who practice in the same medical specialty he does.

Dr. Kerr will describe and offer testimony on the training he received for the procedures he performed on Krystal Ballard and refer to the publications, data and documents that have been produced in discovery on this subject that are incorporated herein by this reference and explain the numerous similar procedures he performed before his treatment of Krystal Ballard, consisting of 199 liposuctions through July 20, 2010 and 33 fat transfers through July 20, 2010.

Dr. Kerr will explain that there was no requirement, per the standard of health care practice or otherwise, for his facility to be certified, inspected or approved by any organization or government agency, which included his autoclave, his clinic and the instruments he used for surgery and that his medical license allowed him to conduct his medical practice and the procedure he performed on Krystal Ballard.

During Dr. Kerr's professional career in Boise, Idaho, he has received specific training in various lipolysis procedures including traditional, laser assisted and ultrasonic assisted lipolysis. He will testify that he had adequate training and experience to perform the liposuction and fat transfer procedures on the patient at issue. He will testify regarding the significant experience he has in performing these types of procedures as part of his cosmetic practice. He will testify that it was appropriate for the procedures at issue to be performed on patients like Krystal Ballard in an office based setting without general anesthesia and that he had proper facilities, equipment and personnel to do these procedures safely and within the applicable local standard of health care practice. As reflected in his deposition testimony and discovery responses which are hereby incorporated as if set forth in full, Dr. Kerr had performed these procedures on numerous other patients before and since the procedure at issue in this case. Dr. Kerr will testify that he possesses the professional knowledge and experience that allows him to express the opinions and testimony described in this document.

Dr. Kerr will testify that he has never had a patient experience a post-operative complication like the one alleged in this case nor has he ever had a patient experience a post-operative infection of this nature, nor a patient death. Based in part on his review of this case and in consultation with experienced and trained medical professionals in several other areas of medicine including infectious disease and pathology, he will testify that the patient's death was not due to any error or omission on his part or the part of anyone associated with his practice. He will testify that he employed the use of proper cleaning and sterilization techniques for his equipment and instruments and that he utilized proper procedures and supplies. Dr. Kerr will explain the procedures he performed on patients the days following his procedure on Krystal Ballard, starting on July 23, 2010 through July 31, 2010 in which he utilized the same sterile and disinfection procedures he employed in his procedure on Krystal Ballard and there were no infections or infectious conditions with any of the patients. He will explain the same matters in regard to the multitude of procedures her performed before the procedure he performed on Krystal Ballard. He will render the opinion that his liposuction and fat transfer procedures did not cause or result in the introduction of any bacteria to the patient. Dr. Kerr actually holds the opinions expressed in this document and that his opinions will be stated on a more probable than not basis or reasonable medical certainty.

Dr. Kerr will testify that nothing he elected to do or not do with respect to the medical services provided to Krystal Ballard in Boise in 2010 violated the applicable local standard of health care practice which in turn caused or contributed to any damages or injuries to the patient. Dr. Kerr will testify that the unfortunate death of Krystal Ballard was not and cannot be assumed to be the result of violations of the standard of health care practice by him. He will testify that the standard of health care practice applicable to physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise is established by the local community of physicians engaged in this specialty and the way they typically practice in the community and not by any organization, academic center, publication, foreign physician, or by virtue of any specialty board certification. Dr. Kerr's testimony at trial will necessarily contain a mixed component of both factual and expert testimony. He will opine that the standard of health care practice is the care typically provided under similar circumstances by Boise physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise, Idaho in 2010.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Kerr will express and define the local standard of practice as it existed in Boise in 2010 with respect to the medical issues in this case consistent with his deposition testimony, prior discovery responses and the contents of this disclosure which are hereby incorporated. He will discuss how compliance with the standard of practice does not guarantee a perfect result and its application and compliance is intended to minimize and hopefully largely reduce undesirable and unintended results. The standard of healthcare practice for physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery is not perfect and no perfect outcome was ever warranted or represented to the patient. The standard of practice applicable includes as a major element aspects of provider judgment as opposed to the application of science which may vary depending on the patient and care circumstances. Dr. Kerr will be prepared to testify about his experiences in this regard at trial and why his care in this case was consistent with the standards of practice he is held to. As with all operative procedures, the risk of infection is always a possibility and Dr. Kerr will explain that post-operative infection, if it should develop, is an accepted and recognized risk factor that is not due to inappropriate care or violations of the standard of health care practice by the physician and that under the best of circumstances and medical care, infections may occur. Dr. Kerr will explain the advice and information given to Krystal Ballard in regard to the risk, benefits and options he provided to Krystal Ballard on two occasions before his procedure on July 21, 2010 which is documented in his medical records. Dr. Kerr will explain the standard of health care practice that is applicable to him and that everything undertaken by him in his care and treatment of Krystal Ballard is illustrative of the standard of health care practice, based on the class of health care provider to which he belonged and in which capacity he was functioning. Dr. Kerr will explain that the standard of health care practice provides that he is to be judged and evaluated in comparison with similarly trained and qualified physicians of the same class as himself, taking into account his training, experience and field of medical specialization.

As part of his testimony and consistent with his specialty of anesthesiology and cosmetic surgery, Dr. Kerr is expected to testify concerning the totality of medical services provided to Krystal Ballard. As part of his testimony, Dr. Kerr will discuss his training and the certifications he obtained in order to become a physician engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery. He will discuss his care and treatment of the patient as outlined in the patient's medical records as well as his conversations and interactions with the patient and her husband as discussed in the documents produced in discovery and/or attached as exhibits to Dr. Kerr's deposition. To the extent it is relevant to his opinions, he will also discuss his continuing education courses since transitioning from anesthesia to cosmetic procedures including his further knowledge of cosmetic surgery which includes both the Vaser procedure and fat injection procedures and how they are performed in different locations in this body.

With respect to the fat injection, he will discuss how a person's own fat may be used to improve the appearance of the body by moving it from an area where it is less needed (usually the thighs or abdomen) to an area that has less tissue volume. He will explain how typically, the transferred fat results in an increase in volume of the body site being treated. Before the procedure, the areas from where the fat is being removed are injected with a fluid to minimize bruising and discomfort. The fat is removed from the body by a cannula through a small incision. He will discuss how the fat is prepared to be reinjected back into the patient's body and then placed into the desired area using either a smaller cannula, or as was done in this case, a needle. He will explain how some of the fat that is transferred often does not maintain its volume over time, which is often addressed by injecting more than is needed at the time to achieve the desired end result. Over a few weeks, the amount of transferred fat will decrease. He will explain how the fat transfer procedure was done using a local anesthetic and that this was consistent with the local standard of practice given the nature and extent of the procedure.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Kerr will discuss the entries in his records including his first encounter with the patient on July 13, 2010, what treatment she desired, the fact that this was an elective procedure, that it was a purely cosmetic procedure, he will discuss the patient's health history form, the fact that she had previously had a liposuction procedure and desired further treatment of this type, the general state of the patient's health, the operative report and a detailed explanation of how he did the procedure on July 21, 2010, he will discuss the patient's vital signs and her clinical condition before during and after the surgery as well as at the post-operative visit with the patient, his pre-operative, intra operative and post-operative discussions, instructions and directions shared with the patient and then ultimately the discussions he had with patient's husband and aunt, he will discuss the technical aspects of the Vaser liposuction procedure including how the local anesthetic is given, how the tumescent anesthetic is prepared and injected, what it does to the adipose tissue, how the Vaser device operates to liquefy the adipose tissue, how and where the cannulas are placed, the amount of energy applied to the device to effectuate the desired impact on the adipose tissue, he will explain the artistic nature of the procedure and the laborious aspect of moving the cannula back and forth to feather the tissue and achieve the desired aesthetic result.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Kerr will explain the manner and method by which the adipose tissue harvested is then drained and prepared for reinjection, how the instruments and equipment are routinely cleaned and sterilized for each procedure, he will discuss those pieces of equipment and/or attachments and medical goods which are new versus sterilized for reuse between patients and/or procedures, he will discuss the pre and post-operative antibiotics he administered to the patient and the reasons why they were appropriate, he will discuss how the patient never appeared infected or septic to him or even to be suffering from any signs or symptoms of any infection beyond general localized pain in her buttocks which would be expected initially from this type of procedure. He will discuss the cardinal signs of infection and how the patient did not have any fever or warmth to the surgical area, there was no oozing of pus or other signs of active drainage from the operative sites, there was no swelling or signs of a rash or change in condition of the skin surrounding the area. Dr. Kerr will explain how he looked for and documented the absence of these signs and symptoms during his postoperative visit on July 23 and in his subsequent discussions with the patient and her husband prior to her death. He will testify that at no point did the patient present to him as having an infection nor did the standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr require him to refer the patient, prescribe a different course of medical care or obtain any further diagnostic testing than was done. He will discuss his knowledge of gram negative rods and the fact that they do not exist on the skin nor would they be found on his instruments, but rather they are a class of bacteria which resides in the bladder, bowels and urinary tract of a patient.

Dr. Kerr will discuss why the Vaser procedure is an appropriate method of removing unwanted adipose tissue in a patient like Krystal Ballard. He will testify that he had adequate training and experience to perform the surgical procedures on the patient in question and that he performed these procedures in conformity with the local standard of practice to which Dr. Kerr is held. He will explain how the field of laser lipolysis with the use of tumescent anesthesia has expended in recent years. He will discuss how when considering different types of the body for lipolysis that each area has its own unique geography and involves a degree of physician judgment as to how much material to remove and/or reinject into each location. He will explain the positioning of the patient, incision sites, pre and post-operative photos, patient behavior, choice of instruments, his artistic eye and attention to detail, management of patient expectations, and patient education and counseling from the informed consent phase through the postoperative follow up period. He is expected to utilize at trial various anatomical illustrations as well as various cannulas and related instrumentation for the procedures at issue including those depicted in the discovery photos of instruments and supplies produced to date.

As part of his testimony, he will explain how Vaser Lipo involves a minimally invasive technique to selectively break apart and gently remove unwanted fat. He will explain how the targeted area is injected with a special saline solution known as tumescent fluid which numbs the target area and shrinks local blood vessels. This also temporarily expands the volume of the targeted area, making fat cells easier to remove.

Small-diameter probes are then inserted into the body through small incisions. He will explain how by resonating at a high ultrasonic frequency, the probes literally shake loose fat cells — while leaving blood vessels, nerves and connective tissues unharmed. The loose fat cells mix with the tumescent fluid, which is then removed from the body using gentle suction. After the surgery, patients are prescribed a recovery regimen to promote maximum skin retraction, smoother results with minimal recovery time compared to traditional liposuction.

Dr. Kerr may also discuss his knowledge of the history of tumescent technique liposuction which was started by dermatologists, not plastic surgeons. He will discuss his operative report and how he creates his medical record documentation, how and why he selected the antibiotics in question including the decision on July 23 to place the patient on 500 mg of Keflex and that this was an appropriate broad spectrum antibiotic to provide the patient given her location in Mountain Home, he will explain how the affected area is expected to drain postoperatively, the types of dressings placed on the affected area, the instructions given to the patient, he will discuss the cardinal signs of an infection and how he specifically evaluated, questioned the patient and documented regarding these issues on each encounter he had with the patient. He will discuss the amount of time it takes to perform the procedures in question and that he took the appropriate amount of time to address this patient during her procedure on July 21, 2010. He will discuss his knowledge of the various cosmetic organizations to which he belongs and/or has knowledge of, what they offer their members and the opportunities to associate with colleagues and obtain continuing education in this emerging field. Dr. Kerr will explain the matter he undertook on July 23, 2010 for evaluating Krystal Ballard and assessing whether there was any clinical evidence of infection of the surgical sites, including abnormal odor, and thus there was no evidence or suggestion of infection of the sites.

He will discuss how on July 26, 2010 he learned around 1 p.m. that Krystal Ballard had died. After the patient's death he sent a document setting forth his list of concerns to the coroner who he asked for a copy of the autopsy record. He will discuss the hospital records from Elmore Medical Center and St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, including the laboratory reports showing the patient had 3+ bacteria in her urine and that this is consistent with an infectious process in the patient's bladder. This is also an area wherein gram negative rod bacteria are known to populate and exist. He will discuss how the patient did not present with any fever, but had a WBC count of 14.7. He will discuss causes for an elevated WBC count including surgery. He will comment upon the fact that the autopsy failed to address the patient's bladder or perform any microscopic examination of that organ to address the nature of the bacteria identified in the positive UA performed at Elmore Medical Center on July 25, 2010. Dr. Kerr is expected to offer testimony on the autopsy report of Dr. Glen Groben and the matters he described in his deposition in regard to the report, including the fact that Dr. Groben did not perform a microscopic evaluation of the bladder and urinary tract with the exception of the kidneys.

Dr. Kerr is also expected to discuss the patient's elevated creatinine and how this can be signs of dehydration as well as the evidence that the patient's kidneys were not functioning properly. He will address the vague and confusing nature of the autopsy report wherein the pathologist at autopsy referred to an increase in the amount of acute inflammatory cells within tissue from the surgical sites, it is not clear which surgical sites he is referring to in his report. He will discuss how it is not clear where the tissue sections where harvested from on the patient. Dr. Kerr will render the opinion, more likely than not, that the gram negative bacterial rods, if they existed, were introduced into the patient's surgical site sometime after the procedure rather than being introduced during the procedure. He has never had a patient experience such an infection in all his years. Dr. Kerr will testify that few of his patients who have undergone a lipolysis procedure have ever experienced any kind of post-operative infection and none of those patients died and all of them were diagnosed based on clinical observation. These were limited cellulitis based on clinical suspicion and not based on a culture result. Dr. Kerr will explain that if the opinions of Dr. Dean Sorensen are valid, there should have been other infections of patients before and after the procedure on Krystal Ballard, and there were not.

Dr. Kerr will testify that when he saw the patient on July 23, two days post operatively, he did not observe any evidence of cellulitis or redness in the surgical site. He will discuss how the patient repeatedly concealed this procedure from her husband and the military and that she was noncompliant with what she had been told both in writing and verbally about how to care for herself. He will discuss how the patient erroneously reported that she had fallen and injured her back and claimed this was the source of her pain rather than admit she had cosmetic surgery performed. He will discuss how the patient admitted she was not taking her medications because she did not want proof of them to show up in any drug screen she might take with the military. He will also discuss how the patient admitted to engaging in activities she was told to refrain from in order to allow her body time to heal. He will discuss his concern that the patient was not properly changing her bandages and caring for herself as instructed and how during any of these times would have been an opportunity for the bacteria in question to be introduced into her system.

Dr. Kerr will testify that he and his employees followed the appropriate sterile technique in regards to the procedure he performed on Krystal Ballard. He will explain that there are no absolutes with a sterile technique and that one can do everything right and still have situations where unwanted bacteria can become introduced into the surgical site. He will discuss the patient's admission that she was not taking the narcotic pain medication Norco and was instead taking the non-narcotic drug Motrin which did not appear to be providing the patient with adequate pain control. He will explain how the patient was not following the instructions on how to care for herself, change her bandages, and get appropriate rest. He will discuss the patient's disclosure that she had a PT exam in the military scheduled for a day or two after the procedure and was told that she should not engage in that activity. He will discuss how the patient agreed to tell her husband that she had the cosmetic procedure done so he could help care for her, but then she failed to do so on multiple occasions. He will explain that when the patient showed up on July 21 to have the procedure she did not have someone present to drive her home as she was instructed to do. Dr. Kerr will discuss how he did not use a sedating drug with the patient and then observed her for a period of time after the procedure before allowing her to drive home and even offered to have a taxi take the patient home.

The patient was placed on 500 mg of Keflex per day for 10 days as of the July 23 visit. He would have removed the bandages in order to personally observe the area of the wound to check for signs and symptoms of infection. He will testify that the amount of bruising and edema observed on July 23 was consistent with what he would expect to see at that point postoperatively. He will testify that the standard of practice did not require him to obtain a complete blood count on the patient on July 23 in order to determine what her white count was at that time. He will discuss his training in performing liposuction he received from both John Lundeby and at the Keller Medical Institute. He will discuss his experiences with and the differences between Smart Lipo, Ultrasonic liposuction and traditional liposuction. He will discuss his background, training and experience in the use and regular implementation of the sterile technique. He will discuss how this is an office based procedure which is not required to be performed in a hospital setting, nor are hospital privileges required in order to perform such a procedure. He was not required, nor does the standard of practice require that his facility be certified or approved by any accreditation facility such as the AAACH or AAAASF.

He will discuss how his procedure room is prepared for surgery, how the patient, himself, his assistant and the patient are all prepared for surgery and the sterile technique utilized. He will discuss the autoclave he uses, how it operates and how it helps him maintain a sterile field for his procedures. He will testify that he was not required to test for spores or mold and that these issues have nothing to do with the case. He will discuss the areas around the patient which are considered part of the sterile field depending on the nature and type of procedure at issue. He will discuss the operation and use of the Vaser ultrasonic lipolysis machine utilized for the procedure in this case. He will explain how the tumescent lidocaine is mixed, prepared and injected into the patient. He will explain how the Vaser procedure is done with the device in place under the skin without direct visualization. He will discuss how he harvested 400 cc of fat from the patient's anterior abdomen, 200 cc of fat from her right lateral waist flank and 200 cc of fat from the patient's left lateral waist flank. He will discuss how the Vaser in this case was utilized for less than eleven minutes despite the fact the patient was in the procedure room for around four hours. He will discuss the different cannulas used to aspirate the fat and the artistic technique required to accomplish the desired aesthetic outcome.

He will explain how the fat was injected into the patient using only a needle and syringe and that there were no incisions made into the patient during the injection phase of the procedure. He will testify that it was proper and acceptable technique for the same needles to be used to inject the fat into both the left and right buttocks of the patient. He will discuss his informed consent discussion with the patient including the contents of the informed consent document signed by the patient in this case. He will discuss the risk of infection as being a specifically consented risk of the lipolysis and fat injection procedure. He will discuss how the consent form discusses with the patient both pre and post treatment instructions and how it warns the patient that if they fail to comply with these instructions may increase the possibility that the patient will develop complications. He will discuss and interpret the entries in his medical records.

Dr. Kerr will render his opinions consistent with the requirements of Idaho Code §6-1012 and 6-1013. In this regard, he will challenge the foundation as well as rebut the opinions of the expert witnesses listed by the Plaintiff. Regarding the issue of consent, he will testify that he discussed with the patient the nature and the extent of the risks normally attendant to the procedure in question such that the giving of consent by the patient was valid in all respects consistent with the requirements of Idaho Code §39-4506. As part of his testimony, he may also discuss his preoperative clinical examination including evaluation of the regions to be lipo-contoured including review for hernias, scars, asymmetries, cellulite, stretch marks, the quality of the skin and its elasticity, the presence of stria and dimpling and the location of fat deposits. He will rebut any testimony by Plaintiff's experts that he improperly performed the lipolysis procedure, the fat injection procedure, that he improperly sterilized his equipment or that he did anything to cause the patient's death. Depending on the testimony of Dr. Dean Sorensen at trial, Dr. Kerr may offer testimony on and descriptive of the fact that Dr. Sorensen is a competitor of his and advertises his belief that non-plastic surgeons should not do liposuction, such as his website that states "unfortunately, there are a number of procedures being performed by physicians who are not trained in plastic surgery. These non-plastic surgeons often utilize technologies that have catchy names and are expensive but in clinical trials have not shown any significant improvement over the standard tumescent liposuction techniques. Patients are advised to select a procedure that is safe and effective based on scientific results performed by a Board Certified plastic surgeon and to ignore the marketing hype so common today." Depending on the proof submitted at trial and the testimony of Dr. Sorensen and/or the tenor or implication of his testimony and opinions, Dr. Kerr may describe the lawsuit against Dr. Sorensen in Boise that resulted in the jury rendering a verdict of malpractice against him and assessing damages of a substantial amount against him. Dr. Kerr may testify that Dr. Sorensen has never observed or seen the operating procedures of his, including his sterile techniques, use of instruments, disinfectant matters and the way he performed the procedures on Krystal Ballard.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Kerr will discuss the patient's anatomy including the location of nerves, blood supply, adipose tissue, organs as well as the body's response to surgery, infection, pain medication and antibiotics. This may include extensive testimony by way of demonstrative exhibits depicting general anatomy and/or pictures of the patient and/or of the surgical equipment itself. Dr. Kerr will testify that he had the best interests of the patient in mind and that he was committed to the rendition of his services in full compliance with the applicable local standard of health care practice and his experience and capability. He will testify that even in hindsight the patient did not present with any increased risk for infection that would have raised any concern about her undergoing the procedures on July 21, 2010. At the time of Dr. Kerr's procedure on July 21, 2010, there was no evidence of a urinary tract infection of Krystal Ballard and Dr. Kerr will opine that Krystal Ballard was not suffering from a urinary tract infection on July 21, 2010.

Data and other information considered and summary of qualifications: In forming his opinions, Dr. Kerr has relied upon his own unique training and experience as a licensed physician engaged in the medical specialty of anesthesia and cosmetic surgery in Boise, Idaho in 2010 in treating, diagnosing, managing and caring for patients like Krystal Ballard, his observations of the habits and practices of other cosmetic surgeons and care providers, his knowledge that it is within his specialty and capability to perform the procedures in question as part of his practice of medicine, his interactions with cosmetic providers, and his membership and participation in various medical associations, including those in the state of Idaho. The data upon which his opinions are based include his medical education, training, skill, experience, his experience practicing cosmetic surgery within Boise, his review of the care and treatment experiences with similar lipolysis and fat injection cases over the course of his career in medicine in Boise.

Dr. Kerr will discuss the ability, competence and proficiency of Brianna Kerr as a surgical assistant and the manner in which she maintains sterile conditions for surgeries, and the fact that she did nothing in the surgery of Krystal Ballard that would create or contribute to an infection.

His opinions are also based upon the findings of various other health care providers for the patient, the results and values of various laboratory studies and other testing and observation, treatment plans, consultations, referrals and recommendations for treatment for the patient derived from such medical services and interactions before, during and after the care rendered by Dr. Kerr as described in all medical records, affidavits, discovery responses and depositions taken. Dr. Kerr's professional background and qualifications were discussed in his deposition and are incorporated herein. As part of his review of this case, and for purposes of forming his opinions, he has considered and reviewed the depositions taken to date including his own, his employees, and the Plaintiff's. He has also reviewed and considered his medical records, the records of Elmore Medical Center, Elmore Ambulance Service, Life Flight, St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, the Ada County Coroner's Office and the Plaintiff's expert witness disclosure. In the event further depositions or medical records are produced, they will also be considered. Dr. Kerr will explain the weight changes of Krystal Ballard. On July 23, 2010 she weighed 135 pounds. On July 25, 2010 at Elmore Medical Center she weighed 130 pounds. At autopsy on July 26, 2010 she weighed 180 pounds. He will explain the medical reasons and significance of these changes in weight.

At Elmore Medical Center, July 25, 2010, the treating physician evaluated the buttocks and abdomen of Krystal Ballard and noted little induration of the skin and no redness, warmth or skin sensitivity and delayed the administration of IV antibiotics until 4 ½ hours after admission. At Elmore, cardiac ejection fraction was only 17% and at St. Alphonsus on July 25, 2010, central venous pressure was measured at 20 which is very high and proof of fluid overlaid. Dr. Kerr will explain these factors and their relative significance in terms of the possible reasons for the death of Krystal Ballard.

Dr. Kerr will testify that the laboratory data of Elmore Medical Center and the clinical findings are indicative of a developing urinary tract infection or abnormalities that developed after his procedure of July 21, 2010 and if gram negative rods were in fact present at autopsy in certain locations, they came from the urinary tract of Krystal Ballard or her intestinal tract and were not introduced during his surgical procedure. Bacteria was found in the urinalysis at Elmore.

It is expected that Dr. Kerr will explain pertinent anatomy, infectious processes, pathophysiology of infections, nidus for infections, gram negative rods, types of bacteria, reasons why the blood cultures and urine cultures were negative for growth, antibiotics used for the care and the comments of Krystal Ballard regarding what drugs would show up on drug test by the Air Force. He will also explain the post-surgery matters he undertook and his efforts to assist Krystal Ballard, including the importance of the post-treatment instructions given to Krystal Ballard as denoted in his medical records and the evidence that is consistent with non-compliance by Krystal Ballard.

Dr. Kerr reserves the right to rely as further support for his opinions on medical literature related to any of the subjects set forth in this disclosure as discovery continues. Dr. Kerr reserves the right not to offer all or any of the opinions set forth in this disclosure as it as an attorney prepared document and is intentionally worded broadly in order to comply with rule 26(b)(4). The ultimate testimony to be offered at trial will depend to an extent on what testimony is deemed necessary to refute the testimony of the Plaintiff and his experts consistent with the requirements of Idaho Code §6-1012. Plaintiff has the burden of proof and it is only after that burden has been met can the defense determine what evidence and testimony will be needed to respond. Dr. Kerr has not testified in any matter in the last four years. He is not a retained expert. His curriculum vitae was previously produced and is incorporated by this reference.

2) Gregory Laurence, M.D.
Germantown Aesthetics

Germantown, Tennessee 38138
(901) 624-5605

Subject Matter: Facts of case, applicable standards of health care practice, causation, damages and the care and treatment of Krystal Ballard.

Substance of facts and opinions held: Dr. Laurence is a physician licensed in the state of Tennessee to practice medicine and surgery. Dr. Laurence is board certified in both family practice and laser surgery and has engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery at all times relevant herein. Dr. Laurence will testify as a retained expert witness at the trial. Dr. Laurence will testify that he has actual knowledge of the standard of health care practice applicable to physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise, Idaho in 2010 and that in his opinion Dr. Kerr met such standard taking into account Dr. Kerr's background, training, experience and field of medical specialization with respect to any and all medical services rendered to the patient.

Dr. Laurence will explain the process he undertook in order to familiarize himself with the standards and practices in Boise and the surrounding area for the types of procedures and treatment performed by Dr. Kerr in this case. Part of the basis for Dr. Laurence's opinions include: his background, training, research, practice and experience in performing cosmetic procedures as a licensed physician, his experiences in the peer review process associated with his hospital staff privileges at Baptist Memorial Hospital and St. Francis Hospital in Memphis, Tennessee, his experience of having performed hundreds of cosmetic surgical procedures, his knowledge of how cosmetic procedures like liposuction and fat transfers were performed in Boise in 2010, his experience in performing a large volume of liposuction and fat transfer procedures, his knowledge of how the Vaser ultrasonic liposuction procedure is performed, how fat transfers/grafting procedures are performed, his knowledge of the types of equipment and instruments needed to perform the nature and types of cosmetic procedures at issue in this case, his knowledge of the scope of practice of cosmetic providers like Dr. Kerr in Boise, Idaho and elsewhere, his knowledge of the types of medical providers who perform cosmetic procedures like the ones at issue in this case and his knowledge of the manner and method by which surgical equipment and surgical procedure facilities are maintained in a sterile fashion. As part of his testimony, Dr. Laurence may also explain his training and experience at the University of Tennessee during his residency in family practice in 1992-95 as it relates to sterile operating conditions for the procedures he performed, was taught and observed. He will explain the same matters for his experience in his own aesthetics surgical center which he operates in Germantown, Tennessee from 2003 to the present.

Dr. Laurence will discuss the standard of health care practice employed at his own surgical facility in Tennessee for achieving sterile operating conditions and the disinfection of instruments and equipment and maintaining a sterile operative field and that the similar actions and efforts undertaken by Dr. Kerr as have been described for the procedure on Krystal Ballard in this case were used and exceeded in his opinion. Dr. Laurence will testify that the infection rates described by Dr. Kerr in his deposition and discovery responses are well below average for a cosmetic facility and are essentially zero, with possibly one or two minor cellulitis cases that were easily treated successfully with no adverse consequences. He will comment upon how this is evidence that the sterility procedures employed by the Defendants in this case were appropriate and working properly at the time of the surgery at issue in this case.

Dr. Laurence will testify that during his professional career he has been acquainted with numerous physicians who perform cosmetic procedures that are not plastic surgeons, but rather come from a number of different medical backgrounds including: family practice, anesthesia, general surgery, dermatology and obstetrics and gynecology. He will discuss the training he has been provided in cosmetic surgery by various physicians who are not plastic surgeons. Dr. Laurence has become acquainted with the nature and scope of the practice of these other cosmetic procedure providers and the procedures utilized by them in this specialty, including the procedures utilized for maintaining a sterile field and how to properly clean and maintain the surgical equipment and instruments utilized for cosmetic procedures including the procedures at issue in this case. Dr. Laurence will explain that the standard of health care practice for plastic surgeons is not the standard of health care practice in the same medical specialty as his and Dr. Kerr.

Dr. Laurence will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr had proper training and experience in order to perform the procedures at issue on Krystal Ballard. As part of his testimony, he is expected to refer to the publications, data and documents that have been produced in discovery on this subject and explain the numbers of similar procedures he has performed. Dr. Laurence will explain that there was no requirement, per the standard of health care practice or otherwise, for Dr. Kerr's facility to be certified, inspected or approved by any organization or government agency, which included his autoclave, his clinic and the instruments he used for surgery and that his medical license allowed him to conduct his medical practice and the procedures he performed on Krystal Ballard. He will testify that he was not required to test for spores or mold and that these issues have nothing to do with the case.

During Dr. Laurence's professional career he has received specific training in various lipolysis procedures including traditional, laser assisted and ultrasonic assisted lipolysis. He will testify that he has reviewed the nature and degree of training obtained by Dr. Kerr and that in his opinion Dr. Kerr had adequate training and experience to perform the liposuction and fat transfer procedures on the patient at issue. Dr. Laurence will testify regarding the significant experience he has in performing these types of procedures as part of his cosmetic practice. He will testify that it was appropriate for the procedures at issue to be performed on patients like Krystal Ballard in an office based setting without general anesthesia and that Dr. Kerr had proper facilities, equipment and personnel to do these procedures safely and within the applicable local standard of health care practice. Dr. Laurence will testify that he possesses the professional knowledge and experience that allows him to express the opinion and testimony described in this document.

Dr. Laurence will testify that the fact this patient experienced a post-operative complication like the one alleged in this case which resulted in a patient death does not establish that the standard of practice was violated by Dr. Kerr. He will testify that postoperative infections are not proof of a violation. He will render the opinion that the patient's death was not due to any error or omission on Dr. Kerr's part or the part of anyone associated with his practice. He will discuss his own sterilization techniques, training and experience in this area which will help support his opinion that Dr. Kerr employed the use of proper cleaning and sterilization techniques for his equipment and instruments and that he utilized proper procedures and supplies.

Dr. Laurence will testify regarding the significance of the fact that the procedures Dr. Kerr performed on patients the days following his procedure on Krystal Ballard, starting on July 23, 2010 through July 31, 2010 in which he utilized the same sterile and disinfection procedures he employed in his procedure on Krystal Ballard and there were no infections or infectious conditions with any of the patients. He will discuss how if there had been a failure to adequately sterilize the equipment in question that evidence of that should have shown up not only in all of the operative sites on this patient, but also in all of the operative sites of the subsequent patients which did not occur in this case. Dr. Laurence will similarly discuss the significance of these same matters in regards to the multitude of procedures Dr. Kerr performed before the procedures performed on Krystal Ballard.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Laurence will render the opinion that the surgical technique employed by Dr. Kerr during his liposuction and fat transfer procedures did not cause or result in the introduction of any bacteria to the patient. Dr. Laurence actually holds the opinions expressed in this document and will express all opinions stated herein on a more probable than not basis and/or to a reasonable degree of medical certainty.

Dr. Laurence will testify regarding the specific issues set forth in this disclosure, but he will also testify globally that nothing Dr. Kerr elected to do or not do with respect to the medical services provided to Krystal Ballard in Boise in 2010 violated the applicable local standard of health care practice which in turn caused or contributed to any damages or injuries to the patient. Dr. Laurence will testify that the unfortunate death of Krystal Ballard was not and cannot be assumed to be the result of violations of the standard of health care practice.

Dr. Laurence will testify that the standard of health care practice applicable to physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise in 2010 is established by the local community of physicians engaged in this specialty and the way they typically practice in the community and not by any organization, academic center, publication, foreign physician, or by virtue of any specialty board certification. In this regard, Dr. Laurence will testify regarding his various publications, honors and university appointments as set forth in his curriculum vitae which is hereby incorporated as if set forth in full. He will also discuss his various society memberships which provide him with opportunities to expand his knowledge and networking base in the field of cosmetic surgery including his affiliations with the American Institute of Ultrasound Medicine, the Association of American Physicians and Surgeons, the American Society of Cosmetic Breast Surgeons, and the National Society of Cosmetic Physicians.

Dr. Laurence will opine that the standard of health care practice is the care typically provided under similar circumstances by Boise physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise, Idaho in 2010. As part of his testimony, Dr. Laurence will express and define the local standard of practice as it existed in Boise in 2010 with respect to the medical issues in this case consistent with this disclosure and any deposition which may subsequently be taken and which is hereby incorporated as if set forth in full. Dr. Laurence holds the opinion and will discuss how compliance with the standard of practice does not guarantee a perfect result and its application and compliance is intended to minimize and hopefully largely reduce undesirable and unintended results. He will explain that the standard of healthcare practice for physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery is not perfect and the records and deposition testimony demonstrate and confirm that no perfect outcome was ever warranted or represented to this patient.

Dr. Laurence will explain how the standard of practice applicable includes, as a major element, aspects of provider judgment as opposed to the application of science which may vary depending on the patient and care circumstances. He will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr provided appropriate post-operative instructions and properly followed the patient and communicated with her and her family. Dr. Laurence will be prepared to testify about his experiences in this regard at trial and why Dr. Kerr's care in this case was consistent with the standards of practice he is held to. As with all operative procedures, the risk of infection is always a possibility and Dr. Laurence will explain that post-operative infection, if it should develop, is an accepted and recognized risk factor that is not due to inappropriate care or violations of the standard of health care practice by the physician and that under the best of circumstances and medical care, infections can and do occur.

Dr. Laurence will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr gave appropriate advice and information to Krystal Ballard in regard to the risk, benefits and options prior to the procedure on July 21, 2010 which is documented in Dr. Kerr's medical records. Dr. Laurence will explain that everything undertaken by Dr. Kerr in his care and treatment of Krystal Ballard is illustrative of, and in compliance with, the standard of health care practice, based on the class of health care provider to which Dr. Kerr belonged and in which capacity he was functioning. Dr. Laurence will explain that the standard of health care practice provides that Dr. Kerr must be judged and evaluated in comparison with similarly trained and qualified physicians of the same class as himself, taking into account his training, experience and field of medical specialization and not by a plastic surgeon which Plaintiff is unfairly trying to do in this case.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Laurence will discuss his training and the certifications he obtained in order to become a physician engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery as well as the adequacy and nature of those obtained by Dr. Kerr. He will discuss the care and treatment of the patient as outlined in the patient's medical records and he will discuss the appropriate nature, timing and content of Dr. Kerr's documented conversations and interactions with the patient and her husband.

With respect to the fat injection procedure at issue, Dr. Laurence will discuss and explain to the jury the medical basis upon which a person's own fat may be used to improve the appearance of the body by moving it from an area where it is less needed (usually the thighs or abdomen) to an area that has less tissue volume. He will explain how typically, the transferred fat results in an increase in volume of the body site being treated. He will explain how before the removal procedure begins the areas from where the fat is being removed are injected with a tumescent fluid which helps to minimize bruising and discomfort to the patient. He will explain how and why the adipose tissue or fat is freed and ultimately removed from the body via a cannula placed through a small incision in the patient's skin.

Dr. Laurence will discuss and describe how the adipose tissue is then prepared to be re-injected back into the patient's body and strategically placed into the desired area using either a smaller cannula, or as was done in this case, a needle. He will render the opinion that the manner, method and volume by which Dr. Kerr re-injected the adipose tissue back into the patient was appropriate in all respects. He will explain how some of the fat that is transferred often does not maintain its volume over time, which is often addressed by the physician having to re-inject more adipose tissue into a specific location to achieve the desired end aesthetic result. He will explain how the fat transfer procedure was done using a local anesthetic and that this was consistent with the local standard of practice given the nature and extent of the procedure.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Laurence will discuss the entries in Dr. Kerr's records including the first encounter with the patient on July 13, 2010, what treatment she desired, the fact that this was an elective procedure, that it was a purely cosmetic procedure, he will discuss the entries in patient's health history form, the general state of the patient's health and the absence of risk factors for infection preoperatively, the fact that she had previously had a liposuction procedure and desired further treatment of this type. To the extent it is relevant to his opinions, Dr. Laurence will also discuss Dr. Kerr's operative report as well as an explanation of how the procedure was performed, the patient's vital signs and her clinical condition before and after the surgery as well as at the post-operative visit with the patient. He will discuss the adequacy of the Dr. Kerr's post-operative discussions, instructions and directions shared with the patient and then ultimately the discussions he had with patient's husband and aunt. Dr. Laurence will explain that Krystal Ballard appeared to be in good health and without a urinary tract infection before the procedure on July 21, 2010 and there is no evidence that she had a urinary tract infection and that the pre-operative work up of Dr. Kerr was within the standard of health care practice.

Dr. Laurence will discuss the technical aspects of the Vaser liposuction procedure including how the local anesthetic is given, how the tumescent anesthetic is prepared and injected, what it does to the adipose tissue, how the Vaser device operates to liquefy the adipose tissue, how and where the cannulas are placed, the amount of energy applied to the device to effectuate the desired impact on the adipose tissue, and the amount of traction applied to free the adipose tissue. From his unique perspective as a cosmetic surgeon, Dr. Laurence will explain the artistic nature of the liposuction procedure and the laborious aspect of moving the cannula back and forth in order to feather the tissue and achieve the desired aesthetic result which varies depending on the location of the procedure and the body habitus and surgical goals of each patient.

In the process of providing his opinions that the care by Dr. Kerr was appropriate, Dr. Laurence will also explain the manner and method by which the adipose tissue harvested was then drained and prepared for reinjection. He will also discuss how the instruments and equipment are routinely cleaned and sterilized for each procedure, he will discuss these pieces of equipment as well as their various attachments as well as describing the medical equipment which is new versus that which must be re-sterilized for reuse between patients and/or procedures. Dr. Laurence will discuss the pre and post-operative antibiotics administered by Dr. Kerr to the patient and explain why they were appropriate medications to give to the patient as a prophylaxis against infection.

Dr. Laurence will discuss how the patient never appeared infected or septic per the medical records and deposition testimony. He will discuss the expected localized pain patients can expect to experience following a fat transfer procedure. To the extent it becomes relevant to aid in expressing his favorable opinions, Dr. Laurence may also discuss the cardinal signs of infection and how the patient did not have any fever or warmth to the surgical area, there was no oozing of pus or other signs of active drainage from the operative sites, and there was no swelling or signs of a rash or change in condition of the skin surrounding the area or abnormal odor.

Dr. Laurence will discuss the appropriate manner in which Dr. Kerr looked for and then properly documented the absence of signs and symptoms of infection during his postoperative visit on July 23 and in his subsequent discussions with the patient and her family prior to her death. He will testify that he concurs with Dr. Kerr that at no point did the patient present to Dr. Kerr as having an infection, nor did the standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr require him to refer the patient, prescribe a different course of medical care or obtain any further diagnostic testing than was done.

Consistent with his background and experience in medicine and surgery, Dr. Laurence will discuss his knowledge of gram negative rods and the fact that such organisms do not exist on or in the skin, nor would they be found on surgical instruments. Instead, they represent a class of bacteria which reside in the urinary tract and bowels of a patient. He will testify that Dr. Kerr had adequate training and experience to perform the surgeries in question, that Dr. Kerr's medical records contain an adequate description of the care rendered and the discussions with the patient, that Dr. Kerr implemented appropriate sterility techniques and conditions for surgery and that he used correct solutions for cleaning and disinfecting instruments and assuring that operative conditions were adequately sterile to guard against the risk of infection. He will testify that postoperative infections can and do occur even under ideal conditions which are not the subject malpractice, but rather as accepted complications which are impossible to prevent.

To the extent the surgical selection is questioned or needs further explanation at trial, Dr. Laurence will be prepared to discuss why the Vaser procedure is an appropriate method of removing unwanted adipose tissue in a patient like Krystal Ballard. As part of his testimony and in order to expand upon his background and experience in cosmetic surgery, Dr. Laurence may offer testimony explaining how the field of laser lipolysis with the use of tumescent anesthesia has developed in recent years.

This may include testimony addressing that when considering different types of the body for lipolysis that each area has its own unique geography and involves a degree of physician judgment as to how much material to remove and/or re-inject into each location. As part of his testimony, Dr. Laurence will be prepared to explain the positioning of the patient, incision sites, pre and post-operative photos, patient behavior, choice of instruments, his artistic eye and attention to detail, management of patient expectations, and patient education and counseling from the informed consent phase through the postoperative follow up period. He is expected to utilize at trial various anatomical illustrations as well as various cannulas and related instrumentation for the procedures at issue including those depicted in the discovery photos of instruments and supplies produced to date.

As part of his testimony, he will explain how Vaser Lipo involves a minimally invasive technique to selectively break apart and gently remove unwanted fat. He will explain how the targeted area is injected with a special saline solution known as tumescent fluid which numbs the target area and shrinks local blood vessels. This also temporarily expands the volume of the targeted area, making fat cells easier to remove. With the use of exemplars, he will demonstrate how small-diameter probes are then inserted into the body through small incisions. He will explain how by way of using a resonating high ultrasonic frequency, the probes literally shake loose fat cells — while leaving blood vessels, nerves and connective tissues unharmed. The loose fat cells mix with the tumescent fluid, which is then removed from the body using gentle suction. After the surgery, patients are prescribed a recovery regimen to promote maximum skin retraction, smoother results with minimal recovery time compared to traditional liposuction.

Dr. Laurence may also discuss his knowledge of the history of tumescent technique liposuction which was started by dermatologists, not plastic surgeons. As part of his explanation of the surgery at issue, he will describe how the affected area is expected to drain postoperatively, the types of dressings placed on the affected area, the instructions given to the patient, he will discuss the cardinal signs of an infection and how Dr. Kerr's records and deposition evidence that he specifically and appropriately evaluated and questioned the patient and then documented in his records regarding these issues on each encounter he had with the patient. He will discuss the amount of time it takes to perform the procedures in question and that there was nothing usual or out of character regarding the amount of time it took Dr. Kerr to perform the procedures on July 21, 2010.

As outlined above, Dr. Laurence will discuss his knowledge of the various cosmetic organizations to which he belongs and/or has knowledge of, what they offer their members and the opportunities to associate with colleagues and obtain continuing education in this emerging field. Dr. Laurence will explain the adequacy of the postoperative evaluation Dr. Kerr undertook on July 23, 2010 for evaluating Krystal Ballard and assessing whether there was any clinical evidence of infection of the surgical sites, including absence of any abnormal odor or other evidence or suggestion of infection of any of the surgical sites.

He will discuss his review and comments of the autopsy record and the patient's subsequent treatment records. By way of example, Dr. Laurence is expected to discuss the hospital records from Elmore Medical Center and St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, including the laboratory reports showing the patient had 3+ bacteria in her urine. Based on his experience in family practice, he will render the opinion that this laboratory finding is consistent with, and provides strong evidence of, an infectious process located within the patient's bladder. He will explain how the bladder is also an area wherein gram negative rod bacteria are known to populate and exist in the face of an infection.

Dr. Laurence will also comment upon the significance from his perspective regarding how the patient did not present with any fever, but had a WBC count of 14.7. He will discuss causes for an elevated WBC count including surgery, stress and dehydration. He will comment upon the fact that the autopsy failed to address the patient's bladder or urinary tract (aside from the kidneys) or perform any microscopic examination of that organ to address the nature of the bacteria identified in the positive UA performed at Elmore Medical Center on July 25, 2010. He is also expected to discuss the patient's elevated creatinine and how this can be signs of dehydration as well as the evidence that the patient's kidneys were not functioning properly.

Dr. Laurence will address the vague and confusing nature of the autopsy report wherein the pathologist at autopsy referred to an increase in the amount of acute inflammatory cells within tissue from the surgical sites, and how it is not clear which surgical sites he is referring to in his report. He will discuss how it is not clear where the tissue sections where harvested from on the patient. Dr. Laurence will render the opinion, more likely than not, that the gram negative bacterial rods were introduced into

He will comment upon the significance of the finding by Dr. Kerr that when he saw the patient on July 23, two days post operatively, he did not observe any evidence of cellulitis or redness in the surgical site. He will discuss what it means to him as a physician that the patient repeatedly concealed this procedure from her husband, her employer and that she engaged in noncompliant behavior despite what she had been told both in writing and verbally about how to care for herself and what she agreed to do. He will discuss the challenging position the patient elected to place herself and her health care provider in by erroneously reporting to her husband that she had simply fallen and injured her back and falsely claimed this was the source of her pain rather than admit she had cosmetic surgery performed.

In this regard, he will discuss how the patient admitted she was not taking her medications because she did not want proof of them to show up in any drug screen she might take with the military. He will discuss that when a patient elects to disobey her health care provider that there is only so much the physician can do and that the patient is essentially interfering with and limiting the physician's ability to provide her with care and to make decisions which may have made a difference in her overall outcome. He will discuss concerns regarding whether the patient was properly changing her bandages and caring for herself as instructed and how during any of these times would have been an opportunity for the bacteria in question to be introduced into her system.

Dr. Laurence will testify that Dr. Kerr and his employees followed the appropriate sterile technique in regards to the procedure he performed on Krystal Ballard.

He will explain that there are no absolutes with a sterile technique and that one can do everything right and still have situations where unwanted bacteria can become introduced into the surgical site, but that given the gram negative rods claimed to have been identified at autopsy, this is not what occurred in this case. He will discuss the patient's admission that she was not taking the narcotic pain medication Norco and was instead taking the non-narcotic drug Motrin which did not appear to be providing the patient with adequate pain control.

Dr. Laurence will render the opinion that the minimal amount of bruising and edema observed on July 23 was consistent with what he would expect to see at that point postoperatively. He will testify that the standard of practice did not require Dr. Kerr to obtain a complete blood count on the patient on July 23 in order to determine what her white count was at that time. He will discuss his background, training and experience in the use and regular implementation of the sterile technique in his practice in order to lay a foundation for his opinions as to the adequacy of Dr. Kerr's sterile technique. Dr. Laurence will discuss how liposuction and fat transfers are office based procedures which are not required to be performed in a hospital setting, nor are hospital privileges required in order to perform such procedures. Dr. Laurence will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr was not required, nor does the standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr, require that his facility be certified or approved by any accreditation facility such as the AAACH or AAAASF or any governmental agency.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Laurence will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr's procedure room was properly prepared for surgery and to protect and preserve an appropriate sterile field. He will discuss the autoclave at issue, how it operates and how it helps Dr. Kerr maintain a sterile field for his procedures. He will discuss the areas around the patient which are considered part of the sterile field depending on the nature and type of procedure at issue. He will discuss the operation and use of the Vaser ultrasonic lipolysis machine utilized for the procedure in this case. He will explain how the tumescent lidocaine is mixed, prepared and injected into the patient. He will explain how the Vaser procedure is done with the device in place under the skin without direct visualization. He will discuss how Dr. Kerr documented having harvested 400 cc of fat from the patient's anterior abdomen, 200 cc of fat from her right lateral waist flank and 200 cc of fat from the patient's left lateral waist flank. He will discuss how the Vaser in this case was utilized for less than eleven minutes and that this time was appropriate for the nature of the procedure.

As it relates to rebutting the testimony of the Plaintiff's experts, Dr. Laurence will explain how the fat was injected into the patient using only a needle and syringe and that there were no incisions made into the patient during the injection phase of the procedure. He will testify that it was proper and acceptable technique for the same needles to be used to inject the fat into both the left and right buttocks of the patient. He will discuss the adequacy of the informed consent discussion Dr. Kerr had with the patient including the content of the informed consent document signed by the patient in this case. He will discuss the risk of infection as being a specifically consented risk of the lipolysis and fat injection procedure. He will discuss how the consent form discusses with the patient both pre and post treatment instructions and how it warns the patient that if they fail to comply with these instructions may increase the possibility that the patient will develop complications.

Dr. Laurence will challenge the foundation as well as rebut the opinions of the expert witnesses listed by the Plaintiff. Regarding the issue of consent, he will testify that Dr. Kerr discussed with the patient the nature and the extent of the risks normally attendant to the procedure in question such that the giving of consent by the patient was valid in all respects. As part of his testimony, he may also discuss the adequacy of Dr. Kerr's preoperative clinical examination including evaluation of the regions to be lipo-contoured including review for hernias, scars, asymmetries, cellulite, stretch marks, the quality of the skin and its elasticity, the presence of stria and dimpling and the location of fat deposits. He will rebut any testimony by Plaintiff's experts that Dr. Kerr improperly performed the lipolysis procedure, the fat injection procedure, that Dr. Kerr improperly sterilized his equipment or that Dr. Kerr did anything to cause the patient's death.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Laurence may also address and explain the weight changes of Krystal Ballard. On July 23, 2010 she weighed 135 pounds. On July 25, 2010 at Elmore Medical Center she weighed 130 pounds. At autopsy on July 26, 2010 she weighed 180 pounds. He will explain the medical reasons and significance of these changes in weight. He may also comment upon the entries in the records from Elmore Medical Center for July 25, 2010, wherein the treating physician evaluated the buttocks and abdomen of Krystal Ballard and noted little induration of the skin and no redness, warmth or skin sensitivity and delayed the administration of IV antibiotics until 4 ½ hours after admission. At Elmore, cardiac ejection fraction was only 17% and at St. Alphonsus on July 25, 2010, central venous pressure was measured at 20 which is very high and proof of fluid overload. To the extent it relates to his opinions on causation, Dr. Laurence will explain these factors and their relative significance in terms of the possible reasons for the death of Krystal Ballard.

Dr. Laurence will testify that the laboratory data of Elmore Medical Center and the clinical findings are indicative of urinary tract infection the developed after his procedure of July 21, 2010 and if gram negative rods were in fact present at autopsy in certain locations, they came from the urinary tract of Krystal Ballard or her intestinal tract and were not introduced during his surgical procedure. As part of his testimony, it is expected that Dr. Laurence will explain pertinent anatomy, infectious processes, pathophysiology of infections, treatment for infections, gram negative rods, types of bacteria, reasons why the blood cultures and urine cultures were negative for growth, antibiotics used for the care and the comments of Krystal Ballard regarding that drugs would show up on drug test by the Air Force.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Laurence will discuss the patient's anatomy including the location of nerves, blood supply, adipose tissue, organs as well as the body's response to surgery, infection, pain medication and antibiotics. This may include extensive testimony by way of demonstrative exhibits depicting general anatomy and/or pictures of the patient and/or of the surgical equipment itself. Dr. Laurence will testify that even in hindsight the patient in this case did not present with any increased risk for infection that would have raised any concern about her undergoing the procedures on July 21, 2010. He will testify that at the time of Dr. Kerr's procedure on July 21, 2010, there was no evidence of a urinary tract infection of Krystal Ballard.

Data and other information considered and summary of qualifications: In forming his opinions, Dr. Laurence has relied upon his own unique training and experience as a licensed physician engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Tennessee in treating, diagnosing, managing and caring for patients like Krystal Ballard, his observations of the habits and practices of other cosmetic surgeons and care providers, his knowledge of the Boise, Idaho standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr in 2010 and his knowledge that it is within Dr. Kerr's specialty and capability to perform the procedures in question as part of his practice of medicine, and his membership and participation in various medical associations and organizations as set forth herein. The data upon which his opinions are based include his medical education, training, skill, experience, his experience practicing cosmetic surgery, his review of the care and treatment experiences with similar lipolysis and fat injection cases over the course of his career in medicine.

Dr. Laurence's opinions are also based upon the findings of various other health care providers for the patient, the results and values of various laboratory studies and other testing and observation, treatment plans, consultations, referrals and recommendations for treatment for the patient derived from such medical services and interactions before, during and after the care rendered by Dr. Kerr as described in all medical records, discovery responses and depositions taken. Dr. Laurence's professional background and qualifications are set forth in his attached curriculum vitae which is incorporated herein by reference.

As part of his review of this case, and for purposes of forming his opinions, he has considered and reviewed the depositions taken to date including Dr. Kerr's, employees of Silk Touch, and the Plaintiff's. He has also reviewed and considered Dr. Kerr's medical records, the records of Elmore Medical Center, Elmore Ambulance Service, Life Flight, St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, the Ada County Coroner's Office and the Plaintiff's expert witness disclosure. In the event further depositions or medical records are produced, they will also be considered.

Dr. Laurence reserves the right to rely as further support for his opinions on medical literature related to any of the subjects set forth in this disclosure as discovery continues. Dr. Laurence reserves the right not to offer all or any of the opinions set forth in this disclosure as it as an attorney prepared document and is intentionally worded broadly in order to comply with rule 26(b)(4). The ultimate testimony to be offered at trial will depend to an extent on what testimony is deemed necessary to refute the testimony of the Plaintiff and his experts consistent with the requirements of Idaho Code §6-1012. Plaintiff has the burden of proof and it is only after that burden has been met can the defense determine what evidence and testimony will be needed to respond.

3) Charles Garrison, M.D.
P.O. Box 4226
Pocatello, Idaho 83205

Subject Matter: Facts of case, causation, damages and the care and treatment of Krystal Ballard.

Substance of facts and opinions held: Dr. Garrison is a physician licensed by the state of Idaho to practice medicine and surgery. Dr. Garrison has engaged in the medical specialty of forensic pathology at all times relevant herein which he practices in Pocatello and Boise, Idaho. Dr. Garrison will testify as a retained expert witness at the trial and his testimony will address the issue of the cause of the patient's death. Part of the basis for Dr. Garrison's opinions include: his background, training, research, practice and experience in performing forensic pathology and in determining disease processes as well as the cause of death of patients like Krystal Ballard as part of his regular practice of medicine.

Dr. Garrison will render opinions which refute and rebut the opinions, conclusions and methodology advanced by Plaintiff's experts including the opinions of George Nichols, M.D. and Keith Armitage, M.D. who claim that the bacterial infection which the patient died from was a direct result of bacteria introduced during the July 21, 2010 procedure and who further claim that the presence of gram negative rods are proof of a breach in sterility by the Defendants. The Plaintiffs' experts contend that the toxic shock and multisystem organ failure which the patient suffered from occurred as a result of contaminated equipment of the Defendants. Dr. Garrison, who has viewed and analyzed the medical and autopsy records as well as the tissue pathology slides from the post mortem examination, will refute these opinions at trial.

Dr. Garrison will render his opinions to a reasonable degree of medical certainty. Dr. Garrison's medical specialty, training, experience and knowledge enable him to render the opinions expressed in this document, which includes the subjects of bacteria, bacterial infections, virus, gram negative rods, types of bacteria that embrace gram negative rods, the presence and location of gram negative rods, sepsis, toxic shock, cause of death of patients from sepsis and toxic shock and bacteria that inhabit the skin, urinary tract and bowel. He will testify that the presence of gram negative bacteria in the wounds of Krystal Ballard, are by no means proof to a reasonable medical certainty, that a breach in sterility occurred in the surgical procedure. He will explain that although the patient's death involved gram negative sepsis, to contend as Plaintiffs' experts do, that the etiology of her sepsis was a primary infection of the wound which occurred as a result of a breach in sterility, is to ignore the medical facts of the case, and wound infections in general.

He will testify that for Plaintiffs' experts to state that there are no other reasons for Krystal Ballard's death other than as a direct result of bacteria introduced intraoperatively during the procedure as a result of contaminated equipment, is to ignore the process of postoperative wound infections, their etiology, the facts of this case, the patient's presenting symptoms and treatment course, how wounds are evaluated to determine the presence or absence of an infection and the routes by which they occur. In this regard, Dr. Garrison will explain post-operative wound infections and compare them to other infectious processes, including those associated with the patient's urinary track bacteria and abnormal urinalysis.

He will testify regarding how infections become septic. He will render the opinion that the sepsis which led to the septic shock and multi-system organ failure was caused by the patient's primary infection which was the urinary track, not any wound infection as alleged by Plaintiffs in this case. In this regard, he may also discuss the fluid retention and weight gain of the patient in the days prior to her death associated with her organ failure, but yet there was never any overt signs of the patient having any wound infection at the locations of the fat transfer or liposuction. The presence of gram negative bacteria in the surgical wound(s) of Krystal Ballard is simply proof of their presence, but by no means is it proof that they arrived there by or through the surgical procedure of Dr. Kerr.

like Krystal Ballard. He will render the opinion that the patient's sepsis and subsequent septic shock and death were not proximately caused by any bacteria introduced into the operative field during Dr. Kerr's July 21, 2010 liposuction and fat transfer procedure. He will testify that Dr. Nichols conclusions are not only medically flawed and inaccurate, but they fail to take into consideration any other diagnostic evaluation that might have been done to further define the etiology of the infection, and reach such a conclusion with proper and appropriate medical investigation.

He will testify that the most that can be said about the presence of gram negative bacteria allegedly found in the wounds of Krystal Ballard at autopsy is simply that it is proof of their presence at that location – which location cannot be determined for certainty since the tissue samples were not labeled as to precise location. He will testify that such a bacterial finding at autopsy is by no means definitive proof to a reasonable degree of medical certainty that the gram negative organism, whatever it was, arrived there by or through the surgical procedure performed by Dr. Kerr, nor does such a finding at autopsy establish that the patient's death was due to any breach in sterility or cleaning protocol of any of the equipment, instruments or facility within the Silk Touch Med Spa facility.

Dr. Garrison will testify that he would expect to see gram positive organisms populate the site of the operative wound if in fact the sepsis was due to a skin infection caused by a breach in sterility as alleged. He will explain how in this case the presence of the gram negative organisms represented a secondary process to the patient's ongoing urinary tract infection. In this regard, he will explain the process by which a urinary tract infection can lead to sepsis in a patient like Krystal Ballard. He will testify

He will testify that the autopsy conducted in this case did not identify any specific organism. He will discuss how in most cases of a postoperative surgical wound infection, that he generally observes signs and symptoms of infection due to a breach in sterility within two to three days of surgery which did not occur in this case. He will discuss how the evidence in this case demonstrates that both Dr. Groben, Dr. Kerr, the patient's husband and the patient prior to her death all describe a patient and an operative site which is not grossly infected at any time, even at autopsy. He will testify that the absence of evidence of any gross infection at the surgical site is wholly inconsistent with it having caused the patient's death as Plaintiffs' experts contend. In this regard, Dr. Garrison will discuss the cardinal signs of infection and how the patient presented without evidence of any fever and without evidence of any warmth, redness or drainage to the wound site. He will discuss and explain the significance of such a finding.

He will testify that there is nothing from the autopsy, the depositions, the medical records or the death of the patient which establish to any reasonable degree of medical certainty that there was any breach of sterility in this case. He will discuss the autopsy report including the fact that the tissue samples do not identify with any degree of specificity where they were taken from which further compounds the relevance of the finding of gram negative rods. He will testify that Plaintiffs' experts cannot state to any degree of medical certainty that the mere presence of gram negative organisms was in any way caused by, evidence of, or the result of a breach in sterility or cleaning protocol by any of the Defendants or their employees. In the opinion of Dr. Garrison, it is most

As further support for his opinions, he will discuss the significance of the fact that there were not any other postoperative infections reported or experienced by any patient who was seen at the Silk Touch Med Spa before or since this patient's procedure and how this is further evidence that the sterilization procedures at the facility were adequate to maintain a proper sterile field. As part of his testimony, he will discuss how the process of sterilization works and how bacteria are eliminated by various cleaning processes and how there is not just one approved way to maintain a sterile field. As part of his testimony, he may also discuss how different types of bacteria are susceptible to different cleaning techniques, temperature and/or antibiotics.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Garrison will discuss different types of bacteria, how bacteria multiply, how they react to different parts of the human body, where they normally live in the human body, how they are identified in various standard tests, how the body fights off and/or responds to and/or relies upon different types of bacteria, where various types of bacteria normally reside within and on the human body, how different kinds of gram negative bacteria organisms are known to reside within the human urinary tract and bowels as well as within fecal matter.

For purposes of explaining his testimony he is expected to discuss general anatomy including the location of nerves, blood supply, adipose tissue, organs as well as the body's response to surgery, infection, pain medication and antibiotics. He may discuss how antibiotics are able to travel throughout the body, how infection within certain types of tissue can be harder to treat depending on the vascularity of the area of the infection (such as treating localized infections in fatty tissue versus in muscle) and whether or not an infection is localized versus systemic. It is expected that Dr. Garrison will use during his testimony demonstrative exhibits depicting general anatomy and/or pictures of the patient and/or of the bacteria.

Data and other information considered and summary of qualifications: In forming his opinions, Dr. Garrison has relied upon his own unique training and experience as a licensed physician engaged in the medical specialty of forensic pathology, in evaluating laboratory results, tissue samples, autopsy records, consultations with other physicians and otherwise managing and identification of bacterial disease processes in patients like Krystal Ballard, his observations of the habits, customs and practice experiences of other forensic pathologists who address medical situations like those presented in this case, and his membership and participation in various medical associations, including those in the state of Idaho.

The data upon which his opinions are based include his medical education, training, skill, experience, his experience practicing forensic pathology, his review of the care and treatment of the patient by Dr. Kerr and others, and his review and consideration of the depositions and discovery responses taken and/or disclosed to date in this case. His opinions are also based upon the findings of various other health care providers for the patient, the results and values of various laboratory and infectious disease studies and other testing and observation, treatment plans, consultations, referrals and recommendations for treatment for the patient derived from such medical services and interactions before, during and after the care rendered by Dr. Kerr as described in all medical records, discovery responses and depositions taken. Dr. Garrison's professional background and qualifications are set forth in his attached curriculum vitae, which is hereby incorporated by reference.

As part of his review, he has had available to review and consider the medical records of Silk Touch Med Spa, Dr. Brian Kerr, the records of Elmore Medical Center, Elmore Ambulance Service, Life Flight, St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, the Ada County Coroner's Office and portions of the Plaintiff's expert witness disclosure. In the event further depositions or medical records are produced, they will also be made available to this witness for consideration.

Dr. Garrison reserves the right to rely as further support for his opinions on medical literature related to any of the subjects set forth in this disclosure as discovery continues. Dr. Garrison reserves the right not to offer all or any of the opinions set forth in this disclosure as it as an attorney prepared document and is intentionally worded broadly in order to comply with the law. The ultimate testimony to be offered at trial will depend to an extent on what testimony is deemed necessary to refute the testimony of the Plaintiff and his experts. Plaintiff has the burden of proof and it is only after that burden has been met can the defense determine what evidence and testimony will be needed to respond.

4) Thomas Coffman, M.D.
125 East Idaho, Suite 203
Boise, Idaho 83712

Subject Matter: Facts of case, causation, damages and the care and treatment of Krystal Ballard.

Substance of facts and opinions held: Dr. Coffman is a physician licensed by the state of Idaho to practice medicine and surgery. Dr. Coffman is engaged in the medical specialty of infectious disease at all times relevant herein which he practices in Boise, Idaho. Dr. Coffman will testify as a retained expert witness at the trial and his testimony will address the issue of the cause of the patient's death and the fact that death did not result from the events of the procedure of Dr. Kerr. Part of the basis for Dr. Coffman's opinions include: his background, training, research, practice and experience in infectious diseases and in determining disease and infectious processes as well as the cause of death of patients like Krystal Ballard as part of his regular practice of medicine.

Dr. Coffman will render opinions which refute and rebut the opinions, conclusions and methodology advanced by Plaintiff's experts including the opinions of George Nichols, M.D. and Keith Armitage, M.D. who claim that the bacterial infection which the patient died from was a direct result of bacteria introduced during the July 21, 2010 procedure and who further claim that the presence of gram negative rods are proof of a breach in sterility by the Defendants. The Plaintiffs' experts contend that the toxic shock and multisystem organ failure which the patient suffered from occurred as a result of contaminated equipment of the Defendants. Dr. Coffman, who has viewed and analyzed the medical and autopsy records as well as the tissue pathology slides from the post mortem examination, will refute these opinions at trial.

Counsel for the Defendants have requested access to blood samples, tissue samples and gram stained samples from the autopsy which are to be evaluated by Dr. Coffman and other defense experts, however, as of the writing of this disclosure, only the tissue sample slides have been produced by the Coroner's office. Arrangements are still being made and the defense is still waiting to receive both the gram stained slides and the blood samples for further evaluation and testing. As a result, Dr. Coffman is unable to complete his work on this matter thus far. The opinions of Dr. Coffman which are known thus far are set forth herein and it is expected that additional opinions will be supplemented once the missing materials identified above have been made available for review.

Dr. Coffman will render his opinions on a more probable than not basis which is to a reasonable degree of medical certainty. Dr. Coffman's medical specialty, training, experience and knowledge enable him to render the opinions expressed in this document, which includes the subjects of bacteria, bacterial infections, virus, tissue types, gram negative versus gram positive rods, types of bacteria that embrace gram negative and gram positive rods, the presence and location of gram negative versus gram positive rods and the methodologies for reviewing each, sepsis, toxic shock, cause of death of patients from sepsis and toxic shock and identification and type of bacteria that reside and inhabit the skin, urinary tract and bowel.

He will testify that Dr. Kerr was not required to test for spores or mold and that these issues have nothing to do with the case. Dr. Coffman will discuss other disease processes which are known to cause a rapid patient death such as occurred in this case. He will discuss how infections lead to sepsis and toxic shock. He will testify that based on his view of the tissue slides that he sees evidence of white blood cells which can be evidence of the reparative process following surgery. He will testify as to why he believes the blood cultures were negative as well as what the various components of a complete blood count mean to him as an expert in infectious disease.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Coffman will discuss where gram negative versus gram positive bacteria are known to reside in the body. He will testify that gram negative bacteria do not reside on or in the skin, but instead reside within the urinary tract and bowel. He will testify that even if gram negative bacteria were observed in any of the tissue samples that this does not rule out that the patient may well have had an ongoing infection in another area of her body such as her urinary tract.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Coffman will testify that he has substantial experience in identifying bacteria and other cellular structures and organisms in tissue samples obtained from the human body. He will testify that he is regularly called upon in his specialty in infectious disease to make such determinations and that he is capable of identifying the differences between a gram negative versus a gram positive bacteria on properly prepared slides as well as being able to further classify and define specific species of bacteria and other organisms and cellular structures within the human body.

Dr. Coffman will render the opinion that based on his review of the materials to date that any sepsis, toxic shock or other infectious process suffered by the patient was not caused by or in any way due to a lack of sterility or failure to properly clean and maintain the equipment and/or sterile field by Dr. Kerr and/or his office staff.

He will rebut the Plaintiffs' experts wherein they opine that there are no other reasons for Krystal Ballard's death other than as a direct result of bacteria introduced intraoperatively during the procedure as a result of contaminated equipment. In this regard, he will discuss the process of postoperative wound infections, their etiology, the facts of this case, the patient's presenting symptoms and treatment course, how wounds are evaluated to determine the presence or absence of an infection and the routes by which they occur. In this regard, Dr. Coffman will explain post-operative wound infections and compare them to other infectious processes to the extent not otherwise discussed by other defense experts.

He will testify regarding how various infections can lead to the condition known as sepsis. He will render the opinion that the sepsis which allegedly led to the septic shock and multi-system organ failure was caused by the patient's primary infection which was not a wound infection as alleged by Plaintiffs in this case. As part of his testimony, Dr. Coffman will explain the difference between a primary versus a secondary infection and how it relates to the onset of sepsis in a patient like Krystal Ballard. He will render the opinion that the patient's sepsis and subsequent septic shock and death cannot be blamed on Dr. Kerr's July 21, 2010 liposuction and fat transfer procedure.

He will testify that Dr. Nichols conclusions are not only medically flawed and inaccurate, but they fail to take into consideration any other diagnostic evaluation that might have been done to further define the etiology of the infection, and reach such a conclusion with proper and appropriate medical investigation. Even assuming arguendo as to the findings by Dr. Groben, Dr. Coffman will testify that the most that can be said about the presence of gram negative bacteria allegedly found in the wounds of Krystal Ballard at autopsy is simply that it is proof of their presence at that location – which location cannot be determined for certainty since the tissue samples were not labeled as to precise location.

Dr. Coffman will testify that such a bacterial finding at autopsy, is by no means definitive proof to a reasonable degree of medical certainty that the gram negative organism arrived there by or through the surgical procedure performed by Dr. Kerr, nor does such a finding at autopsy establish that the patient's death was due to any breach in sterility or cleaning protocol of any of the equipment, instruments or facility within the Silk Touch Med Spa facility.

Dr. Coffman will testify that he would expect to see gram positive organisms populate the site of the operative wound if in fact the patient's sepsis was due to a skin infection caused by a breach in sterility as alleged. Dr. Coffman will discuss and explain the process by which a urinary tract infection can lead to sepsis in a patient like Krystal Ballard. He will testify that he has not seen a circumstance wherein a gram negative rod resulted in sepsis, septic shock followed by the death of the patient. It is the opinion of Dr. Coffman that the infectious process of Krystal Ballard, as stated in the autopsy report, came from bacteria from her urinary tract or bowel that developed after the procedure of Dr. Kerr.

He will testify that the autopsy conducted in this case failed to identify any specific organism. He will discuss how the evidence in this case demonstrates that both Dr. Groben, Dr. Kerr, the patient's husband and the patient prior to her death all describe a patient and an operative site which was not grossly infected at any time. He will testify that the absence of evidence of any gross infection at the surgical site is inconsistent with such an alleged infection as having caused the patient's death as Plaintiffs' experts contend. In this regard, Dr. Coffman will discuss the cardinal signs of infection and how the patient presented without evidence of any fever and without evidence of any warmth, redness or drainage to the wound site. He will discuss and explain the significance of such a finding.

He will testify that there is nothing from the autopsy, the depositions, the medical records or the death of the patient which establish to any reasonable degree of medical certainty that there was any breach of sterility in this case and that the conclusions stated by the Plaintiff's experts on this topic are without a factual basis in the record. He will discuss the autopsy report, the photos, blood tests, tissue samples and gram staining. He will testify that Plaintiffs' experts cannot state to any degree of medical certainty that the mere presence of gram negative organisms were in any way the result of a breach in sterility or cleaning protocol by any of the Defendants or their employees. As further support for his opinions, he will discuss the significance of the fact that there were not any other postoperative infections reported or experienced by any patient who was seen at the Silk Touch Med Spa before or since this patient's procedure and how this is further evidence that the sterilization procedures at the facility were adequate to maintain a proper sterile field. He will render the opinion that for the patient to have suffered from an infection due to a breach in sterility caused by any failure in the cleaning and sanitizing protocol of the defendants, that one would expect to see substantial evidence of other contaminated equipment related postoperative infections which there are none of in this case.

From his unique perspective as an expert in infectious disease, as part of his testimony Dr. Coffman may also discuss the process of medical equipment sterilization and how bacteria are eliminated by various cleaning processes and how there is not just one approved way to maintain a sterile operative field. As part of his testimony, he may also discuss how different types of bacteria are susceptible to different cleaning techniques, temperature and/or antibiotics.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Coffman will be prepared to discuss different types of bacteria, how bacteria multiply, how they react to and survive in different parts of the human body, where they normally reside within the human body, how they are identified in various standard tests, how the body fights off, responds to and/or relies upon different types of bacteria, how different kinds of gram negative bacteria organisms are known to reside within the human urinary tract and bowels.

For purposes of explaining his testimony he is expected to discuss general anatomy including the location of nerves, blood supply, adipose tissue, organs as well as the body's response to surgery, infection, pain medication and antibiotics. He may discuss how antibiotics are able to travel throughout the body, how infection within certain types of tissue can be harder to treat depending on the vascularity of the area of the infection (such as treating localized infections confined to fatty tissue versus infections which are able to make their way into muscle and the blood stream) and whether or not an infection is localized versus systemic. It is expected that Dr. Coffman will use during his testimony demonstrative exhibits depicting general anatomy and/or pictures of the patient and/or of the bacteria.

Data and other information considered and summary of qualifications: In forming his opinions, Dr. Coffman has relied upon his own unique training and experience as a licensed physician engaged in the medical specialty of infectious disease in evaluating laboratory results, tissue samples, blood tests, gram staining, operating laboratory equipment, autopsy records and otherwise managing and identification of bacterial disease processes in patients like Krystal Ballard, his observations of the habits, customs and practice experiences of other infectious disease specialists who address medical situations like those presented in this case, and his membership and participation in various medical associations, including those in the state of Idaho.

The data upon which his opinions are based include his medical education, training, skill, experience, his experience practicing medicine in the area of infectious disease; his review of the care and treatment of the patient by Dr. Kerr and others, and his review and consideration of the depositions and discovery responses taken and/or disclosed to date in this case. His opinions are also based upon the findings of various other health care providers for the patient, the results and values of various laboratory and infectious disease studies and other testing and observation, treatment plans, consultations, referrals and recommendations for treatment for the patient derived from such medical services and interactions before, during and after the care rendered by Dr. Kerr as described in all medical records, discovery responses and depositions taken. Dr. Coffman's professional background and qualifications are set forth in his attached curriculum vitae, which is hereby incorporated by reference.

As part of his review, he has had available to review and consider the medical records of Silk Touch Med Spa, Dr. Brian Kerr, the records of Elmore Medical Center, Elmore Ambulance Service, Life Flight, St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, the Ada County Coroner's Office and portions of the Plaintiff's expert witness disclosure. In the event further depositions or medical records are produced, they will also be made available to this witness for consideration.

Dr. Coffman reserves the right to rely as further support for his opinions on medical literature related to any of the subjects set forth in this disclosure as discovery continues. Dr. Coffman reserves the right not to offer all or any of the opinions set forth in this disclosure as it as an attorney prepared document and is intentionally worded broadly in order to comply with the law. The ultimate testimony to be offered at trial will depend to an extent on what testimony is deemed necessary to refute the testimony of the Plaintiff and his experts. Plaintiff has the burden of proof and it is only after that burden has been met can the defense determine what evidence and testimony will be needed to respond.

5) Alan W. Frankle, Ph.D.
1491 Lewis Lane
Boise, Idaho 83712

Subject Matter: Damages and economic analysis.

Substance of Opinions and Expected Testimony: Dr. Frankle is an economist and retired professor from Boise State University. He has been an economist in Boise, Idaho, continuously from 1984 to the present. Dr. Frankle will respond to and rebut the opinions of the patient's economic expert, Cornelius Hofman. It is expected that Dr. Frankle will render opinions regarding discount rates and present value calculations regarding the patient's special damages claims. He may also testify regarding inflationary rates for annuities.

The economic report of Plaintiff's expert, Cornelius Hofman, was not produced until May 14 by means of the Plaintiff's second supplemental answers to the written interrogatories of the Defendants. By court order dated May 16, 2012, the Defendant's disclosure of experts shall be disclosed 60 days after the Plaintiff's disclosure of experts. It is impossible for Dr. Frankle to respond to and submit his opinions on the report of Mr. Hofman at this time and should the court allow Mr. Hofman to render testimony and opinions at trial over the objection of the defendants, the expert opinions of Dr. Frankle should not have to be disclosed until 60 days after May 14, 2013.

As a result, Defendants reserve the right to supplement the opinions of Dr. Frankle. As part of his opinions, however, he is expected to address the issue of consumption rates and how the Plaintiff has improperly calculated the decedent's rate of consumption in order to inflate claims for future lost wages. In this regard, he will address the permissible categories of damages eligible to the Plaintiff in this case, namely, the damages for wrongful death are measured by the support the Plaintiff as the surviving spouse would have received had the decedent lived. He will discuss the absence of any children in this case and that no support would have been provided by the decedent to support any children.

Dr. Frankle will also discuss the improper assumptions in earnings and the failure to consider other income and expense offsets which exist by virtue of both the Plaintiff and the decedent being members of the military. By law in Idaho, Plaintiff is not entitled to recover any amounts for loss of inheritance, loss of income or loss of accumulation which are deemed speculative, particularly here where in the decedent was only 27 years of age, had been married for less than four years and had been in the military for such a short period of time. Dr. Frankle will discuss the speculative nature of said damages and how these categories relate to the improper opinions advanced by Mr. Hofman.

Dr. Frankle is still in need of additional tax records for Charles Ballard and we currently have no tax records for Krystal Ballard despite the outstanding requests for these records. Dr. Frankle has further opinions he may render once being provided with these missing tax records as well as being able to comment on the fact that Mr. Hofman did not request or utilize such records when generating his report purporting to forecast the current and future losses of the Plaintiff.

Dr. Frankle will dispute the consumption rates relied upon by Mr. Hofman in the range of 24%. He will further testify Plaintiff has not produced a credible projection of earnings or anticipated promotions/advancements for either the Plaintiff or the decedent. For purposes of responding to the report of Mr. Hofman, Dr. Frankle has assumed a similar projection of earnings for both Charles and Krystal Ballard. He will discuss the absence of data and reports from the Air Force as to what track, if any, the decedent and Charles Ballard are/were on as respects aspirations for advancement, further promotions, raises in income, etc. Dr. Frankle will also comment upon the fact that Mr. Hofman has not produced item No. 39 relied upon as a basis for some of his opinions in his report.

Regarding the issue of loss of household services, Dr. Frankle will comment upon the lack of any documentation regarding what household services, if any, that the decedent provided in order to arrive at his conclusion.

There are additional issues which have not been addressed by Mr. Hofman including the fact that often the decedent and the Plaintiff were not living together and if they were it was often only half time. Mr. Hofman's report fails to factor this key component of household services.

Based on the limited information available, for the household services, one assumes each spouse spends 38% of the time on indivisible tasks, 31% on tasks for themselves and 31% on tasks for the other. Charles Ballard therefore only lost the 38% for services that were concerned with indivisible tasks. The 31% of tasks that the decedent did for the Plaintiff are therefore cancelled out because he is no longer having to do the 31% for the decedent. Thus his only potential household services loss is for those indivisible tasks she performed which they shared equally.

Underlying Facts and Data: Dr. Frankle will rely on his education, training and experience as an economist; the use and recognition of standard and accepted economic data, government reports, publications and authorities; his experience teaching economics and finance at Boise State University; his review of the economic loss report of the patient's experts and his assumptions and calculations for determining the annual costs for household services and lost wages associated with an individual like Krystal Ballard.

Dr. Frankle reserves the right to rely as further support for his opinions on recognized economic literature related to any of the subjects set forth in this disclosure. Additional materials which Dr. Frankle may ultimately review and consider for forming his opinions is unknown and reserved based on the foregoing. The Defendants have not received the income tax returns or documents that reflect the earnings of the decedent over the past several years even though they were requested of the Plaintiff to be produced several months ago. As a consequence, Dr. Frankle does not have this material showing the decedent's actual earnings which Dr. Frankle will utilize to further criticize the invalidity of Mr. Hofman's opinions. In the event Dr. Frankle is deposed his deposition testimony is hereby incorporated into this disclosure as if set forth in full.

Dr. Frankle reserves the right not to offer any of the opinions set forth herein as this disclosure is prepared with the assistance of counsel and is worded broadly in order to comply with the requirements of Rule 26(b)(4). The ultimate testimony to be offered at trial will depend entirely on what testimony is deemed necessary to refute the testimony of Plaintiffs and their experts. Plaintiff has the burden of proof and only after that burden has been met can the defense determine what evidence and testimony will be needed to respond.

Dr. Frankle's Curriculum Vitae setting forth his qualifications and prior publications is attached hereto and incorporated herein as if set forth in full.

6) John Lundeby, M.D., FACS, FAACS
Shape Cosmetic Surgery and Med Spa, PLLC
524 W. 6th Ave
Spokane, Washington 99204

Subject Matter: Facts of case, applicable standards of health care practice, causation, damages and the care and treatment of Krystal Ballard.

Substance of facts and opinions held: Dr. Lundeby is a physician licensed in the state of Idaho and Washington to practice medicine and surgery. Dr. Lundeby is board certified by the American Board of Surgery and the American Board of Cosmetic Surgery and has engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery at all times relevant herein. Dr. Lundeby will testify as a retained expert witness at the trial. Dr. Lundeby will testify that he has actual knowledge of the standard of health care practice applicable to physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise, Idaho in 2010 and that in his opinion Dr. Kerr met such standard taking into account Dr. Kerr's background, training, experience and field of medical specialization with respect to the medical treatment rendered to the patient.

Dr. Lundeby will explain the process he undertook in order to familiarize himself with the standards and practices in Boise and the surrounding area for the types of procedures and treatment performed by Dr. Kerr in this case. Part of the basis for Dr. Lundeby's opinions include: his background, training, research, practice and experience in performing cosmetic procedures as a licensed physician, his experiences in the peer review process associated with his hospital staff privileges at Kootenai Medical Center and Northwest Specialty Hospital, both in Idaho, his experience of having performed hundreds of cosmetic surgical procedures, his knowledge of how cosmetic procedures like liposuction and fat transfers were performed in Boise in 2010.

Dr. Lundeby will discuss his experience in performing a large volume of liposuction and fat transfer procedures, his knowledge of how the Vaser ultrasonic liposuction procedure is performed, how fat transfers/grafting procedures are performed, his knowledge of the types of equipment and instruments needed to perform the nature and types of cosmetic procedures at issue in this case, his knowledge of the scope of practice of cosmetic providers like Dr. Kerr in Boise, Idaho and elsewhere, and his knowledge of the types of medical providers who perform cosmetic procedures like the ones at issue in this case. As part of his testimony, Dr. Lundeby may also explain his training and experience at the University of Washington and the San Joaquin General Hospital in 1991-96.

Dr. Lundeby will testify that the infection rates described by Dr. Kerr in his deposition and discovery responses are well below average for a cosmetic facility and are essentially zero, with possibly one or two minor cellulitis cases that were easily treated successfully with no adverse consequences. He will comment upon how this is evidence that the sterility procedures employed by the Defendants in this case were adequate and working properly at the time of the surgery at issue in this case.

Dr. Lundeby will testify that during his professional career he has been acquainted with numerous physicians who perform cosmetic procedures that are not plastic surgeons, but rather come from a number of different medical backgrounds including: family practice, anesthesia, general surgery, dermatology and obstetrics and gynecology. He will discuss the training he has been provided in cosmetic surgery by various physicians who are not plastic surgeons. Dr. Lundeby has become acquainted with the nature and scope of the practice of these other cosmetic procedure providers and the procedures utilized by them in this specialty. Dr. Lundeby will explain that the standard of health care practice for plastic surgeons is not the standard of health care practice in the same medical specialty as his and Dr. Kerr.

Dr. Lundeby will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr had proper training and experience in order to perform the procedures at issue on Krystal Ballard. He will testify that Dr. Kerr did not need any residency in general or other surgical field in order to competently perform the liposuction and fat grafting procedures at issue in this case. As part of his testimony, he is expected to discuss the fact that he provided training to Dr. Kerr at his office in Spokane and that Dr. Lundeby has trained many physicians in performing a variety of cosmetic procedures.

He will testify that he has performed cosmetic surgery with Dr. Kerr and has witnessed his habits and customs in this regard in a surgical setting. Dr. Lundeby is expected to refer to the publications, data and documents referred to in his attached curriculum vitae. He is expected to discuss the numbers of similar procedures he has performed. Dr. Lundeby will explain that there was no requirement, per the standard of health care practice or otherwise, for Dr. Kerr's facility to be certified, inspected or approved by any organization or government agency, which included his autoclave, his clinic and the instruments he used for surgery and that his medical license allowed him to conduct his medical practice and the procedures he performed on Krystal Ballard.

During Dr. Lundeby's professional career he has received and provided specific training in various lipolysis procedures including traditional, laser assisted and ultrasonic assisted lipolysis. He will testify that he has reviewed the nature and degree of training obtained by Dr. Kerr and that in his opinion Dr. Kerr had adequate training and experience to perform the liposuction and fat transfer procedures on the patient at issue. Dr. Lundeby will testify regarding the significant experience he has in performing these types of procedures as part of his cosmetic practice. He will testify that it was appropriate for the procedures at issue to be performed on patients like Krystal Ballard in an office based setting without general anesthesia and that Dr. Kerr had proper facilities, equipment and personnel to do these procedures safely and within the applicable local standard of health care practice. Dr. Lundeby will testify that he possesses the professional knowledge and experience that allows him to express the opinion and testimony described in this document.

Dr. Lundeby will testify that the fact this patient died does not establish that the standard of practice was violated by Dr. Kerr. He will testify that postoperative infections, if that is what occurred in this case, are not proof of a violation in operative technique, patient selection or breach in sterility. He will render the opinion that based on the record in this case that to a reasonable degree of medical certainty the patient's death was not due to any error or omission on the part of Dr. Kerr or his practice.

Dr. Lundeby will testify regarding the significance of the fact that the procedures Dr. Kerr performed on patients the days following his procedure on Krystal Ballard, starting on July 23, 2010 through July 31, 2010 in which he utilized the same sterile and disinfection procedures he employed in his procedure on Krystal Ballard and there were no infections or infectious conditions with any of the patients. He will discuss how if there had been a failure to adequately sterilize the equipment in question that evidence of that should have shown up not only in all of the operative sites on this patient, but also in all of the operative sites of the subsequent patients which did not occur in this case. Dr. Lundeby will similarly discuss the significance of these same matters in regards to the multitude of procedures Dr. Kerr performed before the procedures performed on Krystal Ballard.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Lundeby will render the opinion that the surgical technique employed by Dr. Kerr during his liposuction and fat transfer procedures would not have caused or resulted in the introduction of any bacteria to the patient. Dr. Lundeby actually holds the opinions expressed in this document and will express all opinions stated herein on a more probable than not basis and/or to a reasonable degree of medical certainty. Dr. Lundeby will testify that the unfortunate death of Krystal Ballard was not and cannot be assumed or proven to be the result of violations of the standard of health care practice.

Dr. Lundeby will testify that the standard of health care practice applicable to physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise in 2010 is established by the local community of physicians engaged in this specialty and the way they typically practice in the community and not by any organization, academic center, publication, foreign physician, or by virtue of any specialty board certification. In this regard, Dr. Lundeby will testify regarding his various publications, honors, committee and university appointments as set forth in his curriculum vitae which is hereby incorporated as if set forth in full. He will also discuss his various society memberships which provide him with opportunities to expand his knowledge and networking base in the field of cosmetic surgery including his affiliations with the American Society for Laser Medicine and Surgery, the American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery, the National Society of Cosmetic Physicians, the American College of Surgeons and both the Idaho and American Medical Associations.

Dr. Lundeby will opine that the standard of health care practice is the care typically provided under similar circumstances by Boise physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise, Idaho in 2010. As part of his testimony, Dr. Lundeby will express and define the local standard of practice as it existed in Boise in 2010 with respect to the medical issues in this case consistent with this disclosure and any deposition which may subsequently be taken and which is hereby incorporated as if set forth in full. Dr. Lundeby holds the opinion and will discuss how compliance with the standard of practice does not guarantee a perfect result and its application and compliance is intended to minimize and hopefully largely reduce undesirable and unintended results. He will explain that the standard of healthcare practice for physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery is not perfect and the records and deposition testimony demonstrate and confirm that no perfect outcome was ever warranted or represented to this patient.

Dr. Lundeby will explain how the standard of practice applicable includes, as a major element, aspects of provider judgment as opposed to the application of science which may vary depending on the patient and care circumstances. He will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr provided appropriate post-operative instructions and properly followed the patient and communicated with her and her family. Dr. Lundeby will be prepared to testify about his experiences in this regard at trial and why Dr. Kerr's care in this case was consistent with the standards of practice he is held to. As with all operative procedures, the risk of infection is always a possibility and Dr. Lundeby will explain that post-operative infection, if it should develop, is an accepted and recognized risk factor that is not due to inappropriate care or violations of the standard of health care practice by the physician and that under the best of circumstances and medical care, infections can and do occur.

To the extent he is asked to address the issue of informed consent, Dr. Lundeby will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr gave appropriate advice and information to Krystal Ballard in regard to the risk, benefits and options prior to the procedure on July 21, 2010 which is documented in Dr. Kerr's medical records. Dr. Lundeby will explain that the surgical care by Dr. Kerr of Krystal Ballard is illustrative of, and in compliance with, the standard of health care practice, based on the class of health care provider to which Dr. Kerr belonged and in which capacity he was functioning. Dr. Lundeby will explain that the standard of health care practice provides that Dr. Kerr must be judged and evaluated in comparison with similarly trained and qualified physicians of the same class as himself, taking into account his training, experience and field of medical specialization and not by a plastic surgeon which Plaintiff is unfairly trying to do in this case.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Lundeby will discuss his training and the certifications he obtained in order to become a physician engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery as well as the adequacy and nature of those obtained by Dr. Kerr. He will discuss the care and treatment of the patient as outlined in the patient's medical records and he will discuss the appropriate nature, timing and content of Dr. Kerr's documented conversations and interactions with the patient and her husband. He will discuss the training classes he provides to physicians, like Dr. Kerr, regarding introduction to and advanced applications for liposuction procedures.

With respect to the fat injection procedure at issue, Dr. Lundeby will discuss and explain to the jury the medical basis upon which a person's own fat may be used to improve the appearance of the body by moving it from an area where it is less needed (usually the thighs or abdomen) to an area that has less tissue volume. He will explain how typically, the transferred fat results in an increase in volume of the body site being treated. He will explain how before the removal procedure begins the areas from where the fat is being removed are injected with a tumescent fluid which helps to minimize bruising and discomfort to the patient. He will explain how and why the adipose tissue or fat is freed and ultimately removed from the body via a cannula placed through a small incision in the patient's skin.

Dr. Lundeby will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr's facility did not need to be certified in order to operate in Idaho. He will testify that there is no evidence that Dr. Kerr went too deep and entered the abdominal cavity or otherwise impacted the bowel in any way so as to contaminate the operative field during the liposuction procedure. He will discuss the pain response a patient would be expected to give if the fascia were to have been impacted, particularly where the patient did not have any sedatives on board for the procedure.

Dr. Lundeby will discuss and describe how the adipose tissue is prepared to be re-injected back into the patient's body and strategically placed into the desired area using either a smaller cannula, or as was done in this case, a needle. He will discuss how the fat is deposited above the muscle and in some instances within portions of the muscle. He will discuss the skill in making injections with accompanies performing fat transfer procedures and that it takes a degree of artistic talent, but that it is not otherwise generally a technically challenging or physically taxing activity for a cosmetic surgeon to engage in.

He will render the opinion that the manner, method and volume by which Dr. Kerr re-injected the adipose tissue back into the patient was appropriate in all respects. He will explain how some of the fat that is transferred often does not maintain its volume over time, which is often addressed by the physician having to re-inject more adipose tissue into a specific location to achieve the desired end aesthetic result. He will explain how the fat transfer procedure was done using a local anesthetic and that this was consistent with the local standard of practice given the nature and extent of the procedure.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Lundeby will discuss the entries in Dr. Kerr's records including the first encounter with the patient on July 13, 2010, what treatment she desired, the fact that this was an elective procedure, that it was a purely cosmetic procedure, he will discuss the entries in patient's health history form, the general state of the patient's health and the absence of risk factors for infection preoperatively, the fact that she had previously had a liposuction procedure and desired further treatment of this type.

Dr. Lundeby will testify that the preoperative preparation of the patient utilizing Hibiclens and alcohol. He will discuss how physicians and hospitals use Hibiclens to cleanse patients as well as their own hands and exposed parts of their bodies before surgery to prevent the spread of bacteria, infection, or disease to patients. It is also used to cleanse wounds to prevent the spread of bacteria and infection. Dr. Lundeby will render the opinion that the skin preparation and surgical sterile technique for the surgery in using Hibiclens and alcohol were appropriate and good agents to use for that purpose.

To the extent it is relevant to his opinions, Dr. Lundeby will also discuss Dr. Kerr's operative report as well as an explanation of how the procedure was performed, the patient's vital signs and her clinical condition before and after the surgery as well as at the post-operative visit with the patient. He will discuss the adequacy of the Dr. Kerr's post-operative discussions, instructions and directions shared with the patient and then ultimately the discussions he had with patient's husband and aunt. Dr. Lundeby will explain that Krystal Ballard was in good health before the procedure on July 21, 2010 and there is no clinical evidence that she had a urinary tract infection and that the pre-operative work up of Dr. Kerr was within the standard of health care practice.

He may discuss the fact that sometimes patients will elect not to disclose health conditions to the physician which may impact the timing of an elective procedure. The reason for this nondisclosure is generally because they are concerned that the physician will cancel or postpone the procedure which may be inconvenient to a patient due to the fact that the patient desires to achieve a recovery by a specific date.

Dr. Lundeby will discuss the technical aspects of the Vaser liposuction procedure including how the local anesthetic is given, how the tumescent anesthetic is prepared and injected, what it does to the adipose tissue, how the Vaser device operates to liquefy the adipose tissue, how and where the cannulas are placed, the amount of energy applied to the device to effectuate the desired impact on the adipose tissue, and the amount of traction applied to free the adipose tissue. From his unique perspective as a cosmetic surgeon, Dr. Lundeby will explain the artistic nature of the liposuction procedure and the laborious aspect of moving the cannula back and forth in order to feather the tissue and achieve the desired aesthetic result which varies depending on the location of the procedure and the body habitus and surgical goals of each patient.

Dr. Lundeby will discuss how the patient never appeared infected or septic per the medical records and deposition testimony while she was seen by Dr. Kerr. He will discuss the expected localized pain patients can expect to experience following a fat transfer procedure. To the extent it becomes relevant to aid in expressing his favorable opinions, Dr. Lundeby may also discuss the cardinal signs of infection and how the patient did not have any fever or warmth to the surgical area, there was no oozing of pus or other signs of active drainage from the operative sites, and there was no swelling or signs of a rash or change in condition of the skin surrounding the area or abnormal odor. Dr. Lundeby will discuss his experience in caring for postoperative wounds and infections based on his long history of performing all manner of both cosmetic and general surgery. Dr. Lundeby will discuss the appropriate manner in which Dr. Kerr looked for and then properly documented the absence of signs and symptoms of infection during his postoperative visit on July 23 and in his subsequent discussions with the patient and her family prior to her death. He will testify that he concurs with Dr. Kerr that at no point did the patient present to Dr. Kerr as having an infection, nor did the standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr require him to refer the patient, prescribe a different course of medical care or obtain any further diagnostic testing than was done. He will testify that Dr. Kerr was not required to obtain any diagnostic tests before electing to perform surgery on July 21.

Consistent with his background and experience in medicine and surgery, Dr. Lundeby will discuss his knowledge of gram negative rods and the fact that such organisms do not exist on the skin, nor would they be found on surgical instruments following an appropriate cleansing through an autoclave. Instead, he will discuss how they represent a class of bacteria which reside in the urinary tract and bowels of a patient. He will testify that postoperative infections can and do occur even under ideal conditions which are not the subject malpractice, but rather as accepted complications which are impossible to prevent.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Lundeby will be prepared to explain the positioning of the patient, incision sites, pre and post-operative photos, patient behavior, choice of instruments, his artistic eye and attention to detail, management of patient expectations, and patient education and counseling from the informed consent phase through the postoperative follow up period. He is expected to utilize at trial various anatomical illustrations as well as various cannulas and related instrumentation for the procedures at issue including those depicted in the discovery photos of instruments and supplies produced to date.

In connection with describing his opinions and the basis therefore, Dr. Lundeby may be called upon to explain how Vaser Lipo involves a minimally invasive technique to selectively break apart and gently remove unwanted fat. He will explain how the targeted area is injected with a special saline solution known as tumescent fluid which numbs the target area and shrinks local blood vessels. This also temporarily expands the volume of the targeted area, making fat cells easier to remove. With the use of exemplars, he will demonstrate how small-diameter probes are then inserted into the body through small incisions. He will explain how by way of using a resonating high ultrasonic frequency, the probes literally shake loose fat cells — while leaving blood vessels, nerves and connective tissues unharmed. The loose fat cells mix with the tumescent fluid, which is then removed from the body using gentle suction. After the surgery, patients are prescribed a recovery regimen to promote maximum skin retraction, smoother results with minimal recovery time compared to traditional liposuction.

Dr. Lundeby may also discuss his knowledge of the history of tumescent technique liposuction which was started by dermatologists, not plastic surgeons. As part of his explanation of the surgery at issue, he will describe how the affected area is expected to drain postoperatively, the types of dressings placed on the affected area, the instructions given to the patient, he will discuss the cardinal signs of an infection and how Dr. Kerr's records and deposition evidence that he specifically and appropriately evaluated and questioned the patient and then documented in his records regarding these issues on each encounter he had with the patient. He will discuss the amount of time it takes to perform the procedures in question and that there was nothing usual or out of character regarding the amount of time it took Dr. Kerr to perform the procedures on July 21, 2010. He will testify that the records and deposition testimony document that Dr. Kerr is a caring, hands on physician who goes to great lengths to monitor and be available for his patients.

Dr. Lundeby will explain the adequacy of the postoperative evaluation Dr. Kerr undertook on July 23, 2010 for evaluating Krystal Ballard and assessing whether there was any clinical evidence of infection of the surgical sites, including absence of any abnormal odor or other evidence or suggestion of infection of any of the surgical sites. He will render the opinion that in order for Dr. Kerr to have infected the patient in some manner at the time the surgery was performed on July 21, that there would have to have been evidence of infection at the location of the surgery by the time of the autopsy or at Elmore Medical Center. He will testify that the absence of any evidence of infection at the injection or liposuction sites is proof to Dr. Lundeby that the patient was not infected during the surgery and that her death is due to some other cause.

He will discuss his review of the autopsy record and the patient's subsequent treatment records. By way of example, Dr. Lundeby is expected to discuss the hospital records from Elmore Medical Center and St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, including the laboratory reports showing the patient had 3+ bacteria in her urine. Based on his experience in general surgery, he will render the opinion that this laboratory finding is consistent with, and provides strong evidence of, an infectious process located within the patient's bladder or urinary tract. He will explain how the bladder is also an area wherein gram negative rod bacteria are known to populate and exist in the face of an infection. He will discuss the concept of how infections, like a urinary tract infection, can be spread hematogenously or via the blood stream.

Dr. Lundeby will also comment upon the significance from his perspective regarding how the patient did not present to Elmore Medical Center with any fever, but had a WBC count of 14.7. He will discuss causes for an elevated WBC count including surgery, stress and dehydration. He will comment upon the fact that the autopsy failed to address the patient's bladder or urinary tract (aside from the kidneys) or perform any microscopic examination of that organ to address the nature of the bacteria identified in the positive UA performed at Elmore Medical Center on July 25, 2010. He is also expected to discuss the patient's elevated creatinine and how this can be signs of dehydration as well as the evidence that the patient's kidneys were not functioning properly.

Dr. Lundeby will discuss how the patient presented to Elmore Medical Center with a blood gas pH of 6.99 and how this is dangerously low and provides strong evidence that the patient was extremely ill by that point and that she needlessly delayed seeking medical attention despite the urging and instruction of Dr. Kerr and his staff. He will testify that the patient's decision to delay returning for further care to either Dr. Kerr or the ER after July 23 is the reason she died and that if she had returned sooner that she more likely than not would have been saved. He will discuss how the cost of vanity and the patient's apparent unrelenting desire for secrecy resulted in her own tragic demise. He will discuss with the jury that it is not the physicians fault when the patient fails to do as they are instructed and return when their condition worsened as it clearly did long before this patient ultimately elected to seek medical help and was transported critically ill to Elmore Medical Center.

Dr. Lundeby will address the vague and confusing nature of the autopsy report wherein the pathologist at autopsy referred to an increase in the amount of acute inflammatory cells within tissue from the surgical sites, and how it is not clear which surgical sites he is referring to in his report. He will discuss how it is not clear where the tissue sections where harvested from on the patient. In this regard, Dr. Lundeby will discuss how there are commonly a variety of bacteria located near the surface normally of wound sites which is not evidence of an infection, but that the more important inquiry which would be more indicative of an infection is whether the gram negative rods were located within the deeper issues under the wound sites which cannot be determined from the autopsy documents in this case.

He will discuss the normal wound biology is to see evidence of bacteria on the surface. Dr. Lundeby will render the opinion, more likely than not, that the gram negative bacterial rods were introduced into the patient's surgical site sometime after Dr. Kerr's surgical procedure rather than being introduced during the procedure. Dr. Lundeby will render the opinion that based on his experience that gram negative rods do not result in the sudden and unexpected patient death such as occurred in this case. He will discuss the fact that the autopsy records eliminate embolism as a cause of death for this patient. Despite this finding at autopsy, he will testify that it would be extremely uncommon (outside of necrotizing fasciitis which attacks the soft tissue and the fascia or tissue covering the muscle and can cause rapid death) for an alleged soft tissue infection to spread, become septic and kill a patient within the limited time frame at issue in this case. In this regard, he will discuss how sepsis is a presumptive clinical diagnosis which is compounded in this case due to the absence of any positive blood cultures. Dr.

Lundeby is expected to offer testimony on several aspects of the autopsy report of Dr. Groben, starting with sepsis with probable toxic shock syndrome of unknown etiology and manner of death natural. His inspection of the incisions through the surgical sites reveal reparative changes, but no gross evidence of an infectious process. No pockets of pus or discolored fluid are seen. No evidence of erythema around the incisions sites. Subcutaneous fat and muscle of the abdominal wall, lower back and buttocks show no areas of necrosis or discoloration associated with reparative changes and no pockets of discolored fluid or pus. These autopsy findings are consistent with and support his opinion that bacteria were just introduced during the procedure of Dr. Kerr.

He will comment upon the significance of the finding by Dr. Kerr that when he saw the patient on July 23, two days post operatively, he did not observe any evidence of cellulitis or redness in the surgical site. He will discuss what it means to him as a physician that the patient repeatedly concealed this procedure from her husband, her employer and that she engaged in noncompliant behavior despite what she had been told both in writing and verbally about how to care for herself and what she agreed to do. He will discuss the challenging position the patient elected to place herself and her health care provider in by erroneously reporting to her husband that she had simply fallen and injured her back and falsely claimed this was the source of her pain rather than admit she had cosmetic surgery performed.

In this regard, he will discuss how the patient admitted she was not taking her medications because she did not want proof of them to show up in any drug screen she might take with the military. He will discuss that when a patient elects to disobey her health care provider that there is only so much the physician can do and that the patient is essentially interfering with and limiting the physician's ability to provide her with care and to make decisions which may have made a difference in her overall outcome. He will discuss concerns regarding whether the patient was properly changing her bandages and caring for herself as instructed and how during any of these times would have been an opportunity for the bacteria in question to be introduced into her system.

Dr. Lundeby will explain that there are no absolutes with a sterile technique and that one can do everything right and still have situations where unwanted bacteria can become introduced into the surgical site, but that given the gram negative rods claimed to have been identified at autopsy, this is not what occurred in this case. He will discuss the patient's admission that she was not taking the narcotic pain medication Norco and was instead taking the non-narcotic drug Motrin which did not appear to be providing the patient with adequate pain control.

Dr. Lundeby will render the opinion that the minimal amount of bruising and edema observed on July 23 was consistent with what he would expect to see at that point postoperatively. He will testify that the standard of practice did not require Dr. Kerr to obtain a urinalysis or complete blood count on the patient on July 23. Dr. Lundeby will discuss how liposuction and fat transfers are office based procedures which are not required to be performed in a hospital setting, nor are hospital privileges required in order to perform such procedures. Dr. Lundeby will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr was not required, nor does the standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr, require that his facility be certified or approved by any accreditation facility such as the AAACH or AAAASF or any governmental agency.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Lundeby will explain how the tumescent lidocaine is mixed, prepared and injected into the patient. He will explain how the Vaser procedure is done with the device in place under the skin without direct visualization. He will discuss how Dr. Kerr documented having harvested 400 cc of fat from the patient's anterior abdomen, 200 cc of fat from her right lateral waist flank and 200 cc of fat from the patient's left lateral waist flank. He will discuss how the Vaser in this case was utilized for less than eleven minutes and that this time was appropriate for the nature of the procedure.

As it relates to rebutting the testimony of the Plaintiff's experts, Dr. Lundeby will explain how the fat was injected into the patient using only a needle and syringe and that there were no incisions made into the patient during the injection phase of the procedure. He will testify that it was proper and acceptable technique for the same needles to be used to inject the fat into both the left and right buttocks of the patient. He will discuss the adequacy of the informed consent discussion Dr. Kerr had with the patient including the content of the informed consent document signed by the patient in this case. He will discuss the risk of infection as being a specifically consented risk of the lipolysis and fat injection procedure. He will discuss how the consent form discusses with the patient both pre and post treatment instructions and how it warns the patient that if they fail to comply with these instructions may increase the possibility that the patient will develop complications.

Dr. Lundeby will challenge the foundation as well as rebut the opinions of the expert witnesses listed by the Plaintiff. Regarding the issue of consent, he will testify that Dr. Kerr discussed with the patient the nature and the extent of the risks normally attendant to the procedure in question such that the giving of consent by the patient was valid in all respects. As part of his testimony, he may also discuss the adequacy of Dr. Kerr's preoperative clinical examination including evaluation of the regions to be lipo-contoured including review for hernias, scars, asymmetries, cellulite, stretch marks, the quality of the skin and its elasticity, the presence of stria and dimpling and the location of fat deposits. He will rebut any testimony by Plaintiff's experts that Dr. Kerr improperly performed the lipolysis procedure, the fat injection procedure, that Dr. Kerr did anything to cause the patient's death.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Lundeby may also address and explain the weight changes of Krystal Ballard. On July 23, 2010 she weighed 135 pounds. On July 25, 2010 at Elmore Medical Center she weighed 130 pounds. At autopsy on July 26, 2010 she weighed 180 pounds. He will explain the medical reasons and significance of these changes in weight. He will discuss the concept of third spacing of fluid or leaking of fluid out of cellular structures due to the body's global inflammatory response. He will discuss this in connection with efforts which were made to maintain fluid volume for the patient once she presented at the hospital. He will testify that a weight gain of 50 pounds due to efforts to maintain fluid volume in the face of the patient's condition would not be unexpected.

He may also comment upon the entries in the records from Elmore Medical Center for July 25, 2010, wherein the treating physician evaluated the buttocks and abdomen of Krystal Ballard and noted little induration of the skin and no redness, warmth or skin sensitivity and delayed the administration of IV antibiotics until 4 ½ hours after admission. At Elmore, cardiac ejection fraction was only 17% and at St. Alphonsus on July 25, 2010, central venous pressure was measured at 20 which is very high and proof of fluid overload. To the extent it relates to his opinions on causation, Dr. Lundeby will explain these factors and their relative significance in terms of the possible reasons for the death of Krystal Ballard.

Dr. Lundeby will testify that the laboratory data of Elmore Medical Center and the clinical findings are indicative of urinary tract infection that developed after the procedure of July 21, 2010 and if gram negative rods were in fact present at autopsy in certain locations, they were more likely to come from the urinary tract of Krystal Ballard or her intestinal tract and that they were not introduced during his surgical procedure. As part of his testimony, it is expected that Dr. Lundeby will explain pertinent anatomy, infectious processes, pathophysiology of infections, treatment for infections, gram negative rods, types of bacteria, reasons why the blood cultures and urine cultures were negative for growth in this case, antibiotics used for the care and the comments of Krystal Ballard regarding that drugs would show up on drug test by the Air Force.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Lundeby will discuss the patient's anatomy including the location of nerves, blood supply, adipose tissue, organs as well as the body's response to surgery, infection, pain medication and antibiotics. This may include extensive testimony by way of demonstrative exhibits depicting general anatomy and/or pictures of the patient and/or of the surgical equipment itself. Dr. Lundeby will testify that even in hindsight the patient in this case did not present with any increased risk for infection that would have raised any concern about her undergoing the procedures on July 21, 2010. He will testify that at the time of Dr. Kerr's procedure on July 21, 2010, there was no evidence of a urinary tract infection of Krystal Ballard.

Data and other information considered and summary of qualifications: In forming his opinions, Dr. Lundeby has relied upon his own unique training and experience as a licensed physician engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic and general surgery in Spokane, Washington in treating, diagnosing, managing and caring for elective procedure patients like Krystal Ballard, his observations of the habits and practices of other cosmetic surgeons and care providers and the way they perform the procedures at issue in this case, his knowledge of the Boise, Idaho standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr in 2010 and his knowledge that it is within Dr. Kerr's specialty and capability to perform the procedures in question as part of his practice of medicine, and his membership and participation in various medical associations and organizations as set forth herein. The data upon which his opinions are based include his medical education, training, skill, experience, his experience practicing cosmetic surgery, his review of the care and treatment experiences with similar lipolysis and fat injection cases over the course of his career in medicine.

Dr. Lundeby's professional background and qualifications are set forth in his attached curriculum vitae which is incorporated herein by reference.

As part of his review of this case, and for purposes of forming his opinions, he has considered and reviewed the depositions of Dr. Kerr. He has also reviewed and considered Dr. Kerr's medical records, the records of Elmore Medical Center, Elmore Ambulance Service, Life Flight, St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, the Ada County Coroner's Office and the Plaintiff's expert witness disclosure. In the event further depositions or medical records are produced, they will also be considered.

Dr. Stiller is board certified in both general and cosmetic surgery and has engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery at all times relevant herein. Dr. Stiller will testify as a retained expert witness at the trial. Dr. Stiller will testify that he has actual knowledge of the standard of health care practice applicable to physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise, Idaho in 2010 and that in his opinion, and based on his own unique background, that Dr. Kerr met such standard taking into account Dr. Kerr's background, training, experience and field of medical specialization with respect to any and all medical services rendered to the patient. Dr. Stiller actually holds the opinions expressed in this document and will express all opinions stated herein on a more probable than not basis and/or to a reasonable degree of medical certainty.

Dr. Stiller will explain the process he undertook in order to familiarize himself with the standards and practices in Boise and the surrounding area for the types of procedures and treatment performed by Dr. Kerr in this case. Part of the basis for Dr. Stiller's opinions include: his background, training, research, practice and experience in performing general and cosmetic surgical procedures as a licensed physician, his experiences in the peer review process associated with his hospital staff privileges in Idaho, his experience of having performed hundreds of cosmetic surgical procedures, his knowledge of how cosmetic procedures like liposuction and fat transfers are performed, including how they were performed in Boise in 2010, his experience in performing a large volume of liposuction and fat transfer procedures.

Dr. Stiller will explain his knowledge of how the Vaser ultrasonic liposuction procedure is performed, his knowledge of the types of equipment and instruments needed to perform the nature and types of cosmetic procedures at issue in this case, his knowledge of the scope of practice of cosmetic surgery providers like Dr. Kerr in Boise, Idaho and elsewhere, his knowledge of the types of medical providers who perform cosmetic procedures like the ones at issue in this case and his knowledge of the manner and method by which surgical equipment and surgical procedure facilities are maintained in a sterile fashion.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Stiller may also explain his training and experience at the Graduate Hospital in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania during his residency in general surgery 1997-2001 as it relates to sterile operating conditions for the procedures he performed, was taught and observed, including his role as chief resident. He will explain the same matters for his experience in his own surgical facility which he currently operates at Palouse Surgeons in both Pullman, Washington and Moscow, Idaho.

Dr. Stiller will discuss the standard of health care practice employed at his own facility in Moscow, Idaho for achieving and maintaining sterile operating conditions and the disinfection of instruments and equipment and maintaining a sterile operative field and that the similar actions and efforts undertaken by Dr. Kerr as have been described for the procedure on Krystal Ballard in this case were used and exceeded in his opinion. Dr. Stiller will testify that the infection rates described by Dr. Kerr in his deposition and discovery responses are well below average for a cosmetic facility and are essentially nil.

He will comment upon how this is evidence that the sterility procedures employed by the Defendants in this case were appropriate and working properly at the time of the surgery at issue in this case. Dr. Stiller will testify that during his professional career he has been acquainted with numerous physicians who perform cosmetic procedures that are not plastic surgeons, but rather come from a number of different medical backgrounds. He will discuss the training he has been provided in cosmetic surgery by various physicians who are not plastic surgeons.

He may also discuss his various publications and presentations on cosmetic surgery including liposuction and fat transfers as set forth in his attached curriculum vitae. Dr. Stiller will discuss how he has become acquainted with the nature and scope of practice he and other cosmetic surgical procedure providers utilize as well as the procedures utilized by them in this specialty, including the procedures utilized for maintaining a sterile field and how to properly clean and maintain the surgical equipment and instruments utilized for cosmetic surgical procedures including the procedures at issue in this case. He will testify that there is more than one way to achieve proper sterilization.

Dr. Stiller will explain that the standard of health care practice for a plastic surgeon is not the same standard of health care practice for someone in the same medical specialty as his and Dr. Kerr. Dr. Stiller will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr had proper training and experience in order to perform the procedures at issue on Krystal Ballard. As part of his testimony, he is expected to refer to the publications, data and documents that have been produced in discovery on this subject and explain the numbers of similar procedures he has performed.

Dr. Stiller will explain that there was no requirement, per the standard of health care practice or otherwise, for Dr. Kerr's facility to be certified, inspected or approved by any organization or government agency, which included his autoclave, his clinic and the instruments he used for surgery and that his medical license allowed him to conduct his medical practice and the procedures he performed on Krystal Ballard. During Dr. Stiller's professional career he has received specific training in various lipolysis procedures including traditional, laser assisted and ultrasonic assisted lipolysis. He will testify that he has reviewed the nature and degree of training obtained by Dr. Kerr and that in his opinion Dr. Kerr had adequate training and experience to perform the liposuction and fat transfer procedures on the patient at issue.

He will testify that it was appropriate for the procedures at issue to be performed on patients like Krystal Ballard in an office based setting without general anesthesia and that Dr. Kerr had proper facilities, equipment and personnel to do these procedures safely and within the applicable local standard of health care practice. Dr. Stiller will testify that he possesses the professional knowledge and experience that allows him to express the opinion and testimony described in this document.

Dr. Stiller will testify that the fact this patient experienced a post-operative complication like the one alleged in this case which resulted in a patient death does not establish that the standard of practice was violated by Dr. Kerr. He will testify that postoperative infections are not proof of a violation. He will render the opinion that the patient's death was not due to any error or omission on Dr. Kerr's part or the part of anyone associated with his practice. He will discuss his own sterilization techniques, training and experience in this area which will help support his opinion that Dr. Kerr employed the use of proper cleaning and sterilization techniques for his equipment and instruments and that he utilized proper procedures and supplies.

Dr. Stiller will testify regarding the significance of the fact that the procedures Dr. Kerr performed on patients the days following his procedure on Krystal Ballard, starting on July 23, 2010 through July 31, 2010 in which he utilized the same sterile and disinfection procedures he employed in his procedure on Krystal Ballard and there were no infections or infectious conditions with any of the patients. He will discuss how if there had been a failure to adequately sterilize the equipment in question that evidence of that should have shown up not only in all of the operative sites on this patient, but also in all of the operative sites of the subsequent patients which did not occur in this case. Dr. Stiller will similarly discuss the significance of these same matters in regards to the multitude of procedures Dr. Kerr performed before the procedures performed on Krystal Ballard.

Dr. Stiller will render the opinion that gram negative bacteria do not cause sepsis or toxic shock as alleged in this case. As part of his testimony, he will discuss the urinalysis obtained at Elmore Medical Center which revealed plus 3 bacteria, white and red blood cells, elevated white blood cell count with a left differential shift and ketones. As part of his testimony, Dr. Stiller will render the opinion that the surgical technique employed by Dr. Kerr during his liposuction and fat transfer procedures did not cause or result in the introduction of any bacteria to the patient. Dr. Stiller will testify regarding the specific issues set forth in this disclosure, but he will also testify globally that nothing Dr. Kerr elected to do or not do with respect to the medical services provided to Krystal Ballard in Boise in 2010 violated the applicable local standard of health care practice which in turn caused or contributed to any damages or injuries to the patient.

Dr. Stiller will be rendering his testimony based on his own unique perspective as a general and cosmetic surgeon and the training and practice experience he has received. Dr. Stiller will testify that the unfortunate death of Krystal Ballard was not and cannot be assumed to be the result of violations of the standard of health care practice. Dr. Stiller will testify that the standard of health care practice applicable to physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise in 2010 is established by the local community of physicians engaged in this specialty and the way they typically practice in the community and not by any organization, academic center, publication, foreign physician, or by virtue of any specialty board certification. In this regard, Dr. Stiller will testify regarding his various publications, honors and university appointments at the National Society of Cosmetic Physicians and the University of Washington School of Medicine WWAMI program as set forth in his curriculum vitae which is hereby incorporated as if set forth in full.

He will also discuss his various society memberships which provide him with opportunities to expand his knowledge and networking base in the field of cosmetic surgery including his affiliations with the American College of Surgeons, American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery and the Idaho Medical Association. He will discuss what these organizations offer their members and the opportunities to associate with colleagues and obtain continuing education in this emerging field.

Dr. Stiller will opine that the standard of health care practice is the care typically provided under similar circumstances by physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise, Idaho in 2010. As part of his testimony, Dr. Stiller will express and define the local standard of practice as it existed in Boise in 2010 with respect to the medical issues in this case consistent with this disclosure and any deposition which may subsequently be taken and which is hereby incorporated as if set forth in full. Dr. Stiller holds the opinion that compliance with the standard of practice does not guarantee a perfect result and its application and compliance is intended to minimize and hopefully largely reduce undesirable and unintended results.

He will explain that the standard of healthcare practice for physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery is not perfect and the records and deposition testimony demonstrate and confirm that no perfect outcome was ever warranted or represented to this patient. Dr. Stiller will explain how the standard of practice applicable includes, as a major element, aspects of provider judgment as opposed to the application of science which may vary depending on the patient and care circumstances. He will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr provided appropriate post-operative instructions and properly followed the patient and communicated with her and her family. Dr. Stiller will testify about his experiences in this regard at trial and why Dr. Kerr's care in this case was consistent with the standards of practice to which he is held.

As with all operative procedures, the risk of infection is always a possibility and Dr. Stiller will discuss that post-operative infections, if they should develop, are an accepted and recognized risk factor that are usually not due to inappropriate care or violations of the standard of health care practice by the physician and that under the best of circumstances and medical care, infections can and do occur even under the best of care conditions. Dr. Stiller will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr gave appropriate advice and information to Krystal Ballard in regard to the risk, benefits and options prior to the procedure on July 21, 2010 which is documented in Dr. Kerr's medical records.

Dr. Stiller will explain that everything undertaken by Dr. Kerr with regard to his care and treatment of Krystal Ballard is illustrative of, and in compliance with, the standard of health care practice typically provided, based on the class of health care provider to which Dr. Kerr belonged and in which capacity he was functioning. Dr. Stiller will explain that the standard of health care practice provides that Dr. Kerr must be judged and evaluated in comparison with similarly trained and qualified physicians of the same class as himself, taking into account his training, experience and field of medical specialization and not by a plastic surgeon.

In order to support his opinions, Dr. Stiller is expected to discuss the training he obtained in order to become a physician engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery as well as the adequacy and nature of those obtained by Dr. Kerr. He will discuss the care and treatment of the patient as outlined in the patient's medical records and he will discuss the appropriate nature, timing and content of Dr. Kerr's documented conversations and interactions with the patient and her husband.

With respect to the fat injection procedure at issue, Dr. Stiller will discuss and explain to the jury the medical basis upon which a person's own fat may be used to improve the appearance of the body by moving it from an area where it is less needed (usually the thighs or abdomen) to an area that has less tissue volume. He will discuss his research and publications on this topic. He will explain how typically, the transferred fat results in an increase in volume of the body site being treated. He will explain how before the removal procedure begins the areas from where the fat is being removed are injected with a tumescent fluid which helps to minimize bruising and discomfort to the patient.

He will explain how and why the adipose tissue or fat is freed and ultimately removed from the body via a cannula placed through a small incision in the patient's skin. Dr. Stiller will discuss and describe how the adipose tissue is then prepared to be re-injected back into the patient's body and strategically placed into the desired area using either a smaller cannula, or as was done in this case, a needle. With use of demonstrative exhibits and various medical instruments, he will explain both the lipo and fat injection process to the jury. He will render the opinion that the manner, method and volume by which Dr. Kerr re-injected the adipose tissue back into the patient was appropriate in all respects.

Dr. Stiller will explain how some of the fat that is transferred often does not maintain its volume over time, which is often addressed by the physician having to re-inject more adipose tissue into a specific location to achieve the desired end aesthetic result. He will explain how the fat transfer procedure was done using a local anesthetic and that this was consistent with the local standard of practice given the nature and extent of the procedure.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Stiller will discuss the entries in Dr. Kerr's records including the first encounter with the patient on July 13, 2010, what treatment she desired, the fact that this was an elective procedure, that it was a purely cosmetic procedure, he will discuss the entries in patient's health history form, the general state of the patient's health and the absence of risk factors for infection preoperatively, the fact that she had previously had a liposuction procedure and desired further treatment of this type. To the extent it is relevant to his opinions, Dr. Stiller will also discuss Dr. Kerr's operative report as well as an explanation of how the procedure was performed, the patient's vital signs and her clinical condition before and after the surgery as well as at the post-operative visit with the patient.

He will discuss the adequacy of the Dr. Kerr's post-operative discussions, instructions and directions shared with the patient and then ultimately the discussions he had with patient's husband and aunt. Dr. Stiller will explain that Krystal Ballard was in good health before the procedure on July 21, 2010 and there is no clinical evidence that she had a urinary tract infection and that the pre-operative work up of Dr. Kerr was within the standard of health care practice. He will render the opinion that the patient developed an infectious process in her urinary tract after the procedures by Dr. Kerr which had nothing to do with the surgery or the sterilization procedures used by the Defendants in this case. In order to further illustrate his testimony to the jury, Dr. Stiller will discuss the technical aspects of the Vaser liposuction procedure including how the local anesthetic is given, how the tumescent anesthetic is prepared and injected, what it does to the adipose tissue, how the Vaser device operates to liquefy the adipose tissue, how and where the cannulas are placed, the amount of energy applied to the device to effectuate the desired impact on the adipose tissue, and the amount of traction applied to free the adipose tissue.

From his unique perspective as both a general and cosmetic surgeon, Dr. Stiller will explain the artistic nature of the liposuction procedure and the laborious aspect of moving the cannula back and forth in order to feather the tissue and achieve the desired aesthetic result which varies depending on the location of the procedure and the body habitus and surgical goals of each patient. In the process of providing his opinions that the care by Dr. Kerr was appropriate, Dr. Stiller will address the method by which the adipose tissue harvested was drained and prepared for re-injection. He will also discuss how the instruments and equipment are routinely cleaned and sterilized for each procedure, he will discuss these pieces of equipment as well as their various attachments and describe that medical equipment which is new versus that which must be re-sterilized for reuse between patients and/or procedures.

Dr. Stiller will discuss the appropriate nature of the pre and post-operative antibiotics administered by Dr. Kerr to the patient and explain why they were given not for an infection, but rather as a prophylaxis against infection. Dr. Stiller will render the opinion that the evidence in this case establishes that the patient never appeared infected or septic while being treated by Dr. Kerr. He will discuss the localized pain patients can expect to experience following a fat transfer procedure into the buttocks region.

Dr. Stiller will discuss the cardinal signs of infection and how the patient did not demonstrate having any fever or warmth to the surgical area, there was no oozing of pus or other signs of active drainage from the operative sites, and there was no swelling or signs of a rash or change in condition of the skin surrounding the area or abnormal odor when she was seen by Dr. Kerr and when she was seen at Elmore Medical Center the day before her death.

Dr. Stiller will discuss the appropriate manner in which Dr. Kerr looked for and then properly documented the absence of signs and symptoms of infection during his postoperative visit on July 23 and in his subsequent discussions with the patient and her husband prior to her death. He will testify that he concurs with Dr. Kerr that at no point did the patient present to Dr. Kerr as having an infection, toxic shock or sepsis, nor did the standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr require him to refer the patient, prescribe a different course of medical care or obtain any further diagnostic testing than was done. Consistent with his background and experience in medicine and surgery, Dr. Stiller will discuss his knowledge of various bacteria including gram negative rods and the fact that such organisms do not exist on or in the skin, nor would they be found on surgical instruments in the event of a breach in sterility. Instead, he will discuss how they represent a class of bacteria which reside in the urinary tract and bowels of a patient.

He will testify that Dr. Kerr had adequate training and experience to perform the surgeries in question, that Dr. Kerr's medical records contain an adequate description of the care rendered and the discussions with the patient, that Dr. Kerr implemented appropriate sterility techniques and conditions for surgery and that he used correct solutions for cleaning and disinfecting instruments and assuring that operative conditions were adequately sterile to guard against the risk of infection. He will testify that postoperative infections can and do occur even under ideal conditions which are not the subject malpractice, but rather as accepted complications which are impossible to prevent.

As part of his testimony and in order to expand upon his background and experience in cosmetic surgery, Dr. Stiller will discuss how the field of laser lipolysis with the use of tumescent anesthesia has developed in recent years. This may include testimony addressing that when considering different types of the body to undergo lipolysis that each area has its own unique geography and involves a degree of physician judgment as to how much material to remove and/or re-inject into each location. As part of his testimony, Dr. Stiller will be prepared to explain the positioning of the patient, incision sites for various injections and instruments, patient selection, choice of instrument sizes and positioning, his artistic eye and attention to detail, management of patient expectations, and patient education and counseling from the informed consent phase through the postoperative follow up period.

He is expected to utilize at trial various anatomical illustrations as well as various cannulas and related instrumentation for the procedures at issue including those depicted in the discovery photos of instruments and supplies produced to date. As part of his explanation of how the Vaser Lipo process works, he will describe it as a minimally invasive technique to selectively break apart and gently remove unwanted fat. He will explain how the targeted area is injected with a special saline solution known as tumescent fluid which numbs the target area and shrinks local blood vessels. This also temporarily expands the volume of the targeted area, making fat cells easier to remove. With the use of exemplars, he will demonstrate how small-diameter probes are then inserted into the body through small incisions.

He will explain how by way of using a resonating high ultrasonic frequency, the probes literally shake loose fat cells — while leaving blood vessels, nerves and connective tissues unharmed. The loose fat cells mix with the tumescent fluid, which is then removed from the body using gentle suction. After the surgery, patients are prescribed a recovery regimen to promote maximum skin retraction, smoother results with minimal recovery time compared to traditional liposuction which requires far greater traction and trauma to the surrounding anatomical structures.

Dr. Stiller may also discuss his knowledge of the history of tumescent technique liposuction which was started by dermatologists, not plastic surgeons. As part of his explanation of the surgery at issue, he will describe how the affected area is expected to drain postoperatively, the types of dressings placed on the affected area and the instructions given to the patient. He will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr's records and deposition testimony evidence that he appropriately evaluated and questioned the patient and then documented in his records these issues on each encounter he had with the patient.

He will discuss the amount of time it takes to perform the procedures in question and that there was nothing usual or out of character regarding the amount of time it took Dr. Kerr to perform the procedures on July 21, 2010. Dr. Stiller will explain the adequacy of the postoperative evaluation Dr. Kerr undertook on July 23, 2010 for evaluating Krystal Ballard and assessing whether there was any clinical evidence of infection of the surgical sites, including absence of any abnormal odor or other evidence or suggestion of infection of any of the surgical sites. He will discuss his review and comments of the autopsy record and the patient's subsequent treatment records. He will discuss the hospital records from Elmore Medical Center and St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center.

He will render the opinion that the laboratory data at Elmore Medical Center is consistent with, and provides strong evidence of, an infectious process located within the patient's bladder which occurred postoperatively and not located within the operative area of Dr. Kerr. He will explain how gram negative rod bacteria are known to populate and exist in the urinary tract. Dr. Stiller will also comment upon the significance from his perspective regarding how the patient did not present with any fever, but had a WBC count of 14.7. He will discuss causes for an elevated WBC count including surgery, stress and dehydration. He will comment upon the fact that the autopsy failed to address the patient's bladder or urinary tract (aside from the kidneys) or perform any microscopic examination of that organ to address the nature of the bacteria identified in the positive UA performed at Elmore Medical Center on July 25, 2010.

He is also expected to discuss the patient's elevated creatinine and how this can be signs of dehydration as well as the evidence that the patient's kidneys were not functioning properly. Dr. Stiller will address the confusing aspect of the autopsy report wherein the pathologist referred to an increase in the amount of acute inflammatory cells within tissue from the surgical sites, and how it is not clear which surgical sites he is referring to in his report. He will discuss how it is not clear where the tissue sections where actually harvested from the patient. Dr. Stiller will render the opinion that the gram negative rods were introduced into the patient's surgical site(s) sometime after Dr. Kerr's surgical procedure rather than being introduced during the procedure and that their introduction had nothing to do with the cleanliness and/or sterility of Dr. Kerr's facility and equipment.

He will comment upon the significance of the finding by Dr. Kerr that when he saw the patient on July 23, two days post operatively, he did not observe any evidence of cellulitis or redness in the surgical site. He will discuss what it means to him as a physician that the patient repeatedly concealed this procedure from her husband, her employer and that she engaged in noncompliant behavior despite what she had been told both in writing and verbally about how to care for herself and what she agreed to do. He will discuss the challenging position the patient placed herself in despite the advice and instruction of her health care provider by erroneously reporting to her husband that she had simply fallen and injured her back and falsely claimed this was the source of her pain rather than admit she had cosmetic surgery and needed help monitoring her care and condition.

In this regard, he will discuss how the patient admitted she was not taking her medications because she did not want proof of them to show up in any drug screen she might take with the military. He will discuss that when a patient elects to disobey her health care provider that there is only so much the physician can do and that the patient is essentially interfering with and limiting the physician's ability to provide her with care and to make decisions which may have made a difference in her overall outcome. He will discuss concerns regarding whether the patient was properly changing her bandages and caring for herself as instructed and how during any of these times would have been an opportunity for the bacteria in question to be introduced into her system.

Dr. Stiller will testify that Dr. Kerr and his employees followed the appropriate sterile technique in regards to the procedure performed on Krystal Ballard. He will explain that there are no absolutes with a sterile technique and that one can do everything right and still have situations where unwanted bacteria can become introduced into the surgical site, but that given the gram negative rods claimed to have been identified at autopsy, this is not what occurred in this case. Dr. Stiller will render the opinion that the minimal amount of bruising and edema observed on July 23 was consistent with what he would expect to see at that point postoperatively.

He will testify that the standard of practice did not require Dr. Kerr to obtain a complete blood count on the patient on July 23 in order to determine what her white count was at that time. Dr. Stiller will discuss his background, training and experience in the use and regular implementation of the sterile technique in his practice as further support for his opinions as to the adequacy of Dr. Kerr's sterile technique. Dr. Stiller will discuss how liposuction and fat transfers are office based procedures which are not required to be performed in a hospital setting, nor are hospital privileges required in order to perform such procedures. Dr. Stiller will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr was not required, nor does the standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr, require that his facility be certified or approved by any accreditation facility such as the AAACH or AAAASF or any governmental agency.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Stiller will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr's procedure room was properly prepared for surgery and to protect and preserve an appropriate sterile field and that he did not require additional rooms or locations to store and clean equipment. He will discuss the autoclave at issue, how it operates and how it helps Dr. Kerr maintain a sterile field for his procedures. He will discuss how an autoclave operates, how it is loaded, what is done to maintain an autoclave, how it is tested and that Dr. Kerr was not required to do more with his autoclave that he has described in this case.

Dr. Stiller will describe the areas around the patient which are considered part of the sterile field depending on the nature and type of procedure at issue. With respect to the lipo procedure in this case, he will explain how the tumescent lidocaine is mixed, prepared and injected into the patient. He will explain how the Vaser procedure is done with the device in place under the skin without direct visualization. He will discuss how Dr. Kerr documented having harvested 400 cc of fat from the patient's anterior abdomen, 200 cc of fat from her right lateral waist flank and 200 cc of fat from the patient's left lateral waist flank. He will testify that these were not excessive amounts and may comment upon the findings set forth at autopsy and in the autopsy photos demonstrating the areas of adipose tissue within the patient.

Dr. Stiller will discuss how the Vaser in this case was utilized for less than eleven minutes and that this time was appropriate for the nature of the procedure. As it relates to rebutting the testimony of the Plaintiff's experts, he will explain how the fat was injected into the patient using only a needle and syringe and that there were no incisions made into the patient during the injection phase of the procedure. He will testify that it was a proper and acceptable technique for the same needles to be used to inject the fat into both the left and right buttocks of the patient. Dr. Stiller will discuss the adequacy of the informed consent discussion Dr. Kerr had with the patient including the content of the informed consent document signed by the patient in this case. He will discuss the risk of infection as being a specifically consented risk of the lipolysis and fat injection procedure. As part of his testimony, and to the extent it is an issue at trial, Dr. Stiller will discuss how the consent form discusses with the patient both pre and post treatment instructions and how it warns the patient that if they fail to comply with these instructions may increase the possibility that the patient will develop complications. He may also discuss his experiences in discussing risks and benefits with patients and the fact that certain patients fail to follow the advice and instructions and end up with an unexpected and/or dissatisfactory result.

Dr. Stiller will challenge the foundation as well as rebut the opinions of the expert witnesses listed by the Plaintiff. Regarding the issue of consent, to the extent not covered by other witnesses, he will testify that Dr. Kerr discussed with the patient the nature and the extent of the risks normally attendant to the procedure in question such that the giving of consent by the patient was valid in all respects. As part of his testimony, he may also discuss the adequacy of Dr. Kerr's preoperative clinical examination including evaluation of the regions to be lipo-contoured including review for hernias, scars, asymmetries, cellulite, stretch marks, the quality of the skin and its elasticity, the presence of stria and dimpling and the location of fat deposits.

He will rebut any testimony by Plaintiff's experts that Dr. Kerr improperly performed the lipolysis procedure, the fat injection procedure, that Dr. Kerr improperly sterilized his equipment or that Dr. Kerr did anything to cause the patient's death. Based on his own unique surgical perspective, Dr. Stiller may also address and explain the significant documented weight changes of Krystal Ballard. On July 23, 2010 she weighed 135 pounds. On July 25, 2010 at Elmore Medical Center she weighed 130 pounds. At autopsy on July 26, 2010 she weighed 180 pounds. He will discuss the medical reasons and significance of these changes in weight as it relates to the issues of fluid overload and organ failure.

He may also comment upon the entries in the records from Elmore Medical Center for July 25, 2010, wherein the treating physician evaluated the buttocks and abdomen of Krystal Ballard and noted little induration of the skin and no redness, warmth or skin sensitivity and delayed the administration of IV antibiotics until 4 ½ hours after admission. He may also comment upon the findings at autopsy which documented no frank evidence of an infection as aptly depicted in the autopsy photos. He may further address and explain to the jury how at Elmore Medical Center the patient's cardiac ejection fraction was noted to be only 17% which is poor. In addition, later at St. Alphonsus on July 25, 2010, the patient's central venous pressure was measured at 20 which is very high and proof of fluid overload. To the extent it relates to his opinions on causation, Dr. Stiller will explain these factors and their relative significance in terms of the causes for the death of Krystal Ballard all of which have nothing to do with the care and treatment rendered by Dr. Kerr.

Dr. Stiller will testify that the laboratory data of Elmore Medical Center and the clinical findings are indicative of urinary tract infection the developed after his procedure of July 21, 2010 and if gram negative rods were in fact present at autopsy in certain locations, they more likely than not came from the urinary tract of Krystal Ballard or her intestinal tract and were not introduced during Dr. Kerr's surgical procedure. As part of his testimony, it is expected that Dr. Stiller will discuss and explain pertinent anatomy, infectious processes, pathophysiology of infections, treatment for infections, gram negative rods, types of bacteria, reasons why the blood cultures and urine cultures were negative for growth, antibiotics used for the care and the comments of Krystal Ballard regarding that drugs would show up on drug test by the Air Force.

It should be noted that in response to the Plaintiff's counsel's concern about the defense experts, Dr. Stiller will testify such that he avoids the presentation of needless cumulative testimony by tailoring his responses such as to avoid excessive duplication of other defense experts. As part of his testimony, Dr. Stiller may be called upon to discuss the patient's anatomy including the location of nerves, blood supply, adipose tissue, organs as well as the body's response to surgery, infection, pain medication and antibiotics. This may include extensive testimony by way of demonstrative exhibits depicting general anatomy and/or pictures of the patient and/or of the surgical equipment itself.

Dr. Stiller will testify that even in hindsight the patient in this case did not present with any increased risk for infection that would have raised any concern about her undergoing the procedures on July 21, 2010. He will testify that at the time of Dr. Kerr's procedure on July 21, 2010, there was no evidence of a urinary tract infection of Krystal Ballard.

Data and other information considered and summary of qualifications: In forming his opinions, Dr. Stiller has relied upon his own unique training and experience as a licensed physician engaged in the medical specialty of general and cosmetic surgery in Moscow, Idaho in consenting, diagnosing, treating, operating, managing, caring for and following up with patients like Krystal Ballard, his observations of the habits and practices of other cosmetic surgeons and care providers, his knowledge of the Boise, Idaho standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr in 2010 and his knowledge that it is within Dr. Kerr's specialty and capability to perform the procedures in question as part of his practice of medicine (regardless of the fact that Dr. Kerr also happens to be board certified in anesthesia), and his membership and participation in various medical associations and organizations as set forth herein.

The data upon which his opinions are based include his medical education, training, skill, experience, his experience practicing cosmetic surgery, his review of the care and treatment experiences with similar lipolysis and fat injection cases over the course of his career in medicine. Dr. Stiller's opinions are also based upon the findings of various other health care providers for the patient, the results and values of various laboratory studies and other testing and observation, treatment plans, consultations, referrals and recommendations for treatment for the patient derived from such medical services and interactions before, during and after the care rendered by Dr. Kerr as described in all medical records, discovery responses and depositions taken. Dr.

Stiller's professional background and qualifications are set forth in his attached curriculum vitae which is incorporated herein by reference.

As part of his review of this case, and for purposes of forming his opinions, he has considered and reviewed the depositions taken to date including Dr. Kerr's, employees of Silk Touch, and the Plaintiff's. He has also reviewed and considered Dr. Kerr's medical records, the records of Elmore Medical Center, Elmore Ambulance Service, Life Flight, St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, the Ada County Coroner's Office and the Plaintiff's expert witness disclosure. In the event further depositions or medical records are produced, they will also be considered.

Dr. Stiller reserves the right to rely as further support for his opinions on medical literature related to any of the subjects set forth in this disclosure as discovery continues. He reserves the right not to offer all or any of the opinions set forth in this disclosure as it as an attorney prepared document and is intentionally worded broadly in order to comply with rule 26(b)(4). The ultimate testimony to be offered at trial will depend to an extent on what testimony is deemed necessary to refute the testimony of the Plaintiff and his experts consistent with the requirements of Idaho Code §6-1012. Plaintiff has the burden of proof and it is only after that burden has been met can the defense determine what evidence and testimony will be needed to respond.

Re: Ballard v. Kerr, et al.

Dear Mr. Jones:

In providing dates for experts, please provide dates within the deadlines set by the Court for completion of discovery. To the extent this proves impractical for any particular expert, we are willing to discuss conducting a deposition after the discovery deadline, provided that under no circumstances would such discovery effect the trial date.

We have previously raised with you your disclosure of multiple experts concerning the same subject matter. Specifically, you have disclosed five experts, including Dr. Kerr, in the area of cosmetic and plastic surgery. We are quite certain the Court will not permit you to present redundant expert testimony at trial. Accordingly, we ask that you identify no more than two experts in this field. In other words, tell us the experts you actually intend to call as your trial witnesses so we can avoid unnecessary depositions. If you are not willing to do this, we will seek appropriate relief from the Court.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

/s/ James B. Perrine

Re: Ballard v. Kerr
Our File No. 1107/25-938

Dear Mr. Perrine:

I am writing in response to your letter of June 20th. Regarding the depositions of Drs. Garrison and Frankle, their availability in August is based solely on their limited schedules. I provided you with earlier dates for Dr. Frankle in June, but this was wisely deferred until you are able to produce the requested tax records. Please understand that we are not looking to change the trial date by having these depositions after the discovery deadline. We take the position that we provided you with complete expert witness disclosures in conformity with the requirements of discovery and it is your decision to take depositions that we believe will simply prove duplicative of these disclosures.

Regarding your claim that we have listed multiple experts on the same subject matter, we disagree with your characterization. Rule 403 speaks to the prohibition of presenting needlessly cumulative evidence. We are mindful of this rule and will not run afoul of it at trial. We have listed several experts from different specialties of medicine to testify on behalf of the Defendants. The fact that you elected to only list one expert does not mean that we should be so limited at trial. The jury is entitled to hear from different experts with different background who all agree that Dr. Kerr did not violate the applicable local standard of practice.

In the spirit of cooperation, we will agree to withdraw Dr. Wills as one of our experts. This eliminates the need to take his deposition. We do, however, intend to call all of our remaining experts at trial and will vigorously oppose any efforts to otherwise limit the number of defense expert witnesses. We do not have an excessive number and your decision to include Dr. Kerr in your numerical calculation is improper. You may consider this our effort to meet and confer and informally resolve this matter.

Very truly yours,

Terrence S. Jones

Case No. CV OC 1204792

MEMORANDUM OF LAW IN SUPPORT OF PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE CUMULATIVE EXPERT WITNESSES

625832

COMES NOW the Plaintiff, Charles Ballard, by and through his attorneys, pursuant to Rule 403 of the Idaho Rules of Evidence, and files his Memorandum of Law in Support of Plaintiff's Motion to Exclude Cumulative Expert Witnesses. Because Defendants intend to offer multiple expert witnesses to offer blatantly duplicative, redundant, and cumulative evidence as to each element of this professional negligence action, defense experts should be excluded. Plaintiff should not be saddled with the expense of deposing all of these expert witnesses when Defendants' discovery responses demonstrate an overtly obvious attempt to offer evidence in violation of Idaho Rule of Evidence 403.

a. Factual Background

On June 3, 2013, Defendants served a supplemental answer to Plaintiff's Interrogatory No. 3, which calls for expert witness information. (See Defs.' First Supp. Ans. to Pl.'s First Set of Interrogs (Affidavit of Counsel Exhibit A).) By their 108-page disclosure (not including attachments), Defendants explicitly identify four experts who they intend to offer as standard of care witnesses: the Defendant, Dr. Kerr; Gregory Laurence, M.D., John Lundeby, M.D., FACS, FAACS; and Geoffrey Stiller, M.D. (Id.) It should be noted, however, that Dr. Thomas Coffman will offer a standard of care opinion to the degree he opines "that Dr. Kerr was not required to test for spores or mold . . . ." (Id. at 52.)

According to Defendants, Drs. Kerr, Laurence, Garrison, Coffman, and Lundeby will testify as to "facts of the case," causation, and damages. (Id. at 2, 22, 43, 63.) Defendants intend to offer Dr. Stiller's testimony to address "facts of the case" and causation. All of these expert witnesses are intended to offer testimony on "the care and treatment of Krystal Ballard." (Id. at 2, 22, 43, 63, 85.)

Defendants' supplemental answer to Plaintiff's third interrogatory is replete with examples of cumulative evidence. With regard to the applicable standard of care, for example, Defendants intend for "Dr. Kerr [to] explain that there was no requirement, per the standard of health care practice or otherwise, for his facility to be certified, inspected, or approved by any organization or governmental agency . . . ." (Id. at 4-5.) Defendants intend for Dr. Lundeby to provide the exact same testimony. (Id. at 25.)

Additionally, Drs. Kerr, Lundeby, Coffman, and Stiller will all testify that Defendants employed proper techniques to maintain sterility. (Id. at 15, 24, 53, 64, 87.) Relatedly, Defendants intend to offer Dr. Garrison to testify that there is no evidence to establish "that there was any breach of sterility in this case." (Id. at 47; see also id. at 48 ("[S]terilization procedures were adequate to maintain a proper sterile field.").) These are but some of the examples of cumulative expert testimony contained with the subject discovery response.

In an attempt to resolve this dispute without Court involvement, counsel exchanged correspondence on this issue. (Letter from James B. Perrine to Terrence S. Jones, June 20, 2013 (Affidavit of Counsel Exhibit B); Letter from Terrence S. Jones to James B. Perrine, June 21, 2013 (Affidavit of Counsel Exhibit C).) It is Defendants' position that they will not run afoul of Rule 403 because their disclosed experts are "from different specialties of medicine." (Id. at 1.) Plaintiff maintains disagreement with Defendants' position, and the dispute remains unresolved.

b. Defendants' intention to offer blatantly cumulative expert witness testimony in this matter justifies exclusion of expert witnesses.

It is axiomatic that "evidence may be excluded if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice . . . or by considerations of undue delay, waste of time, or needless presentation of cumulative evidence." Idaho R. Evid. 403; see also Burgess v.

Salmon River Canal Co., Ltd., 127 Idaho 565, 574, 903 P.2d 730, 739 (1995) (cumulative expert testimony properly excluded pursuant to Idaho R. Evid. 403).

In this matter, the overtly cumulative nature of Defendants' anticipated expert witness testimony is unfairly prejudicial to Plaintiff. Defendants' 108-page answer to Plaintiff's third interrogatory contains numerous examples of cumulative testimony as to multiple elements of Plaintiff's cause of action. Because Defendants' disclosed expert witness testimony is so blatantly in violation of Rule 403, Defendants should not simply be precluded from introducing such cumulative evidence at trial, but Plaintiff should be spared undue and unfair prejudice of incurring the expense of a discovery effort, including depositions, involving experts whose role in this case is necessarily limited to offering cumulative testimony.

Defendants are simply wrong to suggest that they will not run afoul of Rule 403 on account of their expert witnesses' varied medical specialties. The fact remains that those experts have been retained to offer opinions as to a single cause of action. To some degree, all experts have different backgrounds, yet that does not justify duplication of testimony on the same subject matter.

Plaintiff takes no issue with the fact that Defendants may elect to offer expert testimony to supplement that of Dr. Kerr on any particular element of Plaintiff's cause of action. However, the breadth, scope, and depth of cumulative testimony demonstrated within Defendants' discovery response is wholly inappropriate, as it is clearly and unfairly prejudicial.

c. Conclusion

Therefore, pursuant to Rule 403 of the Idaho Rules of Evidence, Defendants should be limited to two expert witnesses, including Defendant, Dr. Kerr, on any single topic.

Dated this 26th day of June, 2013.

SUPPLEMENTAL RESPONSE:

Dean E. Sorensen, M.D.
Sorensen Cosmetic Surgery Center
250 Bobwhite Court, Suite 120
Boise, ID 83706

Dean Sorensen, M.D. is a physician who has practiced cosmetic medicine including plastic surgery in Ada County for over 20 years. He owns and operates the Sorensen Cosmetic Surgery Center of Idaho. Dr. Sorensen's facility serves the Boise and Eagle, Idaho areas. Dr. Sorensen also has staff privileges at St. Luke's Regional Medical Center in Boise. Dr. Sorensen is familiar with the standard of care applicable to defendants at the time Krystal Ballard was treated by Dr. Kerr at his clinic, Silk Touch MedSpa and Laser Center. He is familiar with the standard of care applicable to physicians such as Defendant Brian Kerr, M.D. practicing cosmetic medicine including cosmetic and aesthetic procedures and surgery in Ada County including Boise and Eagle at the time Krystal Ballard was treated by Dr. Kerr at his clinic in July 2010.

Dr. Sorensen's Curriculum Vitae is attached in supplemental response to Defendants' Interrogatory No. 6. By way of background, he received his degree in medicine from Loyola University in Chicago. Upon completion of his medical school training, Dr. Sorensen underwent an internship followed by a residency in general surgery at Highland Hospital in Oakland, California and the U.S. Naval Hospital in Portsmouth, Virginia. Subsequently, he undertook a two-year fellowship in plastic surgery at the University of Utah Medical Center in Salt Lake City. Following a facelift fellowship, Dr. Sorensen returned to Boise where his practice includes plastic, aesthetic and reconstructive procedures and services. Dr. Sorensen is board-certified by the American Board of Surgery and the American Board of Plastic Surgery. He is a Fellow of the American College of Surgeons, a member of the American Society of Plastic Surgeons and the Aesthetic Society. He is a member of the AMA and Idaho Medical Association. He is past President of the Ada County Medical Society. He has served on the Idaho State Board of Medicine and the Idaho State Board of Medical Discipline. Dr. Sorensen is an inspector for AAAASF, which certifies ambulatory surgical facilities similar to that of the defendants for compliance with local and national standards of care, including the sterilization policies, procedures and protocols employed by such facilities. By virtue of his education, training and experience as described above, Dr. Sorensen is familiar with the standard of care for physicians and surgical facilities offering cosmetic and aesthetic services such as those performed by the defendants and which were performed on Krystal Ballard by the defendants, including the appropriate sterilization policies, procedure and protocols required by the standard of care in both the Boise, Eagle, Ada County and surrounding areas. Dr. Sorensen is familiar with the applicable standard of health care practice in the areas served by St. Luke's Regional Medical Center and St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, to include Ada County, Idaho and the cities of Boise and Eagle, which existed at the time and place of the treatment of Krystal Ballard on or about July 21, 2010 in Eagle, Idaho, and which was applicable to the class of health care providers to which the defendants Dr. Kerr and his clinic, Silk Touch Med Spa & Laser Center, belong, and in which he and the clinic were functioning, and which applied to similarly trained and qualified providers of the same class in the same community, taking into account their training, experience, and fields of medical specialization (hereafter "the applicable standard of care").

Dr. Sorensen has reviewed the pertinent medical records of Krystal Ballard, including the report of the post-mortem examination of Krystal Ballard. He has also reviewed the deposition transcripts of Dr. Kerr, Ms. Kerr and Donna Berg as part of his review in this case. As discovery proceeds, Dr. Sorensen will receive additional discovery materials as they become available and, therefore, his anticipated opinions are subject to modification and supplementation. All of Dr. Sorensen's anticipated opinions will be to a reasonable degree of medical certainty.

It is expected that Dr. Sorensen will testify that Krystal Ballard died as a direct and proximate result of conduct of the defendants that was not only negligent, but rose to the level of reckless misconduct, and which grossly violated the applicable standard of care. A review of the depositions reveal that Dr. Kerr and his clinic staff lacked adequate training in appropriate sterilization of a facility, its equipment and instruments. Further, Dr. Kerr and his clinic staff failed to properly avail themselves of information readily available to provide for appropriate sterility in carrying out their cosmetic and aesthetic practice. These standards are readily available from organizations that certify ambulatory and surgical facilities, the Center for Disease Control, the medical literature, and references within the user's manual of the machinery used during Krystal Ballard's surgery and medical treatment.

Specifically, but without limitation, it is expected that Dr. Sorensen will testify as follows:

1. Krystal Ballard died from septic shock as a result of bacteria which entered her body during the surgical procedure performed by Dr. Kerr on July 21, 2010 at the defendants' facility.

2. The infection was introduced into Ms. Ballard's buttocks during the procedure and was determined to be gram negative rods which are commonly found in stool. While a failure to appropriately prepare the patient for the fat transfer could have been the cause of the bacteria being introduced into Krystal Ballard's body, most likely it occurred because the material obtained from the abdomen was contaminated because of the wholly inadequate, negligent, and reckless misconduct of the defendants in failing to sterilize the instruments and equipment used during the procedure.

3. The procedure room used for the liposuction on Ms. Ballard was not a clean environment by any reasonable surgical standards. It was used for other, non-surgical procedures and as a storage area for supplies and contaminated instruments used during procedures.

4. The instruments used in the liposuction and fat transfer procedures on Ms. Ballard were initially put in a basin in the procedure room and "washed" with Hibiclens and alcohol. Alcohol is not approved as a sterilization solution, nor is Hibiclens approved for sterilization of medical instruments, supplies or equipment.

5. The dirty instruments were taken from the procedure room not to an area designated for dirty equipment, but rather to a room where the autoclave was kept for allegedly sterilizing the equipment.

6. The defendants broke almost every rule of safe care of surgical instruments as measured by any reasonable standard in their treatment of Ms. Ballard. There were no protocols or procedures for cleaning of instruments, nor housekeeping and cleaning of the procedure room or the clean room. After the initial gross cleaning in the procedure room the instruments were placed in a Hibiclens/alcohol mixture not an approved proteolytic enzyme solution wash and were then transferred to the room where the autoclave was, which should have been but was not a clean room.

7. The autoclave used depends on the mechanical monitoring of sterilization. Gauges on the autoclave do not ensure sterilization. The defendants admit there was no maintenance and service checks of the autoclave, nor were any logs kept of any inspection of the autoclave.

8. Allegedly chemical indicators were used, but Dr. Kerr and his clinic staff do not wrap the cassettes and there are no records of what the chemical indicators revealed. There should be documentation of internal as well as external use of chemical indicators because chemical indicators cannot be used as means of ensuring sterility. Biological indicators must be used (spore tests) but were not. The failure to use biological indicators and spore counts is egregious.

9. The autoclave used by the defendants in their treatment of Ms. Ballard as an alleged means of sterilizing hollow chambers and cannulas must have both a negative or vacuum pressure as well as a gravity cycle. The former forces steam through the cannula for appropriate sterilization of the instruments.

10. The employees handling the instruments used to treat Ms. Ballard and responsible for cleaning and sterilization do not have an adequate medical background, nor adequate training in the safe handling, cleaning and sterilization of equipment, nor were there any protocols in place to provide that guidance, and Dr. Kerr himself lacks fundamental knowledge of appropriate cleaning and sterilization to provide the training and guidance to other staff.

Dr. Sorensen will testify that defendants including specifically Dr. Kerr violated the applicable standard of care by virtue of the above described treatment of Krystal Ballard. Dr. Kerr and defendants breached the applicable standard of care in the way in which they operated the facility at the time Ms. Ballard was treated, including through the complete neglect and failure to adhere to even the most basic standards required in the Boise, Eagle and Ada County areas, and defendants' conduct was negligent, reckless and demonstrated a willful disregard for patient safety which lead directly to and proximately caused the death of Krystal Ballard.

Dr. Sorensen charges $500.00 per hour in connection with his consultation and services as an expert witness in this matter. He has not authored any publications within the preceding ten years and has not testified as an expert at trial or deposition within the preceding four years.

George Nichols, M.D.
739 Middle Way
Louisville, KY 40206

Dr. Nichols is a medical doctor who specializes in anatomical, clinical, and forensic pathology. A copy of Dr. Nichols' Curriculum Vitae, which outlines his education, training, and experience in his medical specialty is provided as part of Plaintiff's Supplemental Responses to Interrogatory No. 6. Dr. Nichols has reviewed the pertinent medical records of Krystal Ballard, including the autopsy report prepared in conjunction with the post-mortem examination, as well as recuts of the pathology slides from the post-mortem examination. As discovery proceeds, Dr. Nichols will receive additional discovery materials and, therefore, his anticipated opinions are subject to modification and supplementation. All of Dr. Nichols' opinions are expected to be to a reasonable degree of medical certainty.

It is expected that Dr. Nichols will testify that the bacterial infection from which Krystal Ballard died was a direct result of bacteria being introduced into her body during the procedure performed by Dr. Kerr on July 21, 2010, and as a result of a breach in sterility, as gram negative rods are proof to a reasonable degree of certainty that a breach in sterility occurred. As a result of bacteria being introduced into her body, Krystal Ballard was exposed to an exotoxin, which causes an inflammatory response (toxic shock) and blood vessels to dilate. As a result of the sepsis, Krystal Ballard's organs were underperfused, ischemia to the organs ensued, and Krystal

Ballard succumbed to multisystem organ failure. Dr. Nichols will testify that there is no other reason for Krystal Ballard's death other than as a direct result of bacteria introduced intra-operatively during the procedure, most likely as a result of contaminated equipment.

Dr. Nichols charges $400.00 per hour in connection with his consultation and services as an expert witness in this matter, with a minimum charge of $2,500.00, and a flat fee of $4,000.00 where an out-of-state appearance necessitates his missing an entire day's work.

A listing of any other cases in which Dr. Nichols has testified as an expert at trial or by deposition within the preceding four years is attached hereto[1], bates numbered BALLARD000200 – BALLARD000207.

Keith Barclay Armitage, M.D.
12600 Cedar Road
Cleveland Heights, OH 44106

Dr. Armitage is a medical doctor, who specializes in infectious disease. A copy of Dr. Armitage's Curriculum Vitae, which outlines his education, training, and experience in that medical specialty, is provided as part of Plaintiff's Supplemental Response to Defendants' Interrogatory No. 6. Dr. Armitage has reviewed the pertinent medical records of Krystal Ballard, including the autopsy report prepared in conjunction with the post-mortem examination. As discovery proceeds, Dr. Armitage will receive additional discovery materials and, therefore his anticipated opinions are subject to modification and supplementation. All of Dr. Armitage's opinions are expected to be to a reasonable degree of medical certainty.

It is expected that Dr. Armitage will testify that the bacterial infection from which Krystal Ballard died was a direct result of bacteria being introduced into her body during the procedure performed by Defendant Dr. Kerr on July 21, 2010, which occurred as a result of a breach in sterility. The gram negative rod bacteria discovered at autopsy are proof to a reasonable degree of certainty that they resulted from operative sterility issues from instruments used during the procedure and introduced intra-operatively. As a result of the bacteria being introduced into Krystal Ballard's body during the procedure performed by Defendant Dr. Kerr, Krystal Ballard became septic and died.

A listing of all publications authored by Dr. Armitage within the preceding ten years is attached hereto, bates numbered BALLARD000254 – BALLARD000260.

Dr. Armitage, in connection with his consultation and services as an expert witness in this matter, charges $300.00 per hour to review records, discuss the case, and prepare any reports, $400.00 per hour to attend any deposition, and $1,500.00 per half day to testify at trial.

Cornelius A. Hofman is an economist. A copy of Mr. Hofman's Curriculum Vitae, which outlines his qualifications, professional experience, and background is provided as part of Plaintiff's Supplemental Responses to Defendants' Interrogatory No. 6. Mr. Hofman will present testimony on his opinions of net present value of lost financial support and lost non-financial support to Plaintiff, which is attributed to the untimely death of Krystal Ballard. Mr. Hofman has been provided information concerning the educational background, employment history, and wage earning and benefits history of Krystal Ballard, as well as the services Mrs. Ballard provided to her husband. Please refer to the materials attached hereto and bates numbered GEC000001 – GEC000347.

As discovery proceeds, Mr. Hofman will receive additional discovery materials, expected to include, but not be limited to, the tax return information for Mrs. Ballard and Plaintiff, economic and financial literature, college transcripts, and military benefits. Accordingly, his anticipated opinions are subject to modification and supplementation.

Mr. Hofman, in connection with his consultation and services as an expert witness in this matter, charges $3,900.00 for analysis and report preparation and $490.00 per hour to testify at any deposition or trial.

A listing of any other cases in which Mr. Hofman has testified as an expert at trial or by deposition within the preceding four years is attached hereto, bates numbered BALLARD000224 – BALLARD000231.

Case No. CV OC 1204792 PLAINTIFF'S SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL ANSWERS TO DEFENDANTS' FIRST SET OF INTERROGATORIES

COMES NOW the Plaintiff, Charles Ballard ("Plaintiff"), in accordance with Rule 33 of the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure, and submits the following Second Supplemental Answers to Defendants' First Set of Interrogatories.

General Statements and Objections

A. Representations of fact and law herein are made in good faith without the benefit of complete discovery. These answers represent Plaintiff's best efforts at this stage of the litigation and are based on currently available, non-privileged, and non-work product information and documents.

B. Plaintiff objects to each and every interrogatory to the extent that it calls for information subject to the attorney-client privilege, the work product privilege, the privilege for critical self-examination, or any other privilege. To the extent that documents or information arguably subject to such privileges may be provided by Plaintiff, such privileges are not waived beyond the precise extent of the disclosure made, and no waiver of privilege may be implied in that no disclosure of anything which is actually privileged is intended.

C. Plaintiff objects to each and every interrogatory to the extent that it may be vague, ambiguous, confusing, nonsensical, incomprehensible, or involves usage of words other than those commonly and customarily used, or assumes matters contrary to fact.

D. Plaintiff objects to providing information not within its knowledge, custody, possession, or control, or which does not exist.

E. No objection, general or specific, which has been raised herein is waived by the provision of any answer herein unless specifically stated to be waived by such answer.

ANSWERS

INTERROGATORY NO. 5: Please state the name and address of each person whom you intend to call as an expert witness at the trial, and for each such person set forth a complete statement of all opinions to be expressed and the basis and reasons therefore, the data or other information considered by the witness in forming the opinions, any exhibits to be used as a summary of or support for the opinions, a list of all publications authored by the witness within the preceding ten years, the compensation to be paid for the testimony and a listing of any other cases in which the witness has testified as an expert at trial or by deposition within the preceding four years.

SECOND SUPPLEMENTAL ANSWER:

Plaintiff previously disclosed Cornelius A. Hofman with the GEC Group in response to this interrogatory. Mr. Hofman is an economist. Plaintiff supplements his prior response to this interrogatory concerning Mr. Hofman and produces herewith Mr. Hofman's report dated May 8, 2013, styled "Assessment of Economic Loss" prepared in connection with this case and the death of Krystal Melissa Ballard, bates numbered GEC000351 – GEC000395.

Additionally, we provided Mr. Hofman with Krystal's transcript from Embry-Riddle Aeronautical University and her transcript from University of Maryland University College. Those documents are bates numbered GEC000348-GEC000349 and GEC000350, respectively, and are attached hereto.

Plaintiff previously disclosed Keith Armitage, M.D., in response to this interrogatory. Dr. Armitage specializes in infectious disease medicine. In addition to the previously disclosed opinions of Dr. Armitage, which are incorporated by reference herein, it is expected that Dr. Armitage will testify concerning the lack of effect the antibiotic prescribed by Dr. Kerr would have on the gram negative bacteria cultured at autopsy. Dr. Armitage is expected to testify that the antibiotic prescribed by Dr. Kerr in follow up to the procedure he performed on Krystal Ballard would not be effective in treating gram negative bacteria. Further, the prescribing of a Medrol Dosepak by Dr. Kerr would suppress the body's own immune system and have a deleterious effect on a patient with an infection. Further, Dr. Armitage will testify that the time interval between the cosmetic procedure and Krystal Ballard's death is such that the introduction of the fatal bacteria occurred intraoperatively. Had the infection occurred post-operatively, Krystal Ballard would not have exhibited signs of sepsis until much later. Additionally, the bacteria responsible for post-operative infections are gram positive bacteria, usually from skin flora, not gram negative bacteria. As such, the gram negative bacteria is not a typical post-operative infection but rather one coming from peritoneal cavity flora which must have been transferred to the buttocks during the fat transfer.

Further, Plaintiff saith not.

Superior Court of New Jersey, Appellate Division.
Lisa McLEAN, Administratrix ad Prosequendum of the Estate of Kevin McLean, and Lisa McLean, Individually, Plaintiff–Appellant,
v.
LIBERTY HEALTH SYSTEM, Greenville Hospital, and A. Khan, M.D., Defendants–Respondents, and Jersey City Medical Center, Manuel Aragones, M.D. and Surriaya Khanum, M.D., Defendants.

No. A–1793–11T4.
Submitted Nov. 8, 2012.
Decided March 28, 2013.

Background: Mother of deceased patient brought medical malpractice action against hospital and emergency room physician, alleging that defendants had negligently failed to detect and treat an infection, causing patient to become paralyzed and die. After a jury trial, the Superior Court, Law Division, Hudson County, entered judgment on verdict in favor of defendants, and mother appealed.

Holdings: The Superior Court, Appellate Division, Ashrafi, J.A.D., held that:
(1) probative value of testimony of plaintiff's expert was not outweighed by risk of needless presentation of cumulative evidence, and
(2) exclusion of testimony denied plaintiff fair trial.

Reversed and remanded.

Probative value of expert testimony of emergency room physician, that defendant physician had violated standard of care in treating patient, was not outweighed by risk of needless presentation of cumulative evidence, and thus testimony was admissible in medical malpractice action arising when defendant physician failed to detect or treat a serious infection in patient who came to emergency room twice in three days; even though plaintiff had presented expert testimony of another emergency room physician that defendant had violated standard of care in both visits, value of second opinion on complicated medical issues was high. 157 Evidence
157IV Admissibility in General
157IV(D) Materiality
157k146 k. Tendency to mislead or confuse. Most Cited Cases

The burden lies with the party seeking exclusion of evidence to show that the probative value of the evidence is substantially outweighed by one or more factors including risk of confusion of issues, undue delay, waste of time, or needless presentation of cumulative evidence. Trial court error, excluding testimony of second expert on issue of whether defendant emergency room physician breached standard of care, denied plaintiff a fair trial in medical malpractice action, warranting new trial; trial court unreasonably limited plaintiff to one witness on issue of liability on grounds that second witness would be duplicative, breach of standard of care was central disputed issue in the case, defendant specifically and falsely argued that plaintiff had only one expert testifying on issue of breach of standard of care, and trial court's evidentiary ruling prevented plaintiff from responding to defendant's improper argument. Issue was for jury on whether patient's pre-existing condition, a antibiotic-resistant infection, was the proximate cause of his paralysis and death, in medical malpractice action against emergency room physician who had failed to detect or treat the infection; defense expert testified that even if defendant had detected the infection and treated it with antibiotics, the results would not have been any different.

198H Health
198HV Malpractice, Negligence, or Breach of Duty
198HV(G) Actions and Proceedings

Evidence in medical malpractice action did not warrant jury instruction asking jury to apportion, on a percentage basis between patient's pre-existing infection and defendant physician's alleged negligence in failing to detect or treat the infection, proximate cause of patient's paralysis and death, but instead jury should have been asked only whether plaintiff proved that the increased risk of harm resulting from defendant's negligence was a substantial factor in causing patient's injuries and death; testimony of defendant's expert, that even if defendant had detected the infection and treated it with antibiotics the results would not have been any different, was insufficient to satisfy defendant's burden of establishing that damages could have been reasonably apportioned and what those apportioned damages were.

Statements contained in patient's medical records, opinions as to when patient had contracted antibiotic-resistant infection and what had caused the infection, were required to be redacted from records before records were admitted in evidence, under rule governing expert opinions contained in admissible hearsay evidence, in medical malpractice action arising from emergency room physician's failure to detect or treat the infection; physicians expressing the opinions contained in the records were not called as witnesses in the action, and the opinions in the records conformed to opinions of patient's experts but were contradicted by defendant's experts. Before Judges FUENTES, ASHRAFI and HAYDEN.

The opinion of the court was delivered by ASHRAFI, J.A.D.

*159 An undetected infection left a sixteen-year-old boy paralyzed and allegedly led to his death. Plaintiff, who is the boy's mother and the administratrix of his estate, filed a medical malpractice lawsuit claiming that an emergency medical doctor who treated her son twice within three days should have discovered the *160 infection. Defendants contended that the patient's symptoms gave the doctor no reason to suspect an infection. The jury's verdict was that plaintiff did not prove medical malpractice.

Plaintiff now appeals, asserting that several errors at the trial tainted the jury's verdict, and also, that the verdict was against the weight of the evidence. We reverse and order a new trial. The trial court should not have prohibited plaintiff from presenting the testimony of a second expert witness on the subject of medical malpractice because his testimony would be duplicative.

I.

Kevin McLean was born in 1988. On September 24, 2005, when Kevin was sixteen-years-old, he and some friends were assaulted in Jersey City, and Kevin was stabbed in the thigh and in the arm. Plaintiff-mother, Lisa McLean, rushed to the scene, and Kevin was taken by ambulance to Jersey City Medical Center. His wounds were treated in the emergency department, and he was discharged with a prescription for an antibiotic. Kevin followed up on the care of his wounds with his primary care physician, pediatrician Reginald Coleman, and the wounds appeared to have healed within a few weeks.

925 About six weeks after the stabbing, on November 9, 2005, Kevin complained of low back pain, which was radiating into his left leg. Plaintiff took him to the emergency room at Greenville Hospital that afternoon. Kevin and his mother did not draw a connection between the stabbing and the back pain, and they did not volunteer information about the stabbing injuries at the emergency department in Greenville Hospital. About three hours after he arrived at the hospital, Kevin was examined by defendant, Dr. Anwar Khan. The doctor ordered urinalysis and an x-ray of the back, both of which were normal. The doctor diagnosed Kevin with a back sprain and administered pain medication. Kevin's pain improved quickly, and the doctor discharged him from the hospital at about 10:00 that night.

*161 Two days later, on November 11, Kevin's back pain had worsened and was now radiating into both legs. He was walking with a visible limp. Plaintiff took him again to the emergency department at Greenville Hospital, and again Kevin was seen by Dr. Khan. This time, the doctor ordered two CT scans, both without intravenous contrast. [FN1] The scans were unremarkable. The doctor diagnosed Kevin with sacroiliitis, a type of joint inflammation. He discharged Kevin with prescriptions for a pain reliever and a muscle relaxant and instructed him to follow-up with his own doctor.

> FN1. CT, short for computed tomography, is an imaging procedure that uses a computer to interpret data from x-rays and to produce an image of a selected area of the body. Stedman's Medical Dictionary 1996 (28th ed.2006). Intravenous contrast enhances the ability to see certain structures on the CT scan.

Kevin's condition did not improve over the next several days. On November 15, he was seen by Dr. Coleman, who observed that Kevin did not "look right" and had him admitted at Jersey City Medical Center. Kevin's condition declined rapidly. After several tests, he was transferred to St. Joseph's Medical Center. There, he went into cardiac arrest and became comatose. Kevin was eventually diagnosed with methicillin-resistant staphylococcus aureus (MRSA), a type of staph infection that resists antibiotics.

Despite the treatment that was administered at St. Joseph's hospital, Kevin's blood tests did not come back negative for infection until November 22. In addition, doctors performed a CT-guided aspiration of Kevin's upper thigh, from which they drained a half liter of pus.

Kevin began to regain consciousness in December, but the damage was already done. The infection and cardiac arrest caused brain damage that paralyzed him from the neck down. He spent the rest of his life in either a hospital bed or a nursing home. Two years after his visits to Greenville Hospital, Kevin died on October 27, 2007, of complications from his quadriplegia.

162 Plaintiff filed her medical malpractice complaint in August 2008, naming as defendants Greenville Hospital, Dr. Khan, and Liberty Health System, as well as Jersey City Medical Center and other doctors. Defendants other than those associated with Greenville Hospital were dismissed from the case without finding that they had any liability for Kevin's injuries and death. The trial of the malpractice case against the Greenville Hospital defendants [FN2] was conducted from September 19 926 to October 5, 2011. The trial focused on expert testimony to establish what caused Kevin's infection and eventual death. The witnesses at trial were plaintiff-mother, Kevin's grandmother, defendant-doctor, and a total of six expert witnesses, four called by plaintiff and two by defendant. Each side presented an expert on the standard of care in emergency medicine, as well as an expert in infectious diseases. Plaintiff also presented expert testimony from a radiologist and a forensic economist. As we will discuss, plaintiff had consulted with additional experts and was prepared to present their testimony as well, but the court had informally granted a pretrial motion of defendant that restricted each side to one expert witness on any subject or specialty relevant to the case.

> FN2. Plaintiff's claims against Greenville Hospital and the entity that owned it were based solely on the doctrine of respondeat superior, legal responsibility for the alleged negligence of Dr. Khan as the emergency room doctor. In the remainder of this opinion, we will refer to the Greenville Hospital defendants in the singular as "defendant."

The jury returned a verdict that defendant was not negligent in his treatment of Kevin. The trial court denied plaintiff's motion for a new trial, and judgment was entered in favor of defendant. Plaintiff then filed this appeal.

II.

[1] We agree with plaintiff that the trial court erred in prohibiting plaintiff from presenting testimony by a second malpractice liability expert and that the error entitles plaintiff to a new trial.

163 In preparation for the trial, plaintiff consulted with and prepared to call at the trial five medical expert witnesses: James Bagnell, M.D., an emergency department physician; Alan Schechter, M.D., also an emergency department physician; William Matuozzi, M.D., a radiologist; Mark Cooper, M.D., another radiologist; and Arthur Klein, M.D., an infectious disease physician.[FN3] Our record on appeal does not document how the trial court's limitation on the number of experts came about. We do not have a record of a formal pretrial motion or an actual ruling on the record limiting each side to one expert in a specific field of medicine. It appears from counsel's comments during the trial and statements in the appellate briefs that defendant moved to limit the number of expert witnesses that could testify before the jury and that the trial court indicated informally its favorable inclination on the motion.

> FN3. Plaintiff also presented testimony at the trial from a non-medical expert witness, forensic economist Royal Bunin, M.B.A., on the subject of plaintiff's economic loss for the wrongful death claim. Defendant's experts at the trial were Michael VanRooyen, M.D., an emergency department physician; and Chester Smialowicz, M.D., an infectious disease physician.

On the morning of jury selection, the trial court and the attorneys discussed the list of anticipated witnesses who would testify. The court reminded plaintiff's attorney of its "understanding" that plaintiff would not call all of her expert witnesses to testify. Plaintiff's attorney referred to the trial court's "preliminary indication[ ] about a ruling that [plaintiff] should not use two E.R. doctors and two radiologists." Apparently accepting the court's ruling at that time without making a formal objection, counsel named Dr. Bagnell as the emergency department expert who would testify for plaintiff.

Dr. Bagnell was expected to testify, and did later testify before the jury, that defendant deviated from the accepted standard of medical care for an emergency department physician on both visits of Kevin to Greenville Hospital, November 9th and November 11th. Dr. Bagnell's opinion was that deviation occurred when 164 defendant failed to elicit from Kevin his recent history of stab wounds, failed to palpate the patient and independently discover*927 the wounds, and also failed to perform a CT scan with contrast, which would have revealed the infection.

Before Dr. Bagnell testified, during counsel's opening statements to the jury, Dr. Khan's attorney made a remark that prompted plaintiff's attorney to revisit the issue of the court's restriction on the number of expert witnesses. In his opening statement, defense counsel remarked:

> [W]e will prove to you that no emergency room physician with a possible exception of Dr. Bagnell, plaintiff's expert who is going to testify here, would ever have thought for a scintilla of a moment that this is a patient with an infection. None.

This statement was false. Dr. Schechter's expert report for plaintiff concluded that the accepted standard of care had been met by defendant's treatment of Kevin on November 9th, but it also indicated that on November 11th, when the back pain persisted and increased, "the standard of care required that an infectious or compressive cause for Mr. McLean's back pain be searched for." Dr. Schechter summarized his opinion as follows regarding November 11th:

> Mr. McLean presented for a second time to the emergency department at Greenville Hospital on November 11, 2005 with three to four days of back pain radiating to his legs. The workup that was done on that day did not meet the accepted standard of medical care. Needed blood tests were not done. A needed rectal temperature was not done. Needed appropriate imagings were not done. Mr. McLean was prematurely discharged from the Greenville Hospital emergency department on November 11, 2005.

After the opening statements, plaintiff's attorney moved for reconsideration of the limitation on expert witnesses. Counsel argued that he had complied with the court's instruction to choose one emergency department expert to testify and that defense counsel had now told the jury "that there's no other ER doctor in the world save the witness that we intend to put on the stand that shares the opinion that his client did anything wrong." Plaintiff's attorney requested that the court either allow Dr. Schechter to testify or inform the jury that plaintiff had a second emergency department expert that contradicted defense counsel's remark. 165 Defense counsel responded that the opinions of plaintiff's two emergency department experts were not consistent and that plaintiff had to "take [her] pick." The court stated it would review the expert reports and then rule on plaintiff's application.

At the conclusion of the trial day, the court denied plaintiff's request to allow Dr. Schechter to testify. The court described defense counsel's remark as "just hyperbole ... [a] passionate attorney losing his cool for ... two seconds." The court could think of no reasonable way to correct defense counsel's "one line that may have misrepresented a fact" and believed the jury would not be affected by the remark. Describing Dr. Schechter's testimony as "duplicative," the court ruled that plaintiff would not be permitted to "bring in another expert because he says basically the same thing that your current expert says." The court also commented that plaintiff probably would not want to call Dr. Schechter before the jury because he disagreed with part of Dr. Bagnell's opinions and the latter expert provided "more deviation testimony" in support of plaintiff's case. Having been rebuffed, plaintiff proceeded at trial with only Dr. Bagnell's testimony on the subject of defendant's alleged deviation from accepted standards of medical care and treatment.

*928 We now hold that the trial court erred in limiting expert witnesses to only one per side for each relevant field of medicine, in particular, on the crucial issue of deviation from accepted standards of medical care. The court's pretrial ruling was a mistaken exercise of its discretionary authority to control the presentation of evidence at the trial. See N.J.R.E. 611(a) ("court shall exercise reasonable control over the mode and order of interrogating witnesses and presenting evidence"). Nothing in our rules of evidence, or other laws or rules, gives a trial court authority to balance the number of witnesses presented by each side at the trial. Nor is the trial court authorized by N.J.R.E. 403 or any other rule or law to bar crucial evidence merely on the ground that it duplicates another witness's testimony.

166 A trial court would likely abuse its discretion if it imposed a limitation of only one witness for each side to testify on a factual matter that is vital to the resolution of a disputed issue. To illustrate the point with a hypothetical example, in a typical car accident case where the driver's negligence is disputed, the trial court would err if it barred testimony on the ground of duplication by a second eyewitness, who would testify essentially identically to another eyewitness, that the traffic light was red or that the driver was speeding or driving erratically. In the general charge to the jury, courts often instruct that the number of witnesses is not controlling in deciding whether a party has met its burden of proof. See Model Jury Charge (Civil), 1.12I, "Preponderance of Evidence" (2012). But at the same time, the jury is not prohibited from considering whether more than one witness has attested under oath to a fact that is important to deciding a contested issue. Corroboration of a fact by more than one witness can be very important in seeking the truth. See, e.g., N.J.S.A. 9:6–8.46(a); State v. Walker, 417 N.J.Super. 154, 165, 8 *A.*3d 844 (App.Div.2010).

We see no reason that expert testimony should be treated wholly differently from factual testimony with respect to vital opinions that go to the heart of the disputed issues in the case. Especially in a case such as this where the jury's truth-finding function required choosing between the opinions of experts, the parties should have been permitted to corroborate the testimony of their experts with other experts who reached similar conclusions.

Expert testimony may be more complex and time-consuming than factual testimony, such as the facts we referenced in our hypothetical example. The trial court has discretion to exclude expert testimony under N.J.R.E. 403 that may unduly delay or complicate the trial without sufficient probative value. Such a ruling, however, must be made formally, on the record, and in accordance with the rules of evidence. We disapprove of the procedure employed in this case by which the trial court informally*167 perhaps off-the-record during conference with the attorneys in chambers—restricted the witnesses that a party may call to testify.[FN4]

> FN4. To be fair, it is also the function of counsel to make a record of any pretrial ruling with which a party disagrees.

[2] Under N.J.R.E. 403, the trial court may exercise its discretion to exclude evidence because "its probative value is substantially outweighed by the risk of (a) ... confusion of issues ... (b) undue delay, waste of time, or needless presentation of cumulative evidence." See Green v. N.J. Mfrs. Ins. Co., 160 N.J. 480, 495, 734 *A.*2d 1147 (1999). The burden lies with the 929 party seeking exclusion of the evidence to show that the probative value is substantially outweighed by one or more of the factors listed in Rule 403. State v. Morton, 155 N.J. 383, 453, 715 *A.*2d 228 (1998).

A leading practice manual on the New Jersey Rules of Evidence states: "Although clause (b) of N.J.R.E. 403 cites 'undue delay, waste of time, or needless presentation of cumulative evidence' as reasons for excluding evidence under the Rule, it is difficult to find reported decisions which rely on such reasons alone." Biunno, Weissbard & Zegas, Current N.J. Rules of Evidence, comment 4 on N.J.R.E. 403 (2012). Cases relying on this portion of the Rule often involve issues tangential to the central dispute in the case. See Showalter v. Barilari, Inc., 312 N.J.Super. 494, 514, 712 *A.*2d 244 (App.Div.1998) (evidence of the plaintiff's blood alcohol content in a dram shop case, offered to prove that the defendant served him alcohol, was needlessly cumulative where other evidence established the fact); State v. Taylor, 226 N.J.Super. 441, 451, 544 *A.*2d 883 (App.Div.1988) (evidence of witness's character for truth and veracity was properly excluded, since admission would have required time for prosecution to locate rebuttal witnesses, and the collateral dispute about general credibility of the witness may have confused the jury).

Here, the testimony that plaintiff wished to present went to the heart of her case: whether defendant deviated from accepted *168 standards of care for an emergency department physician. Although a second expert would have taken more time at the trial, it might have been time well-spent. In the field of medicine, second opinions are often sought to test the accuracy of a diagnosis or the benefits and risks of proposed treatment. Surely it cannot be said that additional expert testimony in a case that involved complicated issues of emergency and diagnostic medicine had such low probative value as to be substantially outweighed by its partially repetitive nature.

We note that Rule 403 does not refer to "duplicative evidence" but to " needless ... cumulative evidence" that might cause undue delay in the trial and a waste of time. By our holding today, we do not preclude a trial judge from excluding expert evidence when its cumulative nature substantially outweighs its probative value. We hold, however, that two expert witnesses on the central issue of liability in a medical malpractice case do not per se reach the level of needless cumulative evidence that substantially outweighs its probative value. The trial court mistakenly exercised its discretion in granting defendant's pretrial motion to limit expert witnesses to one on each side on a central disputed issue in the case.

[3][4] In addition, whatever discretionary authority the trial court theoretically may have had to limit each side to a single emergency department expert, that authority dissipated once defense counsel misused the court's pretrial ruling and falsely told the jury that no emergency medicine expert save one would have considered an infection as the cause of Kevin's symptoms. An attorney may not take advantage of a favorable evidentiary ruling and make statements that are "contrary to facts which [the other party] was precluded from adducing." State v. McGuire, 419 N.J.Super. 88, 144, 16 *A.*3d 411 (App.Div.) (quoting State v. Ross, 249 N.J.Super. 246, 250, 592 *A.*2d 291 (App.Div.), certif. denied, 126 N.J. 389 (1991)), certif. denied, 208 N.J. 335, 27 *A.*3d 948 (2011). Having successfully moved before trial to exclude one of plaintiff's two emergency department experts, defense counsel 169 made an inaccurate statement to the jury that plaintiff *930 was powerless to disprove because of the court's ruling.

The trial court recognized the impropriety of the remark, but it concluded that it was "not critical" to the plaintiff's case. Plaintiff's case was that a doctor performing up to the accepted standard of care would have considered an infection as a potential cause of Kevin's otherwise undiagnosed back and leg pain, and the doctor would have ordered additional tests to confirm or exclude that potential cause. Defense counsel's false assertion succinctly summarized the defense position that such a diagnosis was not warranted. The remark struck at the core of the dispute. It required a response, which plaintiff was prepared to give before the trial began. The court should have reconsidered the limitation it placed on expert testimony and allowed plaintiff to present Dr. Schechter as an expert witness. His testimony would not have been a waste of time and would not have unduly delayed the trial.

Any concern about the divergence in the opinions of plaintiff's liability experts was for plaintiff and her attorney to weigh in deciding whether to call Dr. Schechter before the jury. Plaintiff's attorney might have argued in summation that the differences in the opinions of plaintiff's experts showed that they performed their evaluations independently and, in fact, bolstered their credibility. A trial judge must avoid infringing on the parties' right to present their proofs through their chosen witnesses, which is "an essential element in the conduct of a trial." Cardell, Inc. v. Piscatelli, 277 N.J.Super. 149, 155, 649 *A.*2d 107 (App.Div.1994) (internal quotation mark omitted); accord Peterson v. Peterson, 374 N.J.Super. 116, 125, 863 *A.*2d 1059 (App.Div.2005).

Because the excluded testimony of Dr. Schechter was crucial to plaintiff's allegations of malpractice and might have affected the jury's verdict, it was reversible error to exclude it. Plaintiff is entitled to a new trial.

III.

[5][6] Plaintiff also contends that the trial court erred in denying her motion at the end of all evidence for a directed verdict on 170 apportioning of damages between defendant's alleged negligence and the pre-existing infection. Defendant responds that it presented evidence from which the jury could conclude that Kevin's injuries and death would have occurred even if defendant had ordered additional diagnostic tests. Furthermore, defendant contends that the jury never reached issues of proximate cause and its apportioning between Kevin's pre-existing condition and defendant's alleged negligence. The jury's deliberations ended upon its finding that defendant was not negligent. Additionally, plaintiff did not object to the jury instructions the court gave on a pre-existing condition and proximate cause.

The issue is moot because the jury did not reach any question on the verdict form on proximate causation and its apportioning. We nevertheless comment upon the issue because it may again be presented on a retrial. We conclude that the trial court did not err in denying plaintiff's motion for a directed verdict, as it was presented. But the court should not have asked the jury on this trial record to apportion proximate causation in terms of percentages between the pre-existing condition and defendant's alleged negligence.

In Scafidi v. Seiler, 119 N.J. 93, 574 *A.*2d 398 (1990), the Court addressed causation and damage questions in cases in which a plaintiff suffered from a pre-existing condition that combined with the defendant's medical malpractice to cause 931 harm. In such situations, practical realities require that the standard for proximate causation be modified. To succeed in such a case, the plaintiff must show that: (1) the defendant deviated from the applicable standard of care; (2) the deviation increased the risk of harm to the plaintiff from a pre-existing condition; and (3) the increased risk was a substantial factor in producing the ultimate result. Id. at 108, 574 *A.*2d 398. The defendant should only be held responsible for the portion of the harm attributable to his or her conduct, but the defendant bears the burden of proving that the plaintiff's damages can be apportioned between the defendant *171 and the pre-existing condition. Id. at 110, 574 *A.*2d 398; accord Fosgate v. Corona, 66 N.J. 268, 272–73, 330 *A.*2d 355 (1974).

Here, plaintiff alleged that Kevin was suffering from a pre-existing MRSA infection when defendant examined him on November 9th and 11th. Plaintiff had the burden of proving that negligent diagnosis and treatment by defendant on one or both dates increased the risk of the injuries and death caused by the infection, but defendant had the burden of proving an appropriate apportionment of proximate causation in terms of percentages. See Verdicchio v. Ricca, 179 N.J. 1, 24, 843 *A.*2d 1042 (2004); Reynolds v. Gonzalez, 172 N.J. 266, 282, 798 *A.*2d 67 (2002); Scafidi, supra, 119 N.J. at 108, 574 *A.*2d 398.

Although Dr. Smialowicz testified for the defense that the infection was not present on or before November 11th, he also testified that defendant's alleged deviation from the standard of care would have made no difference in Kevin's condition. On cross-examination, plaintiff's attorney asked Dr. Smialowicz to assume that blood had been taken on November 11th, that the MRSA infection was discovered, and that antibiotics were started immediately. Dr. Smialowicz stated that starting antibiotics at that point "would not have changed anything." Similarly, on re-direct examination, defense counsel asked Dr. Smialowicz if the outcome would have been different had antibiotics been started promptly after November 11th. Dr. Smialowicz said no. This testimony amounts to the defense's denial that the alleged negligence of defendant increased the risk of harm to Kevin. Dr. Smialowicz's testimony permitted the jury to conclude that the alleged negligence of defendant was not a substantial factor in bringing about Kevin's injuries and death and that the pre-existing infection was the sole proximate cause. The trial court appropriately viewed the defense case as contending that the jury should allocate 100% proximate causation to the pre-existing condition and zero to defendant's alleged negligence. Consequently, the court correctly denied plaintiff's motion for a directed verdict *172 on whether the pre-existing condition was the proximate cause of Kevin's injuries and death.

Defendant presented no evidence, however, to satisfy the defense burden of proof on apportionment of proximate cause in any different percentages. In Verdicchio, supra, 179 N.J. at 37–38, 843 *A.*2d 1042, the Court held that the defense expert's testimony that the "ultimate outcome" would have been the same if cancer had been diagnosed and treated earlier was insufficient to carry the defendant's burden of proving apportionment between the pre-existing condition and the misdiagnosis.

Plaintiff is correct in arguing that a question asking the jury to determine percentages of proximate causation was not warranted in this case based on the evidence presented. Instead, the jury should only have been asked whether plaintiff proved that the increased risk of harm 932 resulting from defendant's negligence was a substantial factor in causing Kevin's injuries and death. See Reynolds, supra, 172 N.J. at 285–86, 798 *A.*2d 67; Scafidi, supra, 119 N.J. at 108–09, 574 *A.*2d 398. In the context of that question, the court would also instruct the jury that defendant asserted the infection was the sole proximate cause and defendant's alleged deviation was not a substantial factor in causing the injuries and death.

On retrial, the court should consider again the issue of an appropriate jury charge and tailor the charge to the proofs as presented.

IV.

For purposes of completeness in the event of further appeal, or as further guidance for a retrial, we add the following brief comments to address other issues plaintiff has raised.

We reject plaintiff's argument that the jury's verdict was against the weight of evidence. The defense experts testified that Kevin's symptoms were inconsistent with an infection and that defendant had no reason to conduct tests to determine whether an 173 infection was causing Kevin's back pain. Dr. Smialowicz testified that the virulent infection that paralyzed Kevin did not occur until after Kevin's second visit to Greenville Hospital on November 11th. The jury could credit the testimony of defendant's experts and conclude that defendant did not deviate from accepted standards of care.

Nor did the trial court abuse its discretion in concluding that the jury's verdict was not the product of improper influence, such as undue sympathy for defendant, or on impatience in seeking to reach a verdict. Those arguments of plaintiff do not warrant discussion in a written opinion. R. 2:11–3(e)(1)(E).

[7] We also conclude that the trial court correctly granted defendant's application for redaction of small parts of the medical records admitted in evidence. Plaintiff offered in evidence records from St. Joseph's Medical Center and the convalescent hospitals to which Kevin was later admitted. The records contained statements that attributed the MRSA infection to the September 2005 stabbing injuries, conclusions that conformed to the opinion of plaintiff's infectious disease expert, Dr. Klein, and were contradicted by defendant's expert in the same field, Dr. Smialowicz. Although the bulk of the medical records were admissible pursuant to N.J.R.E. 803(c)(6) (business records) and N.J.R.E. 803(c)(4) (statements made for the purpose of medical diagnosis or treatment), disputed opinions about Kevin's diagnosis, the cause of his infection, and the length of time that the infection existed were properly excluded from the records in accordance with N.J.R.E. 808. See Nowacki v. Cmty. Med. Cntr., 279 N.J.Super. 276, 652 *A.*2d 758 (App.Div.) , certif. denied, 141 N.J. 95, 660 *A.*2d 1194 (1995); see also Agha v. Feiner, 198 N.J. 50, 63, 965 *A.*2d 141 (2009) (while experts may refer to a medical report from a non-testifying expert to apprise the jury of the basis of an opinion, N.J.R.E. 703 "was not intended as a conduit through which the jury may be provided the results of contested out-of-court expert reports").

174 Next, plaintiff argues that defendant's emergency department expert, Dr. VanRooyen, was permitted to change his testimony at trial without adequate notice to plaintiff, contrary to McKenney v. Jersey City Medical Center, 167 N.J. 359, 771 A. 2d 1153 (2001). Dr. VanRooyen had stated in his deposition that defendant had ordered a blood test on November 9th. Shortly before the trial began, he corrected that mistake and eventually testified *933 that he meant defendant had ordered a urinalysis, not a blood test. Plaintiff's attorney sought to cross-examine Dr. VanRooyen as to whether a blood test should have been ordered. The trial court sustained defendant's objection and ruled that no expert for plaintiff had testified that a blood test should have been ordered, and so, that alleged form of negligence was not a relevant issue before the jury.

On retrial, Dr. Schechter will presumably testify consistently with his report that a blood test should have been ordered on November 11th. The factual predicate for the trial court's ruling will no longer be present, but a ruling on whether Dr. VanRooyen may be asked about the need for a blood test must await the circumstances presented at the retrial. The tardy correction of Dr. VanRooyen's deposition error is now moot as an issue of fair notice to plaintiff. Presumably, Dr. VanRooyen can be cross-examined again at the retrial regarding his error as relevant to his credibility as an expert witness.

Reversed and remanded for a new trial.

Court of Appeals of Texas,

B.C. SIMS, Appellant,
v.
Fred B. BRACKETT, M.D., et al., Appellees.

No. 13–92–575–CV.
April 7, 1994.
Rehearing Overruled May 26, 1994.

Patient filed medical malpractice action against surgeons, nurses and pharmacists following colon surgery for injuries resulting from intestinal leak. The 94th District Court, Nueces County, Jack Hunter, J., entered verdict in favor of defendants. Patient appealed. The Court of Appeals, Dorsey, J., held that: (1) bench conference was sufficient to preserve error; (2) exclusion of expert medical witness' testimony as to cause of patient's postsurgery intestinal leak as merely cumulative was improper; (3) exclusion of nurse as expert witness was improper; (4) failure to make timely offer of proof as to what nurse, as excluded expert witness, would have testified resulted in failure to preserve error on appeal; and (5) exclusion of expert medical witness' testimony as to cause of patient's postsurgery intestinal leak was harmful error.

Reversed and remanded.

FN1. Assigned to this Court by the Chief Justice of the Supreme Court of Texas Pursuant to Tex. Gov't Code Ann. § 74.003 (Vernon 1988).

OPINION

DORSEY, Justice.

B.C. Sims, plaintiff below, appeals a take-nothing judgment in a medical malpractice case. By eight points of error, he complains of adverse rulings by which the trial court excluded his expert witnesses and limited the presentation of evidence.

We reverse and remand.

I. Facts

Sims entered Spohn Hospital for colon surgery, during which Dr. Fred Brackett removed a cancerous portion of Sims's colon. Following surgery, Sims developed intestinal blockage which Dr. Brackett treated by non-surgical methods, including administering large doses of Reglan, a drug used to increase intestinal motility. The non-surgical measures were unsuccessful at relieving the blockage, and doctors Brackett and Appel performed a second operation. The surgeons relieved the obstruction by passing a tube with a balloon-type tip through the length of the intestine. While doing this, they examined the intestine and noted no signs of leakage.

However, despite the second surgery, Sims's condition continued to deteriorate. Within a day, he was placed in intensive care where he remained for over forty days. Sims suffered intense pain, high fever, redness on the right leg, decreased flexion in the right foot, and a green, bilious discharge from his incision. He claimed that these *452 signs indicated an intestinal leak and infection. The infection became so severe that Sims went into shock. Because of his weakened condition, he was treated conservatively with large doses of Flagyl (an antibiotic) and painkillers. Treatment of the infection was overseen by Dr. Michael Bullen, a specialist in infectious diseases. Dr. Jack Cortese, a kidney specialist, was also brought in to prevent kidney failure .

The conservative treatment succeeded in strengthening Sims generally, but he continued to experience problems. Exploratory surgery was performed. This third operation revealed an abscess in Sims's abdomen, which Dr. Brackett corrected surgically. Sims had also developed gangrene in his right leg, which the doctors had to amputate. Further, he now suffers from brain damage which he had not suffered before his entry into Spohn Hospital for the colon surgery.

II. General Procedural Facts

Sims sued all of the doctors, Spohn Hospital, and its nurses and pharmacists for negligence. He alleged and produced evidence that during the first operation, Dr. Brackett "nicked" the bowel, the hole was not closed, and bowel fluids leaked into his abdominal cavity, causing infection and severe pain. The infection was not timely discovered by any of the doctors, and it eventually spread to the lower extremities, resulting in gangrene and requiring necessitating the leg's amputation. The large doses of medication he received, especially of Flagyl, Sims claimed, led to nerve and brain damage. Sims further alleged that the doctors failed to get the Sims's informed consent on treatment, that Spohn's nurses failed to properly chart his condition and to compel the doctors to take note of his symptoms. He faults Spohn's nurses and pharmacists for administering the unusually large doses of Flagyl and Reglan without question or verification.

The defendants presented a united front at trial, maintaining that there had been no acts or omissions constituting negligence and that Sims's problems resulted from his own health conditions and the known risks of surgery. They all agreed that Sims was too weak to undergo more surgery after the second operation and that the conservative treatment he received was the best course. They attributed the gangrene to Sims's pre-existing circulation problems and low blood pressure. The nerve and brain damage, they argued, was due to a stroke. They produced evidence that the large amount of medications given was proper according to recent medical publications.

From the outset of trial, examination of the witnesses was very time-consuming. By the second day, the trial judge, frustrated by the pace, forbad all redirect and re-cross examination of witnesses. Trial continued in the following way: appellant would examine his witness then each of the four defendants would cross-examine. When a defendant called a witness, that defendant would conduct his direct examination, appellant would cross-examine, and then the three remaining defendants would cross-examine. The record shows that in the six days it took appellant to present his case-in-chief, Sims presented nine witnesses, and much trial time was consumed by motions and objections from all the parties.

III. Exclusion of Expert Testimony

By points one and two, Sims claims that the trial court abused its discretion by excluding two of his expert witnesses. Dr. Charles Felger was excluded on the grounds that his testimony was cumulative of a prior expert and Nurse Riley on the grounds that although she was designated thirty days before trial, she was not designated as soon as practicable.

[1][2] The court has the authority to exclude testimony to avoid the needless presentation of cumulative evidence. TEX.R.CIV.EVID. 403, 611. Evidence that is relevant may properly be excluded under Rule 403 if its probative value is substantially outweighed by considerations of undue delay or needless presentation of cumulative evidence. When a trial court makes a decision to admit or to exclude evidence in which it weighs competing legitimate factors in reaching his decision, the court exercises discretion. See Downer v. Aquamarine Operators, Inc., 701 S.W.2d 238, 241–42 (Tex.1985). The trial 453 court has discretion to choose among only legitimate and legal alternatives. Landon v. Jean–Paul Budinger, Inc., 724 S.W.2d 931, 935 (Tex.App.—Austin 1987, no writ) . . A reviewing court will not disturb the ruling unless the trial court abuses that discretion. Lorusso v. Members Mut. Ins. Co., 603 S.W.2d 818, 821 (Tex.1980); Ponder v. Texarkana Memorial Hosp., Inc., 840 S.W.2d 476, 479 (Tex.App.—Houston [14th Dist.] 1991, writ denied).

[3] In reviewing a claim of trial court error, we conduct a three-stage review. First, we determine whether the claimed error was preserved for our review, then, whether the trial court committed error, and finally, whether the error was harmful.

[4][5] Sims's first expert medical witness was Dr. Keith Fannin, a doctor board certified in general surgery. Dr. Fannin testified to various acts and omissions on the part of the defendants that led to Sims's complications. During rigorous cross-examination, the defendants challenged Dr. Fannin's opinions because he was a friend of Sims [FN2] and he lacked board certification in a more particularized specialty.

> FN2. Dr. Fannin was a friend of Sims's and stated that the two of them had sometimes gone fishing together.

Appellant also called Dr. Charles Felger, formerly a teaching physician at Austin's Brackenridge Hospital and board certified in internal medicine. Soon after appellant began his direct examination of Dr. Felger, the trial judge called a bench conference. After a lengthy discussion, the court determined that Dr. Felger's testimony would be wholly cumulative of Dr. Fannin's. The court ruled that Felger would not be allowed to testify and that appellant must proceed with other witnesses.

At the first stage, we determine whether the error was properly preserved. To preserve a complaint that the trial court improperly excluded evidence, the complaining party must make an offer of proof as to what the excluded witness would have testified. Such an offer must be made before the court's charge is read to the jury. TEX.R.APP.P. 52(a) & (b); TEX.R.CIV.EVID. 103(b). Appellees argue that Sims's offer of proof as to Dr. Felger's testimony was untimely because Sims did not make his bill of exceptions until after the jury began deliberating. However, Sims made an informal offer of proof that was sufficient under appellate rule 52(b) which states:

> No formal bills of exception shall be needed to authorize appellate review of the question whether the court erred in excluding the evidence.... A transcription of the reporter's notes showing the offer, whether by concise statement or question and answer, showing the objections made, and showing the ruling thereon, when included in the record certified by the reporter, shall establish the nature of the evidence, the objections, and the ruling.... No further offer need be made.

TEX.R.APP.P. 52(b) (emphasis added).

Before excluding Felger's testimony, the trial judge sua sponte ordered a bench conference in which he questioned counsel regarding the substance of Felger's testimony. That conference was recorded by the reporter and is part of the statement of facts. Counsel emphasized that Felger is board certified in internal medicine and specializes in gastroenterology. His testimony would have shown "a separate, independent view of what transpired." Dr. Felger would have given specific testimony on the standard of care for recovery, operative notes, and hospital charting procedures. After a long bench conference in which counsel continued to describe Dr. Felger's expected testimony, the judge excluded the evidence as cumulative. The court could not properly have so ruled unless he knew the essential substance of Dr. Felger's testimony. We hold this bench conference, outside the hearing of the jury that apprised the court of the nature of the evidence and was recorded by the court reporter, was an informal offer of proof and was sufficient to satisfy the requirements of rule 52(a). See generally Ledisco Fin. Serv., Inc. v. Viracola, 533 S.W.2d 951, 959 (Tex.Civ.App.—Texarkana 1976, no writ) . Finding *454 the record sufficient to preserve error, we next look to whether the court erred.

The cause of Sims's intestinal leak was a contested issue. Defendant Brackett gave several different explanations for its cause, including an inadvertent surgical nick. Dr. Fannin, the general surgical expert for the plaintiff, had the firm opinion that the leak was caused by a surgeon's nick; however, his credibility was diminished because he was a friend of the plaintiff and not a specialist. In contrast, Dr. Felger was a board certified internist, specializing in gastroenterology and had taught at a large metropolitan hospital. The difference in the two expert's credentials and Felger's lack of a personal relationship with Sims in all likelihood would have enhanced Felger's credibility compared to Fannin's.

[6] In a medical malpractice trial expert medical testimony is a necessity, and the matters at issue are addressed by opposing experts. In order for the trial court to exclude Dr. Felger's testimony it must have found that its probative value was " substantially outweighed by ... [the] needless presentation of cumulative evidence." TEX.R.CIV.EVID. 403 (emphasis added). To exclude evidence under Rule 403, the trial court must conduct a balancing test and only when the balance weighs significantly on the side of judicial efficiency may relevant evidence be excluded as cumulative. The excluded evidence here had great probative value and was not merely cumulative of Dr. Fannin's testimony. See In re Watson, 720 S.W.2d 806, 808 (Tex.1986) (trial court erred in excluding 81 letters holding they were not "merely cumulative" and were the strongest rebuttal evidence available); Ponder, 840 S.W.2d at 479 (error in excluding part of expert witness' testimony on causation, a hotly contested issue, alleged to be merely cumulative); see also Jones v. Colley, 820 S.W.2d 863, 866–67 (Tex.App.—Texarkana 1991, writ denied). The test is not merely whether the evidence to be adduced from the two witnesses is similar, but also whether the excluded testimony would have added substantial weight to the offering parties' case. If so, it is error to exclude it. Bohmfalk v. Linwood, 742 S.W.2d 518 (Tex.App.—Dallas 1987, no writ) (trial court improperly excluded disinterested witness whose testimony corroborated testimony of interested witness).

We hold that the trial judge abused his discretion in excluding Dr. Felger's testimony on the hotly contested issues in this case.

[7] Appellant complains of the court's exclusion of Nurse Riley as an expert witness by point two. Sims designated Nurse Riley and a pharmacist as expert witnesses on the thirtieth (30) day before trial. Spohn Hospital moved to strike on grounds she was not designated "as soon as practicable" under rule 166b. See TEX.R.CIV.P. 166b(6)(b). Further, in response to appellant's designation, Spohn designated nurse and pharmacist experts seventeen days before trial. Appellant pointed out that Spohn designated a nurse and two doctors as experts (which they decided not to call) the day appellant designated their nurse. The trial court struck all of those experts as a sanction against both parties' "gamesmanship."

[8] The party opposing a witness has the burden of producing evidence to show that the designation was not "as soon as practical." Mentis v. Barnard, 870 S.W.2d 14, 16 (1994). Spohn claimed that appellant never designated Nurse Riley in answers to the interrogatories it propounded shortly after suit was filed in 1989. The objection is the same as that found to be inadequate in Mentis. Id. at 15. Simply advising the court how long the case had been pending does not by itself establish as lack of due diligence. Id. at 16.

[9] We hold that the trial court erred in striking Riley; however, appellant cannot demonstrate harm because Nurse Riley's deposition testimony is not properly before us. Counsel made no informal offer of proof and the deposition was not timely offered. [FN3] We overrule point two.

> FN3. The deposition was offered while the jury was deliberating.

In order to determine whether the error excluding Felger was harmful, we review the entire proceedings and briefly outline the procedural context in which both Riley's and *455 Felger's testimony were excluded. Gee v. Liberty Mutual Fire Ins. Co., 765 S.W.2d 394, 396 (Tex.1989); Ponder, 840 S.W.2d at 479.

IV. Conduct of the Trial

[10] The trial judge has the power and obligation to control his courtroom for the purposes of ascertaining the truth, promoting judicial economy, and protecting witnesses. TEX.R.CIV.EVID. 611(a) . Rule 611 states:

> The court shall exercise reasonable control over the mode and order of interrogating witnesses and presenting evidence so as to (1) make the interrogation and presentation effective for the ascertainment of the truth, (2) avoid needless consumption of time, and (3) protect witnesses from harassment or undue embarrassment.

Id. (emphasis added). The court has some leeway in the order of proceedings in multi-party cases. See TEX.R.CIV.P. 265 (not specifically addressing the order of cross-examination when there are multiple "adverse" parties). However, Rule 611 and other rules governing conduct of a trial, must be construed to the end that the truth may be ascertained and proceedings justly determined. TEX.R.CIV.EVID. 102. We consider the trial court's conduct of this trial as background for appellant's complaints.[FN4]

> FN4. Appellant makes this complaint by point of error four, however, the point is not preserved for our separate review.

On day two of trial, the court, in the interest of speed of presentation of the case, denied the parties redirect and recross examination of witnesses except on leave of court.[FN5] Re-direct is intended to permit the witness to explain answers given on cross-examination and to amplify new material elicited for the first time. The intent is to prevent the jury from being left with a false and incomplete picture created by the latitude counsel is afforded on cross-examination and counsel's ability to use leading questions. It is sometimes said that re-direct examination for this purpose is a matter of right. See Southland Life Ins. Co. v. Norwood, 76 S.W.2d 166, 167–68 (Tex.Civ.App.—Fort Worth 1934, writ dism'd); Martini v. Power Banking Co., 33 S.W.2d 466, 469 (Tex.Civ.App.—Fort Worth 1930, writ dism'd); see generally RAY, GUIDE TO THE TEXAS RULES OF EVIDENCE: CIVIL AND CRIMINAL § 621 (Texas Practice 1980).

> FN5. The trial judge refused Sims's request to redirect Fannin to rebut new material the defendants elicited on cross.

The prohibition on re-cross and re-direct examination continued in force during the defendants' case-in-chief. Doctors Cortese and Bullen each testified during his own case-in-chief. Doctors Cortese and Bullen each testified during his own case-in-chief, Sims cross-examined, and the remaining defendants then followed, "cross-examining" an essentially friendly witness. Therefore, the appellees were able to use each other as experts to exonerate themselves, with no opportunity for rebuttal by appellant. Appellant's counsel attempted to alleviate the disparity by requesting a different order of examination, but he was denied. Finally, Brackett and Appel only presented evidence consisting of answers to written interrogatories from several individuals Dr. Fannin claimed to have consulted while preparing for the case. This evidence came in after the trial court recessed the trial for one month following the plaintiff's and two defendants' case-in-chief.

[11] The control given the trial judge must be exercised reasonably; a party must be given a fair opportunity to present its case so the jury may ascertain the truth. Prezelski v. Christiansen, 775 S.W.2d 764, 766 n. 2 (Tex.App.—San Antonio 1989), rev'd on other grounds per curiam, 782 S.W.2d 842 (Tex.1990). If a party is denied the right to make a fair presentation to the jury, the court has not acted reasonably and has abused its discretion. The exclusion of Felger's testimony as well as the denial of redirect and recross examination denied appellant the opportunity to meet and rebut appellees' defenses and to present his case.

While we need not determine whether the aforementioned procedures were proper, they suffice to establish the context in which the exclusion of Dr. Felger's testimony occurred. These procedures magnified the harmful effect of the exclusion of Felger's testimony. Even allowing that rules 403 and 611 somewhat limit the right to re-direct and re-crossexamination, considerations of due *456 process and fundamental fairness require us to conclude that the trial court's orders here overstepped the bounds of reasonability, denied appellant his right to re-direct, and compounded the harm appellant suffered. The excluded testimony was critical in and of itself, as it was material to issues hotly contested throughout the trial. Mentis, 870 S.W.2d at 16. Moreover, we are convinced that the error here amounted to such a denial of appellant's rights as was reasonably calculated to cause and probably did cause the rendition of an improper judgment. TEX.R.APP.P. 81(b)(1). Felger's exclusion, combined with other procedural rulings made the trial materially unfair and therefore constituted harmful error. See generally Soefje v. Stewart, 847 S.W.2d 311, 315 (Tex.App.—San Antonio 1992, writ denied). We sustain appellant's first point of error.

The exclusion of Riley's testimony, which we have held to be abuse of discretion, was not preserved. We overrule point two.

Because of our disposition of point one, we do not address appellant's additional points of error. TEX.R.APP.P. 90(a). Accordingly, we REVERSE the trial court's judgment and REMAND the cause for a new trial.

Appellants' Motion for Costs on Reversal Granted in Part and Denied in Part Feb. 28, 1989.

Medical malpractice action was brought against five physicians alleging improper hip treatment of osteomyelitis and septic arthritis of one-year-old child. The District Court, Teton County, John D. Troughton, J., entered judgment on jury verdicts in favor of four defendant physicians and directed verdicts for all five. Plaintiffs, child and his parents, appealed. The Supreme Court, Urbigkit, J., held that: (1) instruction defining circumstances in which physicians were liable for acts or omissions involving exercise of judgment was reversible error when negligence claims involved misdiagnosis nonaction thesis; (2) fact that after x-rays were taken in clinic immediate medical attention was found to be required belied adequacy of earlier care given to patient by defendant radiologist at least to extent of creating question of fact for jury; and (3) record would not support exclusion of expert testimony from pathologist and pediatrician on behalf of plaintiffs.

Reversed and remanded for retrial.

Cardine, C.J., and Thomas, J., filed specially concurring opinions.

Brown, J., retired, filed opinion dissenting in part and concurring in part.

Presented for appellate review is a six week medical malpractice trial against five physicians involving claims of improper hip treatment of osteomyelitis and septic arthritis of a one year old child, which resulted in verdicts in favor of four defendants and directed verdicts for all. The issues encompass excluded witnesses, denied cross-examination, directed verdicts and contended erroneous negligence instruction.

We reverse and remand for retrial.

I. ISSUES

Although variously stated by appellants and the five separate appellees who are differently affected, the appellate issues presented include:

*536 1. Basic medical malpractice negligence instruction;

2. Directed verdict for the radiologist;

3. Subsequent directed verdicts for other appellees after they secured a favorable jury verdict;

4. Trial court decision denying appellants the right to call the appellee doctors as adverse witnesses during their case in chief; and

5. Contested witness exclusion and evidentiary decisions of the trial court:

a. Limitation on testimony of appellants' expert radiologist to consider standard of care as contributory to the injury sustained;

b. Limitation of testimony of expert witnesses regarding standard of care of radiologist which was rejected either as cumulative or not competent;

c. Denied use of Michael Lagios, M.D. as an expert witness on the basis that his testimony would be cumulative; and

d. Denied use of Lawrence Madoff, M.D. as an expert witness on the basis that his testimony would be cumulative.

II. FACTS

Appellants include Michael Robert Kobos, a young child, and his parents of Jackson, Wyoming. In 1981, as the date of these events, the one year old developed a right hip pain. The patient was first evaluated in office and through telephone contact by Jackson doctors, James R. Little, M.D. and associate intern, Thomas J. Pockat, M.D. With the young child's condition producing "essentially normal x-rays," he was then seen by a general pediatrician, appellee Richard G. Sugden, M.D., whose office was in the same building as Dr. Little's. Consultation followed with yet another doctor, appellee Kenneth L. Lambert, M.D., a Jackson orthopedic surgeon. In this period of regular examinations as the child's problem continued, x-rays were taken and reviewed by appellee radiologist Charles Everts, M.D., with the continued finding of an essentially normal condition for the medical evaluation.

After about two and one-half months of this course of action with care limited to continuous office visits and no improvement, medical reference was made by Dr. Sugden for the child to be evaluated at the University of Utah Medical Center in Salt Lake City, Utah. The serious condition as diagnosed in Utah required apparent surgery, which was done by return to Jackson and performed by Dr. William Mott. Following surgery, the diagnosis was made of chronic osteomyelitis (infected bone).

As a result of either a developmental infected bone condition or surgical misadventure by Dr. Mott, growth plate damage resulted to the femur which will bring about significant future hip growth and use problems for the child. The broad character of factual issues considered at trial was whether the delayed medical attention while the infected bone condition developed precipitated the recognized injury or whether Dr. Mott, in final curative surgery, caused the permanent injury damage during the surgical process. Consequently in litigative approach, appellees denied diagnosis delay or treatment fault and blamed Dr. Mott as the surgeon who operated. The record of the lengthy trial can be summed up as including complicated evidence and a significant number of expert witnesses. Qualification of appellants' expert witnesses at trial was particularly painstaking in time, detail and opposition.

III. PROPER INSTRUCTION

[1] A principal issue in this appeal is appellants' challenge to the instructions, which included Instruction No. 18 as subject to the most detailed objection at trial and upon appeal. Instruction No. 18 states:

> You are instructed that physicians and surgeons are not liable for mere errors of judgment, provided there has been a careful examination and ordinary care and skill has been exercised.
> In other words, if, from all the evidence it appears by a preponderance that the acts or omissions of the defendants, each or all of them, upon which plaintiffs' claims are predicated clearly involved *537 and constituted an exercise of an honest judgment, arrived at after careful and necessary investigation, and

a. The judgment is approved by a respectable portion of competent and reputable physicians or surgeons in the same line of practice, and

b. There is nothing to indicate that the approval is not honestly made, or that the approval, the judgment or the acts or omissions are unreasonable,

Then, the defendants, each or all of them, are not liable.[FN1]

FN1. Eight other specific medical malpractice instructions were given, which included in general text:

INSTRUCTION NO. 8

The Plaintiffs contend that Michael Robert Kobos was at different times a patient under the care and treatment of each of the Defendant doctors. Plaintiffs claim that the Defendants, each or all of them, were negligent in their care and treatment of Michael Robert Kobos, which negligence was the proximate cause of injuries and damages suffered by Plaintiffs.

Each Defendant denies the Plaintiffs' claim asserted against him.

The Plaintiffs have the burden of proving their claims against each Defendant by a preponderance of evidence.

INSTRUCTION NO. 9

In this action, the Plaintiffs have the burden of proving by a preponderance of the evidence with respect to each Defendant the following:

1. The Defendant was negligent; and

2. The negligence of the Defendant was the proximate cause of the injury to the Plaintiffs; and

3. The nature and extent of the injuries claimed to have been so suffered, the elements of Plaintiffs' damage and the amount thereof.

In determining whether an issue has been proved by a preponderance of the evidence, you should consider all of the evidence bearing upon that issue regardless of who produced it. The existence of such proposition must be more probable than its nonexistence. [Emphasis in original.]

INSTRUCTION NO. 10

Generally, negligence means the failure to use ordinary care.

Negligence as that term is used in these instructions with respect to the Defendant physicians means the failure to exercise the skill, diligence and knowledge, and to apply the means and methods which would reasonably be exercised and applied under similar circumstances by members of the profession in good standing and in the same line of practice.

The burden is upon the Plaintiffs to show by a preponderance of the evidence that each Defendant failed to exercise the degree of care and skill required from him.

INSTRUCTION NO. 11

It is the duty of a physician or surgeon who holds himself out as a specialist in a particular field of medical, surgical or other healing science, to have the knowledge and skill ordinarily possessed, and to use the care and skill ordinarily used, by reputable specialists practicing in the same field and under similar circumstances.

One who holds himself out as a specialist in that field and who undertakes diagnosis or treatment in his speciality is required to use the skill and care required of such a specialist.

INSTRUCTION NO. 12

In order to prove negligence, it is necessary for Plaintiffs to prove by a preponderance of expert medical testimony that a Defendant doctor failed to use the standard of care given to you in the foregoing instructions and such failure was a proximate cause of the injury complained of.

INSTRUCTION NO. 13

If the origin of the alleged injuries is obscure and not readily apparent, or if there are several equally probable causes of the condition, it is the burden of the Plaintiffs to prove by a preponderance, through competent expert medical testimony, that among the possible causes of the alleged injuries there is a reasonable probability (that is to say, the most likely cause was) the negligence, if any, of each Defendant.

INSTRUCTION NO. 16

You are instructed that in rendering medical services to a patient, a physician does not impliedly warrant or guarantee the success of his treatment or operation. The physician does impliedly warrant that he possesses and will exercise such professional skill and learning as are ordinarily possessed by medical practitioners practicing in the same field and under similar circumstances.

INSTRUCTION NO. 17

The law presumes that a physician or surgeon has carefully and skillfully treated or operated on his patient. There is no presumption of negligence from the fact of an injury or adverse result. However, this presumption is rebuttable and may be overcome by a preponderance of the testimony and evidence which establishes negligence or lack of reasonable care on the part of a physician or surgeon in his medical diagnosis, his performance of surgical procedures, and his care and treatment of patients.

538 Appellants assert that Instruction No. 10 was a correct articulation of the law and that Instruction No. 18 was improper as contrary to Vassos v. Roussalis, 625 P.2d 768 (Wyo.1981) (Vassos I) and Vassos v. Roussalis, 658 P.2d 1284 (Wyo.1983) (Vassos II). We agree.

In Vassos I, 625 P.2d at 772-73, as recognizing that a malpractice action is usually a form of negligence litigation, this court observed:

> [T]he existence of the physician-patient relationship established the duty. The standard is fixed as that which is required of a reasonable person in light of all the circumstances. * * * A malpractice contention is also one of those circumstances. The more specific standard for malpractice actions is that a physician or surgeon must exercise the skill, diligence and knowledge, and must apply the means and methods, which would reasonably be exercised and applied under similar circumstances by members of his profession in good standing and in the same line of practice. * * *
> The skill, diligence, knowledge, means and methods are not those "ordinarily" or "generally" or "customarily" exercised or applied, but are those that are "reasonably" exercised or applied. Negligence cannot be excused on the grounds that others practice the same kind of negligence. Medicine is not an exact science and the proper practice cannot be gauged by a fixed rule. * * *

* * * such circumstances are not of such common knowledge, the jury must depend upon testimony of experts to explain the standard and thus prevent a conclusion based on conjecture and speculation. * * * In other words, an additional question of fact must be answered when the circumstances are such that the reasonable person standard is not within the common knowledge of the jury.

[2] Furthermore, strict adherence to the so-called locality rule is not appropriate. DeHerrera v. Memorial Hospital of Carbon County, 590 P.2d 1342 (Wyo.1979); Vassos II, 658 P.2d 1284. We cannot accommodate acceptance of the instruction given within the criteria of the Vassos rule after the timely objection at trial that the instruction would confuse or mislead the jury as to the appropriate principle of law. Cervelli v. Graves, 661 P.2d 1032 (Wyo.1983). The phraseology given simply does not define a duty of due care but bespeaks in responsibility to moral decision and honesty, and as the principal instruction, constitutes reversible error. Intent is not a factor of negligence since negligence precludes intended conduct. Globe Indem. Co. v. Blomfield, 115 Ariz. 5, 562 P.2d 1372 (1977) ; 65 C.J.S. Negligence § 3 at 473 (1966); W. Prosser & W. Keeton, The Law of Torts § 31 at 169 (5th ed. 1984).

A leading authority has been identifiable within the Wyoming criterion which provides that there are two applicable standards of care to be applied in malpractice cases.

The first, which was correctly charged, holds the doctor to the standard of care measured by the knowledge and ability of the average physician or specialist in good standing in the community where he practices. This is the standard of reasonable care. Liability is premised upon the failure to exercise reasonable care, so measured. A doctor is also subject to a separate duty which requires him to use his best judgment, but which does not make him liable for mere error in judgment, provided he does what he thinks is best after careful examination. * * * "An error of judgment charged is appropriate in a case where a doctor is confronted with several alternatives and, in determining the appropriate treatment to be rendered, exercises his judgment by following one course of action in lieu of another."

1 S. Pegalis and H. Wachsman, American Law of Medical Malpractice § 2:9 at 69, 71-72 (1980) (quoting Pike v. Honsinger, 155 N.Y. 201, 49 N.E. 760 (1898)). It is noteworthy where a careful examination is given and clear alternative treatment courses exist, that an error of judgment charge may additionally be appropriate. Appellants were entitled to contend that the alternatives were not embraced in this *539 case since, generally speaking, nothing was done during the critical period as medical treatment which effectively addressed the physical problem as later disclosed by x-ray analysis and surgical intervention.

The instructions must be considered as a whole in order to determine whether the instructions as a whole are fair. But the introductions must clearly reflect the factual situation presented in the case as well as the applicable law.

1 D. Louisell and H. Williams, Medical Malpractice § 11.38 at 11-134 (1988) (footnotes omitted). The test of standard of care in a malpractice case is ordinary skill and diligence as possessed by members of the profession generally. "Reasonable and ordinary care, skill, and diligence" is the test denominated in 4 Reid's Branson Instructions to Juries, ch. 146, § 2442 at 473 (1987 Cum.Supp.). See similarly, PIK 2d 15.01 at 66 (2d ed. 1977) (although continuing to include some category of the locality rule). It is apparent that there is a difference in the concepts of the law between a bad result achieved with care and a less than careful bad choice. Excluding the Wyoming deleted locality rule, the Illinois Pattern Jury Instructions properly inform:

> In [treating] * * * a patient, a [doctor] * * * must possess and apply the knowledge and use the skill and care that is ordinarily used by reasonably well-qualified [doctors] * * * in similar cases and circumstances. A failure to do so is a form of negligence that is called malpractice.
> IPI 2d 105.01 at 319 (1971).
> A physician's conduct * * * must be measured against what a physician having and using that knowledge, skill and care of physicians practicing in the same field of practice in the same or similar locality at the same time would or would not do under the same or similar circumstances.

CJI 2d 15:2 at 313 (1988). The mere error in judgment criteria as relied upon by the trial court for instruction comes from Wright v. Conway, 34 Wyo. 1, 241 P. 369 (1925). That concept is now subsumed within the modernized standards for present day professional practitioners invoking skill, diligence, knowledge, and application of means and methods reasonable under the circumstances by persons within the profession. Clearly, as we specifically stated in Vassos I, 625 P.2d at 772, "[n]egligence cannot be excused on the grounds that others practice [or approve of] the same kind of negligence." Under the misdiagnosis non-action thesis of appellants' claims of negligence, the jury instruction was improper.

IV. DENIAL OF RIGHT TO CALL APPELLEES AS ADVERSE WITNESSES IN APPELLANTS' CASE IN CHIEF

During trial, appellants were advised by the trial court, at a point which, as a consequence, was near the end of their case in chief, that:

> You will not be permitted to call the Defendant Doctors as adverse witnesses because it's the judgment of this Court if they are called for direct examination and you have the opportunity to cross-examine on the substance of their testimony, this case is going to go faster. That's based not only upon my experience, in general, that that is a quicker way to handle adverse parties but it's also based upon what I've observed in this courtroom concerning what's happened in this courtroom with respect to individual witnesses.
> You think the Court is unreasonable. The Court believes that the length of examination of most of the witnesses in this case has been unreasonable and that a good deal of time could have be[en] saved with respect to-could have be [en] saved with examination and cross-examination that was more directed and to the point.

Early the following week, the decision was reiterated:

> Now, for the record, the Court indicated last week that it would not allow the Plaintiffs to call the Defendants during their case in chief and would require the Defendants to put them on the stand. Now, the reason that the Court did that 540 is because the testimony in the case is going slow. It was the Court's considered opinion that the testimony would go quicker if the direct examination brought out the testimony of the doctors, leaving the Plaintiffs with the right to cross-examine. And that that would go quicker in the considered opinion of the Court because the Court is of the opinion based upon several weeks of trial and several weeks of experience with witnesses that are either perceived as being adverse by the Plaintiffs or are adverse witnesses, in fact, to the Plaintiffs, that during cross-examination in Plaintiffs' case, the examination has gone slowly because Plaintiffs' Counsel finds himself in the position during the presentation of his case in chief of wanting to elicit from the adverse parties the testimony that is important to his case in chief but to avoid the testimony of the adverse parties, which is more related to the defense and which is adverse to the case in chief. And because the Court perceives that Counsel finds themselves in that position, Counsel perceives-or the Court perceives Counsel as going very slowly and carefully, attempting to avoid during his case in chief, the unfavorable aspects of the testimony of the adverse parties. In the attempts to avoid those unfavorable aspects, the examination goes slowly. The Court, in its judgment, thought that if the adverse nature of the testimony is laid out on the table quickly, that Counsel would then be-would be alleviated-or the problem that Counsel faces of trying to avoid that testimony would be alleviated because it would be out on the table and Counsel would not have to be so careful but could just come in and the whole process would go quicker.

The subject was again reanalyzed by the trial court after all other case in chief witnesses had been called as then closing that trial segment with continued adverse examination denial:

Well, it's very doubtful at this stage of the game that the Defendants are not going to be called to the stand. We'll know that after we handle the motions. Okay. So let's handle-We'll deal with the testimony of the Defendant Physicians offered in Plaintiffs' case in chief at the same time that we deal with the motions for directed verdict that are going to be made this morning. In other words, if it appears that testimony of the Defendant Doctor is going to be critical to any motion for a directed verdict insofar as the Plaintiff is concerned, then the Court is in a position of dealing with that by allowing that Doctor to be called. If it's not critical, then the Court can stand by its previous ruling that we'll do the * * * direct examination and you get your crack at them through cross-examination.

The status of the issue on appeal is problematical since although discussed, it is not generally addressed as a designated issue for appeal and is contested by only Dr. Everts in argument. None of the litigants in appellate brief have furnished citations that a trial court can or cannot, as a matter of discretion, generally deny to plaintiff the right to call an opposing party as an adverse witness. Cf. Hall v. Hall, 708 P.2d 416 (Wyo.1985), cited by appellants. In anticipation that the problem will not reoccur on retrial, this court need not presently explore whether any circumstance could occur which would justify this kind of a general restriction on trial development by a litigant.[FN2]

FN2. Within the penumbra between due process, Boddie v. Connecticut, 401 U.S. 371, 377, 91 S.Ct. 780, 787, 28 L.Ed.2d 113 (1971), and reasonable control over the presentation of evidence, McCabe v. R.A. Manning Const. Co., Inc., 674 P.2d 699 (Wyo.1983), any restriction on rights of litigants to plan and present their case or for general evidentiary exclusion pursuant to W.R.E. 403 should tread softly.

V. DIRECTED VERDICT FOR RADIOLOGIST

Without being afforded the opportunity to call the physician radiologist as an adverse witness to determine what his activities and function may have been, the trial court granted a directed verdict in his behalf at the close of appellants' evidence. 541 Thereafter, in appellees' case after trial court announcement of the directed verdict, the ex-litigant testified as an expert witness in behalf of the other appellees.[FN3] In consideration of appellants' evidence and cross-examination, the trial court justified by oral explanation to the attorneys why he would grant the directed verdict:

FN3. Appellants characterize the status of the directed verdict for Everts:

It must be emphasized that after Appellee Everts received a directed verdict in his favor he appeared at trial as an expert witness for the remaining Appellees, and while still glowing with the halo of innocence, damned Dr. William Mott as the cause of young Michael Kobos' devastating injuries.

And when you look at all of the evidence with respect to Dr. Everts in that sense and in that light, then the Court concludes that the evidence, in the light most favorable to the Plaintiffs, establishes that not only did Dr. Everts not fail to properly read x rays but that evidence, at best, establishes that it was a judgment call for Dr. Everts. The beauty is in the eye of the beholder, so to speak.

Now, finally, the testimony clearly is that you can't diagnose osteomyelitis or septic hip in this case from the x rays. At least not the x rays-I can say it that way. You can't diagnose this by the x rays. You can diagnose changes but you cannot tell what the changes are. And even if one were to conclude that there were changes on October 14 and 15 at the time of the last x ray plate and the last bone scan of Dr. Everts, the evidence in the light most favorable to the Plaintiffs indicates that in order to diagnose septic hip and osteomyelitis, something more had to be done. And so even if there was a failure to properly read those two radiology materials, there's no evidence of any direct, proximate cause between that failure and the injuries that the Plaintiffs contend occurred, those injuries being from osteomyelitis and septic hip which was not treated, which conditions cannot be diagnosed by x rays.

[3][4] Intrinsic to appellants' case was evidentiary discussion of the duty of the radiologist to examine and report which is encompassed within a standard of due care to his patient. In earlier discussion before the directed verdict had been granted, the trial court had analyzed:

It would appear to the Court in this case that the uncontradicted evidence of all of the experts is that Dr. Everts had no duty to diagnose; that he had no duty to treat.

This characterization of the duty or lack thereof of the radiologist is directly contrary to common reasoning (to determine what may be seen) and contrary to general precedent. Clayton v. Thompson, 475 So.2d 439, 442 (Miss.1985) (quoting Hall v. Hilbun, 466 So.2d 856 (Miss.1985)):

[E]very doctor "has a duty to use his or her knowledge and therewith treat through maximum, reasonable, medical recovery, each patient, with such reasonable diligence, skill, competence, and prudence as are practiced by minimally competent physicians in the same specialty or general field of practice throughout the United States, who have available to them the same general facilities, services, equipment and options." [Emphasis in original.]

Id. at 445. We agree with appellants' position with reference to Vassos II, 658 P.2d 1284 that whether a duty exists and the scope of that duty are questions of law for the court. Id. at 1287. We would also agree with case law and text authority that radiologists have responsibilities to patients and to other physicians which are similar to those of pathologists-accurate diagnosis. 1 D. Louisell and H. Williams, 542 supra, at § 3.23 at 3-82. See also, Keen v. Prisinzano, 23 Cal.App.3d 275, 100 Cal.Rptr. 82 (1972). Factually, the circumstance that after x-rays were taken in the Salt Lake City clinic and immediate medical attention found to be required, belies adequacy of the earlier care given to the patient by the Jackson radiologist to the extent at least that a question of fact for the jury was created. DeHerrera, 590 P.2d 1342.

[5] As an early witness, appellants called Dr. Maurice O'Connor who, after initial medical school graduation, spent time in general practice, then military service, and thereafter was trained for specialization in diagnostic radiology. While in that pursuit, he also graduated from law school and has since described his activity as 75% to 80% in pure medicine in the diagnostic radiology specialty and 20% to 25% or less in forensic medicine. Extended, detailed, and continued objection started from the first and continued to the last of his testimony during the two and one-half day session while he was a witness. The principal attack came by denial of appellees that the witness could properly state an opinion that the medical diagnosis for the small child should have come sooner and the treatment should have been better in regard to the service by all appellee witnesses. In broad category, the type of inquiry that developed has since been addressed by this court in Oukrop v. Wasserburger, 755 P.2d 233 (Wyo.1988).

Despite those constant objections by appellees, Dr. O'Connor specifically testified that in his opinion the standard of performance of radiologist Dr. Everts fell below the standard of appropriate care. An attempt was further denied in examining the witness to connect described insufficiency of radiology service by cause to the later discovered hip condition. In sustaining latter objections, the trial court stated that "[t]he Jury doesn't need assistance from an expert in that area. The objection is sustained." Subsequently, the following question was asked:

> Well, for the record, I have to ask you to put back on your radiologist hat and tell me whether you have an opinion as to whether or not the failure of Dr. Charles Everts as a radiologist to meet the standard of care required of him had any causal relation to the condition in Mikey Kobos' hip which ultimately resulted as you've described it on these films?

The question was answered yes, and the requested opinion floundered on a lack of foundation objection as well as competency as sustained. Inquiry of counsel followed and the trial court responded:

> THE COURT: Do you want me to tell you on the record, in front of the Jury?
>
> MR. ANDREW HARTNETT: Beg your pardon?
>
> THE COURT: Do you want me to tell me [sic] on the record?
>
> MR. ANDREW HARTNETT: May be I would rather you tell me off-the-record, out of the presence of the Jury.
> THE COURT: Okay. Then let's just leave it where it sits.

The thesis of the trial court was then later explained by the previously quoted order granting the directed verdict. Essentially, the record presents a legal determination in divergence with the factual record as to the responsibility of the medical doctor practicing in the specialty of radiology. The trial court denied to appellants the intrinsic expert witness opinion to completely define the standard of care required.

It is noteworthy how appellee Dr. Everts in brief describes the radiologist's participation in the medical practice:

> Everts read or interpreted the plain x-ray films and the bone scan films. In this regard Everts submitted written reports which are a part of the hospital records or chart. The actual procedure in taking the films, both the plain films and the bone scan films, is done by technicians and not by Everts. This is the usual method or procedure in taking and interpreting radiological tests or procedures. Everts did not see or touch Michael Kobos with respect to the plain films and did not actively participate in the procedure generating the bone scan films. Several of the exhibits offered by 543 Appellants include copies of the reports of Everts; however, the same are within the hospital chart/record (Exhibit 2). The plain x-ray films are designated Exhibits 9-1 through 9-22 and the bone scan films are designated as Exhibits 11-7 through 11-10.

Therefore, the involvement of Everts consists entirely of his interpretation of the plain x-ray films taken on September 9, September 15, and October 14, and the bone scan films made on October 15, 1981.

Surprisingly, it is questioned that Dr. Everts owed a duty to the patient. Clearly, that contention should not be in factual dispute from this record or within today's medical world. If the physician performing the service for a patient expects to be paid, he has the duty of a doctor to his patient. Dr. Everts was a doctor and Kobos was his patient for radiology purposes. Really at issue was due care of the medical practitioner. When the directed verdict was granted, the witness provided by appellants of unquestioned competence and medical experience had on this record testified adversely (to the extent permitted) as to compliance with that due care standard.

Both the duty of the radiologist to make and adequately communicate a correct diagnosis is discussed in Phillips v. Good Samaritan Hospital, 65 Ohio App.2d 112, 416 N.E.2d 646, 649 (1979), where summary judgment was reversed as that court said:

> Weighing the facts and competing inferences, as we must, in a light most favorable to the party opposing summary judgment, it is possible to find the existence of a causal relationship between a breach of duty and the injury suffered.
> * * * Once the physician-patient relationship has been found to exist, as could well be found here, the professional responsibilities and duties exist despite the lack of proximity, or the remoteness, of contact between the two as where a consulting physician is involved in the case in only a limited manner. Therefore, all physicians involved in a case share in the same duties and responsibilities of the primary care physician to the extent of their involvement.

It would seem in characterization that the ship had slipped sails somehow for directed verdict to be granted after the expert testimony had been given that the radiologist in performing a service of examining and reporting on x-rays did not meet the required standard of performance. An issue of negligence was presented. See a detailed analysis of liability, Clayton, 475 So.2d 439.

[6] Appellants' problem with medical testimony relating to the radiologist's standard of care did not yet end. Called as a principal witness for appellants was San Francisco, California orthopedic surgeon, Dr. Kevin Harrington. After inquiry developed by examination of when appellants started to present the opinion of the witness in regard to the standard of care of the radiologist, a very extensive in camera discussion followed after which the trial court ruled in open court statement to the jury:

> Ladies and Gentlemen of the jury. The Court has ruled that Dr. Harrington shall not be permitted to express an opinion, either directly or indirectly, concerning whether the x-ray and bone scan analysis done by Dr. Everts was negligent or careless or whether it was careful and prudent. Any further testimony by Dr. Harrington shall not be viewed or considered by you as applicable to the standard of care required of Dr. Everts. Dr. Lambert's objection at the testimony of Dr. Harrington to the effect that Dr. Lambert should have read the bone scan, himself, is without foundation and has been sustained by the Court.

What this meant in trial procedure by trial court ruling was that the orthopedic surgeon was not competent to express an opinion about x-rays, which would also serve to isolate that doctor from responsibility whether or not the radiologist had made a mistake. Furthermore, this standard of medical practice would establish that the orthopedic practitioner had no independent *544 responsibility to utilize his knowledge of x-rays in patient diagnosis and treatment.[FN4]

> FN4. The specific decision and ratio decidendi of the trial court was stated to counsel:
> The Court notes that [prior trial judge] > required the Plaintiffs to designate the experts that Plaintiffs would require in this case to meet their burden of proof and among those experts [was] a radiologist. Also among those experts [was] an orthopedic surgeon. Two separate doctors; two separate physicians.

> The Court, therefore, rules under Rule 403 that because the testimony of Dr. Harrington in the area of radiology will be cumulative, it will not be received by considerations of undue delay and waste of time. If the Supreme Court believes that I have abused my discretion in such a discretionary ruling, knowing more about this difficult trial than I do sitting in it, losing hair and developing ulcers, then it is the ruling of the Court that Mr. Vlastos' objections are sustained. Sustained on the basis that there's no foundation indicating that this Witness either knows or is competent to establish what type of standard,-either knows or can establish those standards under which radiologists as opposed to orthopedic surgeons must practice.
> Obviously, the cumulative characterization cannot now be sustained in face of the subsequently granted directed verdict on the basis of failure of proof of a violated standard. Consequently, the justification, if one is to be perceived, must be found in a generalized principle that an orthopedic surgeon is not qualified to testify as to radiology standards, as a matter of law.

Finally, from the standpoint of appellants as the developments worsened in character, objection was taken to the way this trial evolution was to be orally presented to the jury:

> My concern is that any such instruction to the Jury, in and of itself, intends to reflect on the credibility of Dr. Harrington and is additionally prejudicial to the Plaintiffs case and that no instruction at this point in the evidence is necessary at all. He has not expressed an opinion regarding Dr. Everts nor has he expressed an opinion as to the failure of Dr. Lambert in any way in his interpretation. He is qualified to read them and interpret them himself and the instruction would be grossly prejudicial to the Plaintiffs.

The expressed concern was not without unjustified substance in case progression as a trial development. We conclude that the restriction on the witness' testimony was unjustified and constitutes an abuse of discretion. [FN5]

> FN5. It would not be totally dissimilar to consider that a jurist was not qualified to critique the academic analysis of his research assistant or the supervising architect to review the sufficiency of the contractor's work product.
> > Physicians who are not specially trained in diagnostic roe[n]tgenology may be capable of interpreting many X-ray films with reasonable accuracy, but as a general rule they should not rely exclusively upon their own interpretation, except in very simple cases or in cases coming within their own special field such as urology or orthopedics.

VI. OTHER ISSUES PRESENTED

In determination that a retrial is required, we would only consider other issues to the extent that a reoccurrence of question might again develop.

a. Directed Verdicts Granted to Drs. Sugden, Lambert, Little and Pockat After the Entry of Defendants' Jury Verdict.

The considerable discussion of this issue by the litigants does not present any justiciable question for us to now determine. The case was submitted to the jury, which would not now presently justify our decision on a subsequent directed verdict after favorable verdict. We would, however, observe that citations to cases involving a judgment notwithstanding the verdict are misplaced, since a judgment notwithstanding the verdict is directed to adversely attack the verdict and not to serve as a compatible substitute. See Baker v. Helms, 527 So.2d 1241, 1243 (Ala.1988) for evidentiary test. In concluding that this particular problem will not likely reoccur upon retrial, a further review becomes unjustified since this result with another favorable verdict could not call for application of W.R.C.P. 50(b). Mayflower Restaurant Co. v. Griego, 741 P.2d 1106 (Wyo.1987); Simpson v. Western Nat. Bank of Casper, 497 P.2d 878 (Wyo.1972).

545 The significance in perspective to appellants is only relative to the topic of the excluded medical witnesses as being "cumulative." The problem is presented of the trial court's decisions that first the testimony of expert witnesses on violated standards of care is cumulative, and then without the support of appellants' case by the proposed expert opinion testimony to foreclose recovery by directed verdict on the basis of insufficiency of proof. FN6

> FN6. This complex, heavily contested and argumentatively pursued record bespeaks to the conception of the trial court as accommodated by the usage of Instruction No. 18 and directed verdicts that judgmental mistake cannot create liability if that decision is either that nothing was wrong or not to do anything; so that only if something is done wrong can liability develop.

b. Denied Testimony of Tendered Witnesses.

[7] Appellants challenge the denial of tendered testimony to be elicited from three proposed witnesses. Appellants had planned to present expert testimony from Dr. Lawrence Madoff and Dr. Michael Lagios in addition to the adverse examination of the appellees. Both witnesses had been deposed by appellees at appellees' convenience pursuant to specific trial court order. Dr. Lagios was a pathologist at Children's Hospital in San Francisco, California and Dr. Madoff, a pediatrician. Originally, pretrial objection had been taken to the late designations. Then after being deposed by trial court order following a change in trial judges, the objection to trial presentation was sustained on the basis that their medical opinion testimony "would be cumulative." The issue of late designation will not reoccur with a new trial, and consequently, its tortuous pathway in this extended record will not be pursued. Our consideration of the cumulative issue as an exercise of discretion is colored by the subsequent decision of the trial court after verdict that a directed verdict emplacing inadequate proof was proper. We are also distressed in present decision by incomplete opportunity to evaluate the prospective testimony as "cumulative," since by its very nature, it would have been relevant and material if admissible. Under any circumstance in the contextual development of this case with the categorization pursued by counsel and the trial court, it would appear that with an appellee pediatrician and with other pediatricians listed as expert witnesses for the defense, that app effort to present a pediatrician expert witness to establish a standard of care and its violation would not likely be cumulative. Additionally, the relevance of the pathologist to contest testimony of a pathologist who placed the blame on the succeeding surgeon, Dr. Mott, seems extraordinarily confined. With retrial, the cumulative nature of prospective inquiry should be more clearly delineated by the record if rejection reoccurs.

From this record, support for the exclusion criteria carefully defined in Towner v. State, 685 P.2d 45 (Wyo.1984) is not established. This court there said that " Rule 403 [W.R.E.] is an extraordinary remedy which should be used sparingly since it allows the court to exclude evidence which is concededly relevant and probative." Id. at 49. In the instant case, where two of the appellee doctors were pediatricians and appellants were disallowed the right to call a pediatrician as an expert witness, that rationale is hard to justify. Discretion, in any event, has its limits as we said in Martin v. State, 720 P.2d 894, 897 (Wyo.1986):

> Judicial discretion is a composite of many things, among which are conclusions drawn from objective criteria; it means a sound judgment exercised with regard to what is right under the circumstances and without doing so arbitrarily or capriciously.

In a medical malpractice case, plaintiff requires expert testimony for proof. Harris v. Grizzle, 625 P.2d 747 (Wyo.1981). Denial of the pathologist's testimony is similarly questionable where the defense is postured on an approach to lay the blame onto the operating surgeon by defendant's pathological testimony. Availability of the tendered witness to plaintiff is similarly required to permit the litigant to have the same opportunity to have eleven men on 546 the field of play. At the least, all witnesses reasonably available to provide substantive evidence should have been permitted to testify before the trial court executes or at least exiles plaintiffs' case to a never to be land. The general law is in accord. See United States v. Davis, 639 F.2d 239 (5th Cir.1981), cited by this court with approval in Towner, 685 P.2d at 49, where evidence was "independent corroborative testimony on a material issue." See likewise 2 D. Louisell and C. Mueller, Federal Evidence § 128 at 68 (1985). As is stated in J. Weinstein & M. Berger, Weinstein's Evidence § 403[06] at 403-95, 403-99 (1986):

> Certainly, Rule 403 does not mean that a court may exclude evidence that will cause delay regardless of its probative value. If the evidence is crucial, the judge would abuse his discretion in excluding it.

In a case surprisingly similar as involving denied testimony of a pediatrician witness, the court in Johnson v. United States, 780 F.2d 902 (11th Cir.1986) reversed the trial court's decision and plaintiff's verdict when the witness was to testify for defendant. Quoting Weinstein with approval, the appellate court found the trial court's action to be an abuse of discretion. The testimony of the expert witness had been excluded as cumulative when presented to support the expert testimony of two other witnesses in the death case. The appellate court considered that the litigant had the right, in this case the United States government under the federal Tort Claims Act, to present testimony which was more comprehensive and at least partially non-cumulative through use of a pediatrician to testify in opposition to pediatricians who were presented by the plaintiff.

The involved principles are well-stated:

> Not all evidence which is entirely duplicative is therefore cumulative and excludable. Evidence may vary in degree of persuasiveness, and when an item of proof which is offered on a point is very different in character or persuasive impact from an item of proof previously received, the former cannot be considered merely "cumulative" of the latter. Moreover, at times it is entirely reasonable for a party to insist, "One witness is good, but two or three will make my case much stronger, even though all will testify in a similar vein." In short, the discretion of the trial judge to exclude cumulative evidence must be exercised in a discriminating fashion, and with wisdom, particularly where the evidence in question goes to issues of central importance in the case.

2 D. Louisell and C. Mueller, supra at 74-75 (footnote omitted). See Hill v. Bache Halsey Stuart Shields, Inc., 790 F.2d 817 (10th Cir.1986); Bower v. O'Hara, 759 F.2d 1117 (3rd Cir.1985); and United States v. Fessel, 531 F.2d 1275 (5th Cir.1976).

The trial court retains considerable latitude even with admittedly relevant testimony in rejecting evidence which is cumulative or in requiring that evidence be brought to the jury's attention in a manner least likely to cause confusion. However, the litigant "is entitled to an opportunity to adduce relevant, competent evidence bearing on the issues to be tried." Hamling v. United States, 418 U.S. 87, 125, 94 S.Ct. 2887, 2911-12, 41 L.Ed.2d 590, reh'g denied 419 U.S. 885, 95 S.Ct. 157, 42 L.Ed.2d 129 (1974). Thus, evidence which in the context of the litigation is merely repetitious or time consuming may be excluded, but only if time consideration substantially outweighs the incremental probative value of the proffered evidence. M. Graham, Handbook of Federal Evidence § 403.1 at 179 (2d ed. 1986).

[8] The denied testimony of proposed witness Betty Perkinson (Perkinson) is substantively complex. In compliance with trial court orders, appellants had filed, as a notice of an additional witness, Perkinson's name. That witness would testify that Jane Fairbanks (Fairbanks), a receptionist in the office of Dr. Little, had told her that she had improperly answered deposition examination when asked if she recalled the number of times that Rebecca Kobos had telephoned the doctor's office. Following designation, appellee Dr. Little filed a motion in limine to prohibit Perkinson from being called as a witness and the motion 547 was considered during trial and then rejected.

The sequence of developmental events on the issue is interesting. It is indicated in the record, although a copy of a deposition is not included, when appellants took the deposition of prospective witness Fairbanks as the office secretary for Dr. Little, that the witness testified she could not recall how many telephone calls were made to the office by the patient's mother during the defined period. As subsequently discovered evidence, appellants planned to tender testimony from an acquaintance of the witness, Perkinson, as noticed as an unexpected witness who would state that Fairbanks, the office secretary, had said to her sometime after the deposition, "I lied at my deposition." "The lawyers asked how many times Becky Kobos called over a specific period of time." "I told them I didn't know." "I wasn't about to help those lawyers." Then to conclude in the conversation between the two women, Fairbanks related "that woman called one hell of a lot."

For in camera trial inquiry, the office secretary Fairbanks was examined by appellants, after which a motion in limine was granted against use by appellants of any testimony from her which would invade the subject of the number of office telephone calls received and also the alleged discussion of her deposition testimony on the subject with Perkinson. Consequently, appellants contended that if she were to give the same testimony before the jury, she would again lie as she did in the deposition. The direction of the examination by appellants as denied by the motion in limine was to revisit the deposition inquiry of the witness, and if consistent, then impeach with subsequent statement of admitted untruth. As first approached by the trial court, the motion in limine to the initial inquiry of the office secretary was sustained as an attempt to prove the telephone calls through hearsay testimony offered under the guise of impeachment. The premise of the denial to appellants of this aspect of the examination of Fairbanks is unclear at this juncture on appeal. The foundational question for impeachment was excluded by the in limine decision as to Fairbanks so that the testimony of Perkinson was foreclosed in advance as lacking anything to impeach. The issue problem in present posture is found in justification for the motion in limine as limiting inquiry of a witness in regard to a prior inconsistent statement.[FN7] If, in fact, that would have been her sworn testimony before the jury as consistent with the deposition and inconsistent with statements to the acquaintance, then whether the in limine evidence would be properly emplaced to impeach as to the fact of the prior inconsistent statement would have a more justified structure for issue presentation. We need not presently assume how the witness might hereafter testify at trial and if she continues a course of denied recollection, whether the trial court has discretion to deny impeachment. The truth is to be found in either what the witness said in deposition or what the other witness stated she subsequently said. We do not find a relevancy question since obviously the theory of appellants was to prove parental concern and continued effort to secure some more satisfying medical recognition of perceived increasing physical problems of their baby boy. Consequently, we do not necessarily determine whether the impeachment examination is subject to discretional exclusion by the trial court, but do *548 not find a basis submitted for denial to appellants of the foundational inquiry of the office secretary.

> FN7. We do not understand the argument of appellees in brief that the foundation question was never asked which is confusing in consideration of what the trial court said during the in camera questioning of both women:
> > If you have more questions for this witness [Fairbanks] on the substance of her testimony, then you certainly are going to be given an opportunity to ask her those questions. But this Court has ruled and there will be no questions asked of this witness concerning the foundations for impeachment through prior alleged inconsistent statements made to Mrs. Perkinson.

This court had occasion in Channel v. State, 592 P.2d 1145 (Wyo.1979) to consider the impeachment and direct evidence issues implicit in W.R.E. 607 and 802. Clear approval for the process undertaken by appellants is indicated provided that a subsequent limiting instruction is given. In specific decision, what we have here is that the trial court determined to protect the office secretary from the "travail" of impeachment by being faced with the contention of her later statement that she committed perjury in a deposition and then reiterated in the in camera examination which indicated her intent to continue that posture for the jury presentation. Denial of the opportunity to appellants to establish the foundation for the impeachment by the first of two limiting trial court orders cannot be justified by direct citation of authorities presented in appellate briefs.

Detailed review of the prior inconsistent statement inquiry in use and function is found in two recent A.L.R. annotations.[FN8] It is notable that this court in Channel cites the first annotation and then the second annotation cites Channel as part of the progressively developing concept that permits use of prior inconsistent statements as evidence in defined circumstances. The not dissimilar subject of use of hearsay to prove prior statements if the witness is now unavailable by lost memory was considered by the United States Supreme Court in the 1988 term in approving usage for criminal prosecution, see United States v. Owens, 484 U.S. 554, 108 S.Ct. 838, 98 L.Ed.2d 951 (1988).

> FN8. First, Annotation, Use of Prior Inconsistent Statements for Impeachment of Testimony of Witnesses Under Rule 613, Federal Rules of Evidence, 40 A.L.R. Fed. 629 (1978) and the later Annotation, Use or Admissibility of Prior Inconsistent Statements of Witness as Substantive Evidence of Facts to Which They Relate in Criminal Case-Modern State Cases, 30 A.L.R. 4 414 (1984). The subject has presented problems since not without conflict in the federal courts. To be compared > are United States v. Garcia, 530 F.2d 650 (5th Cir.1976) (approved and failure to give a limiting instruction was not plain error); United States v. Rogers, 549 F.2d 490 (8th Cir.1976), cert. denied 431 U.S. 918, 97 S.Ct. 2182, 53 L.Ed.2d 229 (1977) (under fairness inquiry and with limiting instruction was admissible); and United States v. Morlang, 531 F.2d 183 (4th Cir.1975) (inadmissable). See comment and included citations of text authorities, 120 F.R.D. 299 (1987), relating to W.R.E. 607.

Although the application in Owens is different as involving substantive testimony rather than impeachment, the characterization which it afforded is relevant:

> It would seem strange, for example, to assert that a witness can avoid introduction of testimony from a prior proceeding that is inconsistent with his trial testimony, see Rule 801(d)(1)(A), by simply asserting lack of memory of the facts to which the prior testimony related.

Owens, 108 S.Ct. at 845. The witness here, by statement that she could remember the number of telephone calls, was isolated by trial court order from testimony about her subsequent comment of deliberate misstatement.

Appellees' tailored their defense to the impeachment denial decision on an abuse of discretion concept as not clearly wrong in citing Waldrop v. Weaver, 702 P.2d 1291 (Wyo.1985); Brockett v. Prater, 675 P.2d 638 (Wyo.1984); and Bacon v. Carey Co., 669 P.2d 533 (Wyo.1983). None of those cases involve impeachment of contended perjurious testimony. Canyon View Ranch v. Basin Elec. Power Corp., 628 P.2d 530 (Wyo.1981) as also cited presents a relevancy question. The one case of somewhat similar character, Diamond Management Corp. v. Empire Gas Corp., 594 P.2d 964 (Wyo.1979) addresses impeachment denial as harmless error since the compared testimony was not essentially dissimilar.

The record establishes that the perjury contention was a concern that the trial court did not want to be presented to the jury-even if true. [FN9]

> FN9. As appellee Little quotes in his brief, the trial court's reasoning related:
>
> "THE COURT: I heard argument on it last night. I made a special trip to the Teton County Law Library and secured from that library legal materials which I then took home, along with the depositions of Mrs. Fairbanks. And after dinner last night, I did my own reading on the law. I read the deposition of Mrs. Fairbanks; I studied the statement of the proposed testimony; came back into Court this morning; heard more argument on the issue. The Court doesn't feel the need for any further legal reference. So thank you very much, Mr. Hartnett, but I don't want them.
>
> MR. ANDREW HARTNETT: I take that as an order that I should not address the Court with legal argument?
> THE COURT: Yes, because it's a matter now of the law, not of the facts, and you can bring up the law with this or the Supreme Court at any time you want. Now, the Court has listened carefully to the testimony of Mrs. Perkinson. The uncontroverted-the uncontroverted evidence in this case will be that Mrs. Kobos called Dr. Little's office in late August and early September of 1981 to express her concerns about her child. The proffered testimony will not impeach any evidence to the contrary. The evidence doesn't impeach Mrs. Fairbanks, her testimony being that she doesn't recall. She has no recollection and that's not surprising. I couldn't tell you who called me last > week. I know I had some telephone calls earlier this week but I can't tell you who called me. Thus, if it doesn't have the purpose or the affect of impeaching the credibility of Mrs. Fairbanks and thereby discrediting the weight to be given her testimony, the only testimony being Mrs. Kobos' testimony that I called, then, the only other purpose for the testimony is to prove the truth of the hearsay asserted, which hearsay would be otherwise inadmissible.

> Now, this proffered testimony does something else in this case. This proffered testimony injects into the case an inference, an implication, that Dr. Little's a bad man being surrounded by those who would commit perjury. Now, it is the judgment of this Court after watching Mrs. Perkinson carefully and after considering all of the aspects of this case that if I were a Plaintiff's lawyer in this case, I would like to have the Jury think that on the other side of me are a bunch of perjurers and people who would be surrounded by perjurers. Now, if there are perjurers, there are remedies for that. But the remedies are not in this courtroom at this time with this Judge or with this Jury. Those remedies are with the Teton County Prosecuting Attorney, probably a Judge other than John Troughton, perhaps Judge Ranck and perhaps other Defense Counsel than those that are seated in this courtroom and, clearly, a different Jury.

549 [9] Yet another conflict on testimony is presented in this appeal. In cross-examination of Dr. Little, appellants' counsel inquired about his experience in the treatment of children who had osteomyelitis or septic arthritis. An irrelevancy objection was sustained. The inquiry followed an earlier motion to compel discovery which had required the doctor to answer questions concerning his treatment of MB, a specific patient with a similarly diagnosed condition. The relevancy may be indicated if we were to review the documents and file as furnished with discovery, but it is not in this record. Without an offer of proof at trial, this record fails to afford us a justification for disagreement with the discretional decision of the trial court. Assumption of fact in brief are not exchangeable for an adequately presented offer of proof in trial. Nicholls v. Nicholls, 721 P.2d 1103 (Wyo.1986); Majority of Working Interest Owners in Buck Draw Field Area v. Wyoming Oil and Gas Conservation Com'n, 721 P.2d 1070 (Wyo.1986).

We reverse and remand for retrial.

CARDINE, C.J., and THOMAS, J., filed special concurrence opinions.

BROWN, J., Retired, dissented in part and concurred in part and filed an opinion.

CARDINE, Chief Justice, specially concurring.

I concur in the opinion of the court and, with respect to instruction number 18, strongly urge that this kind of instruction should not be given a jury. It is argument, and it is confusing. Thus, it is incorrect to say that physicians and surgeons are not liable for mere errors of judgment. They are liable for error of judgment if those errors result from negligence, that is "the failure to exercise the skill, diligence and knowledge * * * reasonably * * * exercised * * * by members of the profession in good standing and in the same line of practice."

The balance of instruction number 18 seems to say that if the acts and omissions of the defendants are an exercise of honest judgment, and not unreasonable, defendants are not liable. This likewise is misleading and a questionable statement of law. The question is not whether the judgment 550 of the physician and surgeon was honest or dishonest but whether the physician failed to exercise the skill, diligence, and knowledge reasonably exercised by others. Instruction number 18 states as a matter of law that a physician who acts honestly and reasonably is not liable. What if he acts honestly and unreasonably-or acts dishonestly and reasonably? This kind of instruction is exceedingly confusing. More than that, the instruction as a whole seems to say in lay terms that a physician who acts honestly in reaching a judgment is not liable. That is not a correct statement of the law.

In the vast majority of these kinds of cases, it is enough to define for the jury negligence and cause in simple terms, as stated in instruction number 10 and other instructions found in the court's opinion.

Where a significant portion of the responsible medical community approves two different treatments for the same injury or condition, it is not negligence for a physician to choose one treatment over the other. For me, that does not involve an error of judgment at all. It is simply not negligence to choose either treatment. An example of two medical procedures for treating the same condition is the treatment of a ruptured disc. Neurologically the disc is removed without fusion. Orthopedically the vertebrae are fused. Both courses of treatment are common, accepted by the responsible medical community, and it generally is not negligence to treat a ruptured disc in either fashion.

An error is a mistake. A mistake may or may not result from negligence. But what is gained by telling the jury that an error carefully made does not result in liability? It is argumentative. It is confusing. It is a clever play on words which implies to the jury that a physician is not liable for an error in judgment. To balance the instructions, if number 18 is given, the court ought to advise the jury that a mere error in judgment is negligence for which a physician or surgeon is liable if such error results from negligence. As stated, it is better that neither instruction be given but that the term negligence be simply defined for the jury.

THOMAS, Justice, concurring specially.

I am in accord only with the result reached by the majority opinion. I have some views of my own with respect to the difficulties engendered by Instruction No. 18, and those views may accommodate more closely to the objection to that instruction by the plaintiffs as quoted in the separate opinion of Justice Brown. I perceive Instruction No. 18 as requiring the jury to accept the approval of the defendants' conduct by expert witnesses so long as that approval was honestly made and was reasonable. In his separate opinion, Chief Justice Cardine has pointed out some internal inconsistency in that instruction.

Beyond its inherent departure from established legal rules, my perception of the instruction is that it does create a standard for recovery which conflicts with other instructions which were given by the court and are quoted in the majority opinion. Particularly, it appears to me to be antithetical to Instruction No. 12.

Furthermore, it is not consistent with the general instruction, Instruction No. 1, which addresses the jury's role with respect to credibility of all witnesses. It is even more inconsistent with Instruction No. 6 relating to expert witnesses which reads as follows:

> "A person is qualified to testify as an expert if he has special knowledge, skill, expertise, training, or education sufficient to qualify him as an expert on the subject to which his testimony relates.
>
> "Duly qualified experts may give their opinions on questions in controversy at a trial. To assist you in deciding such questions, you may consider the opinion with the reasons given for it, if any, by the expert who gives the opinion. You may also consider the qualifications and credibility of the expert.
> "You are not bound to accept such an opinion as conclusive, but should give to it the weight to which you find it to be entitled. You may disregard any such *551 opinion if you find it to be unreasonable."

This court has articulated clearly the proposition that it is the prerogative of the trier of fact to determine what evidence is most dependable. E.g.,

State ex rel. Wyoming Worker's Compensation v. Colvin, 681 P.2d 269 (Wyo.1984); Cederburg v. Carter, 448 P.2d 608 (Wyo.1968); Cimoli v. Greyhound Corporation, 372 P.2d 170 (Wyo.1962). The vice in Instruction No. 18 is that, subject to the conditions attached, the jury is required by the instruction to accept the expert testimony. That is not, and should not, be the law. The jury is not required to accept it even if they find it to be honest and reasonable.

In addition, this court also has assigned specifically to the jury the evaluation of expert witnesses, suggesting that their testimony need not be accepted. E.g., Oukrop v. Wasserburger, 755 P.2d 233 (Wyo.1988); Thomas v. Metz, 714 P.2d 1205 (Wyo.1986); Reed v. Hunter, 663 P.2d 513 (Wyo.1983). An additional vice in Instruction No. 18 is the statement that the jury must find for the defendants based upon the approval of the "respectable portion of competent and reputable physicians or surgeons." The tenor of the instruction is antithetical to the function heretofore assigned to the jury by our cases.

These problems with Instruction No. 18 were exacerbated by other rulings of the district judge. His limitation on the use of expert witnesses by the plaintiff and the limitation of testimony by some of those witnesses was troublesome. The members of the jury could have concluded that, in addressing these matters as he did, the trial judge clearly indicated his position that the expert witnesses called by the plaintiff were not among that "respectable portion of competent and reputable physicians or surgeons." The demand for a "respectable portion of competent and reputable physicians or surgeons" also is contrary to the judge's ruling with respect to cumulative testimony. These matters, together with the refusal of the court to permit the plaintiffs to call the defendants as adverse witnesses in presenting their case in chief which was then followed by directed verdicts for lack of proof, all made painfully obvious the deprivation of a fair trial so far as the plaintiffs were concerned.

I add that denying the plaintiffs the right to call the defendants as adverse witnesses in presenting their case in chief is not a neutral ruling. When called in the case presented by the defendants, counsel have a clear opportunity to tailor the testimony in chief. Cross-examination then can be severely limited to the scope of the direct examination, and it may turn out to be impossible for the plaintiffs to present the significant points supporting their theory. Furthermore, a substantial difference exists between the presentation by the plaintiffs, through questions permitted on cross-examination of salient points followed by an explanation, and the converse in which the defendants first of all present their story and counsel for the plaintiffs must then try to attack a prepared and planned presentation. In the context of weighing testimony, the latter is far less favorable to a plaintiff, which is why a plaintiff is permitted to call a defendant as an adverse witness in his case in chief.

BROWN, Justice, Retired, dissenting in part and concurring in part.

The majority holds that giving Instruction Number 18 was reversible error. It states that appellants' challenge to instructions is the principal issue on appeal. The court was particularly wroth because the trial court used the terms "honest judgment" and "honestly" in its instruction, and states that the instruction "bespeaks in responsibility to moral decision and honesty."

In the context of Instruction Number 18 and the other eight malpractice instructions, it is inconceivable that the jury could have been misled and thought defendants' conduct would be excused as long as their judgment was not fraudulent or morally improper.

Webster's Third New International Dictionary 1086 (1971), defines "honest" in part as: "candid presentation of the facts," *552 "free of ostentation or pretense," "of a creditable nature." Honesty is defined on the same page as "adherence to the facts." In context, the words "honest" and "honesty" used in Instruction Number 18 could only mean adherence to the facts and the jury could not have rationally thought otherwise.

Arguably, terms more precise than "honest" and "honestly" could have been used in the instruction. However, these terms are not novel. In Smith v. Beard, 56 Wyo. 375, 110 P.2d 260, 270 (1941) (quoting Staloch v. Holm, 100 Minn. 276, 111 N.W. 264, 267 (1907)), this court said: " 'It would be * * * unreasonable to hold a physician responsible for an honest error of judgment on so uncertain problems as are presented in surgery and medicine.' " (Emphasis added.)

Appearing on the same page of the opinion in Smith, the terms "honest judgment" and "honestly made" are used. Justice Blume certainly was not using the terms honest and honestly as opposed to the terms fraudulent, lying, larceny or some other moral deficiency.

The Supreme Court of Minnesota wrote that at least twenty-nine other jurisdictions follow the rule that physicians are not liable for honest errors in judgment. In Ouellette by Ouellette v. Subak, 391 N.W.2d 810 (Minn.1986), the court stated:

> "Cases of malpractice may be within the exception. A physician entitled to practice his profession, possessing the requisite qualifications, and applying his skill and judgment with due care, is not ordinarily liable for damages consequent upon an honest mistake or an error of judgment in making a diagnosis, in prescribing treatment, or in determining upon an operation, where there is reasonable doubt as to the nature of the physical conditions involved or as to what should have been done, in accordance with recognized authority and good current practice. * * *
> " * * * Most professional men are retained or employed in order that they may give the benefit of their peculiar and individual judgment and skill. A lawyer, for example, does not contract to win a lawsuit, but to give his best opinion and ability. He has never been held to liability in damages for a failure to determine disputed questions of law in accordance with their final decision by courts of appeal. It would be just as unreasonable to hold a physician responsible for an honest error of judgment on so uncertain problems as are presented in surgery and medicine."

[Staloch,] 100 Minn. at 280-283, 111 N.W. at 266-67.

Moreover, in protecting a physician from liability for mere errors in judgment in choosing between alternate diagnoses or treatments, this court has followed a rule recognized by at least 29 other jurisdictions. See also W. Keeton, D. Dobbs, R. Keeton and P. Owen, Prosser & Keeton on the Law of Torts 186 (5th Ed.1984).

Id. at 814 (emphasis added and footnote omitted).

In Watson v. Hockett, 107 Wash.2d 158, 727 P.2d 669, 673 (1986), the court stated:

> The "error of judgment" instruction unanimously upheld by this court in Miller, and also proposed by Dr. Hockett in this case, is also proper:
> "A physician or surgeon is not liable for an honest error of judgment if, in arriving at that judgment, the physician or surgeon exercised reasonable care and skill, within the standard of care he was obliged to follow."

(Italics ours.) Miller, 91 Wash.2d at 160 n. 4, 588 P.2d 734. Henceforth, however, the italicized word "honest" should not be used in those cases where it is appropriate to give this instruction. This is because the use of the word "honest" imparts an argumentative aspect into the instruction which, as discussed above, does not coincide with current jury instruction practice.

See also Perkins v. Walker, 406 N.W.2d 189 (Iowa 1987); Miller v. Kennedy, 91 Wash.2d 155, 588 P.2d 734 (1978) ("honest" *553 error of judgment instruction upheld). In 61 Am.Jur.2d, Physicians & Surgeons, § 209 (1981), the term "honest error" is used in discussing professional judgment.

"No party may assign as error the giving or the failure to give an instruction unless he objects thereto before the jury retires to consider its verdict, stating distinctly the matter to which he objects and the grounds of his objection. " W.R.C.P. 51 (emphasis added). At the instruction conference, counsel for appellants objected to giving Instruction Number 18, stating:

> In the first instance, your Honor, I think that Vassos v. Roussalis, where it defines what negligence is,-I mean, what standard of care is, impliedly overrules any case that would additionally instruct on the issue of error of judgments on the first instance. Probably the vast majority of any case in the exercise of medicine requires judgment. The question-and that evidence comes into the trial. It's up to the Jury to determine if, from the facts of the case, that's excused by knowledge, skill and diligence in the evidence. To instruct about judgment, particularly, calls the attention to the Jury of one of many issues that they've heard in the evidence and in certain circumstances, could-could be tantamount to issuing a directed verdict in our judgment.
> Two, I don't think anything in Conway v. Wright suggests that the language of the decision should be given as an instruction. And I think that, clearly, this sets up a situation where a professional judgment being exercised, in almost any case, requires the Plaintiffs to almost prove, you know, beyond a reasonable doubt or prove some kind of burden far greater than the law requires. The instruction, in my judgment, simply,-you know, it's unnecessary to give and it does tend to direct a verdict against because, you know, all I have to say is while this was a judgmental issue, that's for the Jury to decide.

It is most difficult to determine precisely what appellants are complaining about. At the instruction conference, they talk about the instruction imposing on them a burden of proof "beyond a reasonable doubt" and a tendency to "direct a verdict against them." It is noted in appellants' objection that they do not complain about the use of the terms "honest judgment" and "honestly." This latent concern about these terms apparently developed on appeal.

W.R.C.P. 51 is designed to assist the trial court to correct potential errors in the instructions. The purpose of the rule is defeated if alleged errors are asserted for the first time on appeal. Perhaps if appellant had properly objected, the court would have deleted the terms "honest" and "honestly" or substituted acceptable terms. Appellants' objection to Instruction Number 18 does not minimally comply with Rule 51, and they should not now be heard to complain.

In its opinion, the majority addresses other issues raised by appellants, and is critical of many of the trial court's rulings and determinations. However, the majority's reversal is not based on those additional issues. Those issues are discretionary matters with the trial court. I see no abuse of discretion and would therefore affirm the trial court in its determinations.

With respect to granting a directed verdict in favor of Charles Everts, M.D., the radiologist, I concur only in the result determined by the majority. I agree with the trial court that there was not competent evidence of any direct, proximate cause between the conduct and actions of Dr. Everts and the injuries appellants contend occurred. The trial court, however, improperly granted the directed verdict without allowing appellants to call Dr. Everts as an adverse witness in their case in chief. Had Dr. Everts testified as an adverse witness, it is highly unlikely that he would have made appellants' case, but appellants had a right to try to cure the deficiencies in their proofs through the testimony of appellee Everts.

I would reverse the trial court in granting a summary judgment to Dr. Everts and affirm in all other respects.

UNITED STATES of America, Defendant-Appellee.

Nos. 84–5308, 84–5347.
Jan. 21, 1986.

Parents of infant who died of iron poisoning brought medical malpractice action against United States. The United States District Court for the Southern District of Florida, Alcee L. Hastings, J., entered $2,000,000 judgment for plaintiffs, and United States appealed. The Court of Appeals, Roney, Circuit Judge, held that: (1) exclusion of testimony of Government's expert as cumulative was abuse of discretion; (2) record did not justify award of $2,000,000; and (3) plaintiffs were not entitled to award of attorney fees.

Vacated and remanded.

Kravitch, Circuit Judge, filed specially concurring opinion.

904 Before RONEY and KRAVITCH, Circuit Judges, and THOMAS [FN], District judge.

FN* Honorable Daniel H. Thomas, U.S. District Judge for the Southern District of Alabama, sitting by designation.

RONEY, Circuit Judge:

In this medical malpractice action brought under the Federal Torts Claims Act (FTCA), the United States appeals from a $2 million judgment awarded to the plaintiffs, parents of an infant who died of iron poisoning. Plaintiffs cross-appeal the denial of attorney's fees. The Government challenges a variety of evidentiary rulings, certain "outside research" of the trial judge, numerous factual findings, the taxing of costs, and the amount of damages. We vacate and remand because a Government expert witness was erroneously precluded from testifying and because the verdict is excessive and appears to be based on considerations inappropriate in a tort claims case. The denial of attorney's fees is affirmed because this Court has recently decided that attorney's fees may not be awarded against the United States in a case of this kind.

Early on the morning of November 2, 1980, plaintiffs' twenty-one-month-old son, Carlos, consumed a large quantity of iron tablets. Carlos became ill and was taken by his parents to Homestead Air Force Base Hospital (Homestead) where he was treated for acute iron intoxication. At approximately 2:00 p.m. he was transferred to Jackson Memorial Hospital (Jackson Memorial) where he died shortly after midnight.

Many facts in this case were vigorously disputed: the number of pills the child ingested, the time at which he ingested them, the date on which the mother received the pills which would indicate the number of pills left on the date of ingestion, the amount of time that elapsed between the parents' discovery of the child's illness and their arrival at Homestead, and the accuracy of a lab slip indicating a "free iron level" of 9170 micrograms per deciliter (mg/dl). These disputed facts bear on the degree of iron toxicity in the child's system present at various times, whether Carlos' life might have been saved given proper and timely treatment, and what party, if any, was at fault for not correctly identifying or treating the condition. The trial court concluded that at least ten specific actions by Homestead fell below the standard of care required of that type of medical facility, and that its more than three-hour delay in administering deferoxamine (an iron antidote) and its failure to transfer him to a higher care facility sooner, caused Carlos' death. The Government contended that Carlos would have died regardless of the treatment that could have been given him.

I. Exclusion of the Expert Witness

The Government contends that the trial court abused its discretion in excluding the testimony of Dr. Albert Rauber, professor of Pediatrics at Emory University Medical School in Atlanta, and director of the Poison Control Center.

When the Government sought to produce Dr. Rauber as its third expert witness, counsel became involved in a vigorous dispute over whether the Government had waived its right to call Dr. Rauber when it allegedly stipulated regarding experts. The trial court was obviously troubled over this dispute and stated that counsel had put the court in a difficult position. At the end of the colloquy, the court indicated that it would exclude Dr. Rauber's testimony because of the stipulation but then stated that it would also exercise its discretion to limit the number of witnesses under Fed.R.Evid. 403. After that, Government counsel was permitted to proffer Dr. Rauber's expected testimony.

Our review of the record leads us to the conclusion that the alleged stipulation relied on by plaintiffs was in fact limited to an agreement that each party would allow two experts to be deposed without subpoena. It does not appear that the Government explicitly waived its right to call more 905 than two experts at trial, nor did it ever explicitly waive its right to call Dr. Rauber.

Analysis of this issue, therefore, turns on Rule 403. Under Rule 403, relevant evidence may be excluded for considerations of undue delay, waste of time, or needless presentation of cumulative evidence. The power to conduct orderly trials includes the power to exclude or limit expert testimony. United States v. Thevis, 665 F.2d 616, 633–34 (5th Cir. Unit B 1982) (criminal trial); Campbell Industries v. M/V Gemini, 619 F.2d 24, 27 (9th Cir.1980) . " Rule 403 does not mean that a court may exclude evidence that will cause delay regardless of its probative value. If the evidence is crucial the judge would abuse his discretion in excluding it." Weinstein's Evidence, Para. 403[06] at 403–59–60 (1982).

The propriety of excluding Dr. Rauber's testimony under Rule 403 turns on whether his testimony would have been cumulative. Two expert witnesses testified at trial for the Government. Dr. James Hillman, Director of Pediatric Emergency Care Center, Tampa General Hospital, and Medical Director of the Tampa Bay Medical Poison Control Center was of the opinion that it would have made no difference whatsoever if Carlos had begun receiving intravenous (I.V.) desferal (an iron antidote) the minute he entered Homestead because it would, even then, not have been possible to bind (neutralize) all the free iron in his blood fast enough to save him. In his opinion the only chance of saving Carlos' life would have been to begin treatment within twenty minutes of ingestion. Dr. Hillman testified that Homestead did as good a job as they could have, given the facility and the circumstances. Despite seeming to acknowledge that the deferoxamine and the I.V. treatments could have begun somewhat earlier, and the Homestead medical records could have been more complete, he was still of the opinion that this had no impact whatsoever on Carlos' death. When responding to the court's questions about dialysis or transfusions as a mode of treatment, Dr. Hillman responded that the problem was that transfusions only provide access to circulating blood while the poison, here iron, is in the tissues and in "many different spaces." Therefore, although iron might be removed from the blood, there is no corresponding clinical improvement in the patient. Similarly, he believed deferoxamine would have been of limited, if any, help because it only binds one iron tablet every three hours, while the intestines and tissues continue to absorb the iron. When questioned about Carlos' serum iron level, free iron level, total iron level and binding capacity, Dr. Hillman testified that because Carlos' iron level was over 9000 mg/dl at 3:00 p.m. by a conservative estimate, it was 25% to 30% what it had been within two to three hours of ingestion. This figure "peaks out" early, within two to three hours of ingestion, then "decays" rapidly. For this reason, Dr. Hillman surmised that if Carlos' iron level was 9,000 at three o'clock at least eight hours after ingestion, then it must have been 20,000 or 30,000 at peak value. According to Dr. Hillman, a 1000 mg/dl level is potentially lethal. Dr. Hillman was aware of no child or adult who had survived an iron level in excess of 9,000. He believed Carlos must have ingested "above 40," pills, and "in the 50's at least," to explain the very high iron level so late in the day, that the distribution of pills through the small intestine goes to a long period of ingestion, and that the pills were ingested "very early" in the day.

The second Government expert witness was Dr. Eugene Gitlin, director of medical services, Parkway Regional Medical Center, director of the Emergency Department of that hospital, associate clinical professor at the University of Miami School of Medicine, associate medical director of Dade County Fire Rescue, teacher of Emergency Medicine at the VA hospital and board certified in internal medicine and emergency medicine. Dr. Gitlin was of the opinion that Homestead was within the standard of care required of that type of facility. He concluded that Carlos had ingested a "huge" amount of iron, 50–60 pills was not inconceivable, a lethal dose according to *906 Dr. Gitlin. A blood iron level over 9000 mg/dl was an "extraordinary level." He testified that even if treatment had been started within an hour of ingestion, Carlos could not have been saved. After reviewing all the documents which were furnished to him, including medical records and statements of the various treating physicians at Jackson Memorial Hospital, Dr. Gitlin concluded that the child could not have been saved even if he had been brought to Jackson Memorial under the conditions specified.

The district court would not admit the testimony of Dr. Albert Rauber. According to the proffer of Government counsel during trial, Dr. Rauber has been a full professor of Pediatrics at Emory University Medical School since 1971. He is the director of the Georgia Poison Control Center and would have been the only expert board qualified in Medical Toxicology. He is also board qualified in Pediatrics.

He would have testified, based on his expertise in Child Behavior, that it is unlikely that Carlos sat down and ate 40–50 pills "at one sitting." This would indicate that the child consumed the pills over a long period of time, allowing more time for absorption prior to arrival at Homestead. In addition, Dr. Rauber was going to "draw on" certain evidence not discussed at trial: medical records, s-g-o-t and s-g-p-t, which are measures of liver and kidney functions. In Dr. Rauber's view, the deterioration in those vital organ functions would not have occurred as rapidly had the child eaten the pills at 7:00 or 7:30 a.m.

Dr. Rauber, like the other Government experts, believed that Homestead's treatment was reasonable and within the standard of care. He would testify that the blood iron level was accurate and very important in that it is a basis from which to go back and "determine the amount of iron that was absorbed, as opposed to ingested." He would also have testified that iron is stored in many places in the body, not just in the blood, so "the absorption of free iron in the blood is not in the process of absorbing iron. It flows in from the tissues and must first be absorbed from the bloodstream."

"Basically," Dr. Rauber's testimony would have been "that drawing free iron out of the blood does not end the absorption of iron, [t]hat it also comes out of the tissues [, and that] the mother's delay in presenting the child in the early time of ingestion was in fact the cause of death...."

It appears Dr. Rauber's testimony would have been based in part on evidence not relied upon by the other experts, namely the liver and kidney function tests. His analysis was somewhat different. His testimony concerning the biochemistry of iron absorption and treatment would have been more comprehensive than that of the other Government experts and was, therefore, at least partially noncumulative. Dr. Rauber had different, and arguably better qualifications than the other experts.

[1] Our review of the record leads us to the conclusion that the Government should be able to submit the testimony of Dr. Rauber to the court. Liability in this case turns on a proper analysis of highly technical material and the highest qualified expert should be available to the court. Inasmuch as this is a trial without a jury, no new presentation of the other evidence before the court need be made, but the court must reconsider all of the evidence in light of Dr. Rauber's testimony, and reconsider its decision as to liability.

Although the case is remanded for further evidentiary proceedings and reconsideration of liability, it is appropriate for this Court to rule upon the other issues raised on appeal for guidance to the district court on remand.

II. Damages

[2] Although the judgment for $2,000,000 is vacated because of the problems at the liability stage, this Court would have vacated the judgment as excessive in any event. Plaintiffs contend the Government is foreclosed from challenging the amount of damages on appeal because it was not challenged in the motion for new trial. *907 Where, as here, damages are set by the judge instead of a jury, issues raised during trial and ruled on by the trial court need not be raised again in a motion for new trial in order to preserve them for review on appeal. United States v. Harue Hayashi, 282 F.2d 599, 601 (9th Cir.1960). The district court awarded each parent $1 million for "future loss of support and services [and for] past and future mental pain and suffering for the duration of their respective lives."

This Circuit has held that the "components and measure of damages in FTCA claims are taken from the law of the state where the tort occurred...." Harden v. United States, 688 F.2d 1025, 1029 (5th Cir. Unit B 1982) (quoting Ferrero v. United States, 603 F.2d 510, 512 (5th Cir.1979)); 28 U.S.C.A. § 2674. Under Florida law, Fla.Stat.Ann. §§ 768.21(1) and (4), the parents of a deceased minor child may recover as follows:

> (1) Each survivor may recover the value of lost support and services from the date of the decedent's injury to his death, with interest, and future loss of support and services from the date of death and reduced to present value. In evaluating loss of support and services, the survivor's relationship to the decedent, the amount of the decedent's probable net income available for distribution to the particular survivor, and the replacement value of the decedent's services to the survivor may be considered. In computing the dura> tion of future losses, the joint life expectancies of the survivor and the decedent and the period of minority, in the case of healthy minor children, may be considered....

> (4) Each parent of a deceased minor child may also recover for mental pain and suffering from the date of injury.

The predecessor statute to this statute was Fla.Stat.Ann. § 768.03 (1963), repealed in 1972, which stated in pertinent part: "[T]he father of such minor child, or if the father be not living, the mother may maintain an action ... and may recover, not only for the loss of services of such minor child, but in addition thereto, such sum for the mental pain and suffering of the parent (or both parents) if they survive, as the jury may access." Case law interpreting the predecessor statute has been held applicable to cases arising under the new damages statute. Smyer v. Gaines, 332 So.2d 655, 659 (Fla. 1st DCA 1976).

Florida appellate courts rely heavily on the damages awarded by juries in similar cases. In Gresham v. Courson, 177 So.2d 33 (Fla. 1st DCA 1965), the Florida appellate court reduced the jury damage award to a father for the death of his eleven-month-old son (1) for lack of evidence upon which to predicate the high damages, and (2) because the award was very high compared to the "trend" in the jurisdiction. The court said:

> [T]he appellate courts have been and always will be unable to devise a measure or scale by which to fix with mathematical certainty the minimum and maximum limits of the verdict which a jury may lawfully return in the suit of a surviving parent for the wrongful death of his child under the facts and circumstances peculiar to a particular case. In appeals testing the amount of the verdict and judgment there is no better criterion available than as stated by Mr. Justice Terrell in Florida Dairies Co. v. Rogers, supra, and it must of necessity be applied here. In that context, if the verdict and resulting judgment do not bear a reasonable relation to the philosophy and general trend of prior decisions in such cases, the judgment must be either set aside and a new trial awarded or a remittitur imposed reducing it to an amount which the appellate court in the exercise of its discretionary powers and in good conscience deems sustainable.

Id. at 39–40. The court had previously noted what Mr. Justice Terrell said in Florida Dairies Co. v. Rogers, 119 Fla. 451, 161 So. 85, 88 (1935), as follows:

> In cases where damages for mental pain and suffering are allowed, it must bear some reasonable relation to the facts, the status of the parties, the 908 amount allowed as compensatory damages, and the philosophy and general trend of decisions effecting such cases. When we say that the amount allowed must bear some reasonable relation to such factors, we do not mean that it must be equal to, be twice these, or bear any other arbitrary relation to them, but what we do mean is that these and other cognate factors are proper elements on which the allowance may be predicated. It cannot be predicated on the basis of restitution.

[3] In this case, a mortality table and the parents' testimony were offered as evidence of damages, and nothing more. There is nothing in this record to show the base upon which this large judgment rests. There was no evidence regarding the value of services or support. Gresham said that "unless the deceased child had some extraordinary income-producing attributes, the cost of maintaining it to maturity would normally exceed the value of any services which might likely be rendered by the child to the parent." Id. at 37. It seems quite apparent that the award here must be restricted to mental pain and suffering.

In showing excessiveness, the party challenging damages may show that the amount is unsupported by the evidence. Bould v. Touchette, 349

So.2d 1181, 1184 (Fla.1977). A verdict must be set aside if it is so inordinately large as obviously to exceed the maximum limit of a reasonable range within which the trier of fact may properly operate.

Although excessiveness may be tested by comparing the verdict to those damage awards determined not to be excessive in similar cases, Sanders v. Nabisco, Inc., 359 So.2d 46 (Fla. 1st DCA 1978); Loftin v. Wilson, 67 So.2d 185 (Fla.1953), we have been unable to find any reported case in Florida with an award this high. Perhaps some research or compilation of similar cases tried in Florida is available that could be submitted to the court and could thus be made a part of the record to furnish a basis for the amount that should ultimately be awarded.

Nothing has been presented to us, however, and there is nothing in the record before the district court to justify the amount of damages awarded in this case. A plaintiff has the burden of justifying the amount of damages that can be awarded even though the loss of an infant child can be so devastating that monetary damages are incalculable. The determination of liability was a close call, at best, and there is no base upon which to permit any punitive consideration to become involved in a damage award. In any event, the FTCA specifically prohibits an award of punitive damages. Courts should guard against punitive and emotional considerations influencing awards of damages under the FTCA. If liability is found on remand, the district court should conduct a further hearing on damages and set a damage award consistent with the opinion.

Several other evidentiary issues were raised on appeal. We affirm the district court's ruling in each instance, with the following point-by-point discussion.

III. Exclusion of The Risk Management Report

[4] The district court excluded from evidence a "risk management report" prepared by an insurance adjuster on behalf of Jackson Memorial under its statutory duty to maintain such a report, Fla.Stat.Ann. § 768.41(1)(d). The report was prepared November 20, 1980, eighteen days after the child's death, and contained, among other things, informal physicians' opinions. In argument over the correctness of the district court's ruling, neither party has noted that the statute which requires the preparation of the risk management report specifically provides that those reports are not admissible in evidence:

> The incident reports shall be considered to be part of the work papers of the attorney defending the establishment in litigation relating thereto and shall be subject to discovery, but not be admissible as evidence in court....

*909 Internal Risk Management Statute, Fla.Stat.Ann. § 768.41(4).

Florida has thus made a legislative judgment that in order to insure the reliability and efficacy of the required reports, they should not be subject to use in litigation. See also Palmer v. Hoffman, 318 U.S. 109, 113, 63 S.Ct. 477, 87 L.Ed. 645 (1943). Although not controlling in federal litigation where the Federal Rules of Evidence apply, the statute undergirds the decision of the trial court. After reading the document, the district court found that it was not admissible under either the business records or public records exception to the hearsay rule, Fed.R.Evid. 803(6) and (8).

Given the circumstances under which the report was prepared and the inclusion in it of non-contemporaneous unofficial statements, when viewed in the context of the above cited statute, it was within the district court's discretion to exclude the report from evidence.

IV. Exclusion of Letter From Counsel to Expert

[5] The district court excluded a letter sent by plaintiffs' counsel, Mr. Cole, to Dr. Holzman, an employee at Jackson Memorial. Plaintiffs assert Dr. Holzman was a potential plaintiffs' expert witness and that the letter was written to him in that capacity. In the letter, Cole stated that "the child consumed 30 to 50" iron pills, that the bottle of pills was purchased "approximately October 25, 1980," and that plaintiffs discovered the ingestion at 7:00 a.m. on November 2, 1980. The letter, bearing on the number of pills ingested and the swiftness of the parents' response, is relevant to the issue of fault. After reading the letter and hearing argument concerning its admissibility, the district court permitted its use for purposes of impeachment, but would not admit it into evidence for the truth of the matter stated.

Defendant, asserting that the exclusion constitutes reversible error, views the letter as an admission against interest by the authorized agent of a party opponent, Mrs. Johnson. According to plaintiffs, however, Cole had never met or spoken with Mrs. Johnson at the time the letter was written and the letter was protected under the attorney work product rule. It is apparent that any possible error arising from exclusion of the letter, if error at all, was harmless. First, the letter and its essential contents were used for impeachment. Second, the trial judge, here the trier of fact, examined the letter.

V. No Exclusion of Mrs. Johnson

[6] Reiterating an argument raised and rejected in pre-trial motions, the Government contends Mrs. Johnson is not a proper party and that the district court therefore erred in refusing to exclude her from the courtroom during trial under Fed.R.Evid. 615.

Under the Florida Wrongful Death Statute, survivors or parents of deceased minor children are not explicitly excluded from joining as parties. Fla.Stat.Ann. §§ 768.16 – 768.27. Mr. and Mrs. Johnson were both individually listed on the complaint as parties and were awarded damages in their individual capacities. The district court did not err in allowing Mrs. Johnson to remain in the courtroom during trial.

VI. Trial Judge's "Outside Research"

This case involved extended and complex medical and scientific testimony on the nature of iron poisoning. The appropriate treatment, survival rates, and etiology are a matter of dispute in the medical community. The trial judge, apparently in order to familiarize himself with the subject matter and to put technical testimony into context, consulted medical journals not in evidence prior to hearing the expert testimony. On at least two occasions his questioning of expert witnesses referred to the journals or reflected his familiarity with the literature.

On appeal the Government alleges the trial court abused its discretion in denying a new trial because the "outside research" deprived it of the right to trial by an impartial factfinder and to challenge adverse facts made known to the factfinder. The trial judge denied the motion for a new trial because (1) the Government had failed 910 to object during the trial, (2) he did not rely on those "outside sources," and (3) any error was harmless.

It is a matter of common knowledge that courts occasionally consult sources not in evidence, ranging anywhere from dictionaries to medical treatises. See, e.g., Roe v. Wade, 410 U.S. 113, 129–162, 93 S.Ct. 705, 715–731, 35 L.Ed.2d 147 (1973). A trial judge's findings are not necessarily tainted simply because he brings his "experience and knowledge to bear in assessing the evidence submitted at trial." Hersch v. United States, 719 F.2d 873, 879 (6th Cir.1983). The trial judge may not, however, undertake an independent mission of finding facts "outside the record of a bench trial over which he [presides]." Price Brothers Co. v. Philadelphia Gear Corp., 629 F.2d 444, 447 (6th Cir.1980).

[7] It was obvious at trial that the trial judge had done "outside research." The Government's failure to object during trial constitutes procedural default. In any event, the trial judge stated he did not rely on those outside sources in reaching his conclusions and this appellate court relies on those representations.

VII. Taxing of Costs

On March 5, 1984, the Clerk of Court for the Southern District of Florida, pursuant to 28 U.S.C.A. § 1920, taxed the Government $14,238.90 for plaintiffs' costs under Fed.R.Civ.P. 54(d), which provides that "[o]n motion served within 5 days thereafter, the action of the Clerk may be reviewed by the court." The Government, which prior to March 5th had prematurely filed itemized objections, filed a "Motion to Vacate Clerk's Award of Costs and Memorandum" on March 8, 1984, incorporating its previous itemized objections, wherein it asked the court to "vacate the Clerk's award of costs pending a ruling on defendant's objections to the items of cost sought by plaintiffs."

[8] This record does not indicate that the district court has ruled on the Government's March 8, 1984, Motion to Vacate. We are, therefore, without jurisdiction to entertain an appeal on the issue of costs at this time. Upon remand, the district court will have an opportunity to rule on the cost issue.

VIII. Attorney's Fees Under FTCA

After the district court awarded $2 million in damages to the plaintiffs, the plaintiffs filed a petition for attorney's fees. The court, asserting discretion under the Equal Access to Justice Act (EAJA), 28 U.S.C.A. § 2412(b), declined to make a specific fee award, indicating that the $2 million in damages was intended to include attorney's fees: "Plaintiffs' recovery [is] adequate to allow for the payment of attorneys' fees from that recovery, not to exceed the statutory limit of 25% of the Final Judgment."

[9] In Florida, a prevailing party in a medical malpractice suit is, by statute, entitled to attorney's fees. Fla.Stat.Ann. § 768.56. This Circuit, however, recently held that the Florida medical malpractice attorney's fee provision does not entitle prevailing parties to a fee award against the United States under either the Federal Torts Claims Act or under the Equal Access to Justice Act (EAJA). Joe v. United States, 772 F.2d 1535, 1536 (11th Cir.1985).

The Court in Joe found nothing in either the FTCA or the EAJA to indicate that courts should diverge from the " 'American rule' " which "refers to the tradition in the United States that litigants must bear their own attorney's fees." Id. at 1537. The district court, therefore, had no authority to separately award attorney's fees against the United States and should not have included in its damage judgment any amount "for the payment of attorney's fees." Thus, the denial of a separate judgment for fees is affirmed. Although we have already reviewed the excessiveness of the damage award, it would in any event have to be reconsidered because the district court included in it an amount for attorney's fees.

VACATED and REMANDED.

KRAVITCH, Circuit Judge, specially concurring:

Although concurring in the result, I would admit in evidence the letter from Mr. Cole to Dr. Holzman as an admission against interest by the authorized agent of a party. Rule 801(D)(2)(D), Federal Rules of Evidence. The letter in question was written by one of plaintiff's counsel of record during the course and within the scope of his authority as counsel. The plaintiff contends that the Rule does not apply because the attorney had never, at that time, spoken to Mrs. Johnson. I see no merit to this argument.

The plaintiff also contends that the letter is privileged as being the work product of the lawyer. While the document in question was prepared by the lawyer in anticipation of litigation, I do not believe it to contain privileged information, nor was it a work product as contemplated by the Rules.

Court of Appeal of Louisiana, Third Circuit.

Anthony FREDERICK, et al., Plaintiffs-Appellants,
v.
WOMAN'S HOSPITAL OF ACADIANA, et al.,
Defendants-Appellants.

No. 93-187.
Nov. 3, 1993.

Parents brought medical malpractice action to recover for injuries sustained by their daughter prior to birth. The Fifteenth Judicial District Court, Parish of Lafayette, Don Aaron, J., entered judgment on jury verdict for attending physician and hospital, and parents appealed. The Court of Appeal, Saunders, J., held that: (1) cumulative expert testimony was properly admitted; (2) evidence supported finding of no negligence on part of attending physician; (3) trial court was justified in excluding videotape sought to be admitted by parents to establish bias of defense expert; and (4) improper reference to collateral source benefits did not necessitate mistrial or new trial.

Affirmed.

*469 Lawrence N. Curtis, Lafayette, for Anthony Frederick etc.

Donald S. Zuber, Baton Rouge, for Woman's Hosp. of Acadiana, et al.

Marc W. Judice, Lafayette, for Michael Boos, M.D.

Before STOKER, DOUCET and SAUNDERS, JJ.

SAUNDERS, Judge.

This medical malpractice action was brought by plaintiffs-appellants, Anthony and Sherie Frederick, to recover damages for devastating personal injuries suffered by their minor daughter, Adrien Rene, prior to birth. The remaining defendants were Dr. Michael Boos, the obstetrician-gynecologist who attended Mrs. Frederick and delivered the child, and Women's and Children's Hospital, where the child was born.

Plaintiffs' claims were tried before a jury which returned a verdict absolving defendants of any liability for plaintiffs' damages. From that verdict and the district court's judgment in accordance therewith, plaintiffs perfected this timely devolutive appeal. For the reasons which follow, we affirm the conclusions reached by the lower court.

FACTS

The mother, Sherie Frederick, was originally a patient of two codefendant physicians, since dismissed, for her pregnancy with Adrien Rene Frederick. Sometime in the evening of December 20, 1985, the evening before she presented herself to the hospital, Mrs. Frederick noted some minor leakage of fluid. Evidently her water bag had burst. One day or more prior to that time, she had noted some unusual movement of her unborn child. Due to the leakage the evening before, Mrs. Frederick presented herself to the Women's and Children's Hospital at about 10:00 a.m. on December 21, 1985. Dr. Michael Boos was on call and attended Mrs. Frederick for her original physicians. After admitting Mrs. Frederick, her principal nurse applied an external fetal monitor to monitor the child's heartbeat. Mrs. Frederick was then moved to the labor and delivery area for observation. Dr. Boos first examined her approximately one half hour after her arrival at the hospital and followed up with additional testing twice over the next hour. With no progression in the pregnancy apparent, he ruptured Mrs. Frederick's membranes and noted thick meconium and amniotic fluid, then applied a scalp electrode *470 to the fetus, which showed an unfavorable beat to beat variability in the child's heartbeats. A routine Caesarian Section was decided upon rather than an emergency or "crash" one.

The baby, Adrien Rene Frederick, delivered at approximately 3:30 p.m. December 21, 1985, developed seizures and was diagnosed as having suffered from severe fetal maternal transfusion. The resultant transfusion of blood into the mother depleted the ability of Adrien's blood to carry oxygen to her brain, causing seizures and profound brain injuries.

ISSUES RAISED

Plaintiffs-appellants assign as principal error the trial judge's refusal in this case to limit cumulative expert testimony. They also assign as reversible error the trial judge's refusal to permit plaintiffs to admit into evidence a video tape of one of the defense witnesses teaching a course to claims adjusters and his failure to declare a mistrial after one of the defendants alluded to collateral source benefits available to plaintiffs. Finally, plaintiffs argue that the jury erred in finding no negligence on the part of defendants and in failing to award damages.

For their parts, defendants counter that the trial judge did not abuse his considerable discretion in his evidentiary rulings and, citing Rosell v. ESCO, 549 So.2d 840 (La.1989) and related authority, that neither judge nor jury committed manifest error in their factual determinations that young Adrien Rene's injuries arose independent of any negligence on the part of defendants.

CUMULATIVE TESTIMONY

The principal issue raised in this appeal revolves around the new Code of Evidence, specifically the application of articles 403 and 702, and the proper level of appellate review required of courts of appeal in cases where the trial judge does not make known the basis upon which he or she allows one party to introduce into evidence, over the objections of opposing counsel, the testimony of a significant number of expert witnesses as to one or more identical elements of the case.

We are, thus, asked to determine the point at which a parade of expert witnesses called by one party becomes counterproductive to the necessary twin goals of fairness and judicial economy. Such an inquiry necessarily leads to consideration of the Code of Evidence.

[1] When to exclude expert testimony in a civil context on grounds of cumulation is apparently res nova among reported cases, at least since the Code of Evidence became effective January 1, 1989, pursuant to § 12 of Acts 1988, No. 515. The trial court did not articulate the precise basis for its conclusion permitting multiple experts to testify as to the standard of care practiced by physician Boos. Therefore, we are unable to offer the usual deference attributed to such findings. Bloxom v. Bloxom, 512 So.2d 839, 843 (La.1987); Thompson v. Petrounited Terminals, Inc., 536 So.2d 504 (La.App. 1st Cir.1988), writs denied, 537 So.2d 212, 213 (La.1989).

The facts peculiar to the case sub judice provide us with an opportunity to address several criteria among many that may be considered in determining whether to permit multiple expert testimony as to an element of the case. At the outset, except to give it more tone and broaden its fourth inquiry to take into account practical considerations of judicial administration, we generally adopt our brethren's pronouncement on the subject concerning the intrinsic value of expert testimony found in Adams v. Chevron U.S.A., Inc., 589 So.2d 1219, 1223 (La.App. 4th Cir.1991), writs denied, 592 So.2d 414, 415 (La.1992):

> "The United States Fifth Circuit Court of Appeal has recently interpreted F.R.E. 403, after which the Louisiana rules on expert testimony are patterned. Christophersen v. Allied-Signal Corp., 939 F.2d 1106 (5th Cir.1991). The court delineated the following four inquiries for determining the admissibility of expert testimony: (1) whether the witness is qualified to express an expert opinion, (2) whether the facts upon which the expert relies are the same type as are relied upon by other experts in the field, (3) whether in reaching his conclusion the expert used well-founded methodology, and (4) assuming the expert's testimony 471 passes these tests, whether the testimony's potential for unfair prejudice substantially outweighs its probative value under the relevant rules. Id. We adopt those standards as appropriate for evaluating the admissibility of expert testimony under Louisiana law."

[2] Plaintiffs having apparently conceded the first three Adams inquiries, our focus here is limited by appellants' assignments of error to the fourth Adams inquiry, which must be broadened in the present context to concern the cumulative nature of the expert testimony to which plaintiffs direct their objection. Article 403 of the Code of Evidence requires balancing the testimony's probative value against not only unfair prejudice, see Adams, supra, but against "considerations of undue delay or waste of time" as well.

The specific provisions of the Code of Evidence of primary concern here read as follows:

Art. 403. Exclusion of relevant evidence on grounds of prejudice, confusion, or waste of time

Although relevant, evidence may be excluded if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, confusion of the issues, or misleading the jury, or by considerations of undue delay, or waste of time.

Art. 702. Testimony by experts

If scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge will assist the trier of fact to understand the evidence or to determine a fact in issue, a witness qualified as an expert by knowledge, skill, experience, training, or education, may testify thereto in the form of an opinion or otherwise.

[3] Admitting cumulative expert testimony not excludable on other grounds requires its fulfilling three conditions. The first condition questions the relevance of the testimony to be elicited. The second seeks to ascertain that the fact finder will be aided by the testimony. The third, balancing the probative value of this testimony against substantial prejudice, confusion, or inefficiency, guards against undue removal of reason from the fact finding process, as well as waste. Want of any of the three is fatal to admission of an expert's unbridled testimony.

[4] The first condition imposes only a minimal threshold since all relevant evidence is admissible in Louisiana except as otherwise provided by specific constitutional or legislative pronouncements, including the Code of Evidence. LSA-C.E. art. 402.

LSA-C.E. art. 401 reads as follows:

Art. 401. Definition of "relevant evidence"

"Relevant evidence" means evidence having any tendency to make the existence of any fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action more probable or less probable than it would be without the evidence.

[5] The second condition applies only to expert testimony. Grounded in LSA-C.E. art. 702, it concerns whether the specialized knowledge elicited from the expert will assist the trier of fact to understand the evidence or to determine a fact in issue. The need to comply with this condition represents a significant departure from the law prior to enactment of the Code of Evidence, insofar as previously the inquiry was limited only to asking whether the evidence offered by the expert was "obtained only by means of special training or experience," not whether it would be of actual benefit to the fact finder. See LSA-C.E. art. 702, Comment (a) and 3 J. Weinstein and M. Berger, Weinstein's Evidence ¶ 702[02] (1981), which it cites. See also, e.g., Hunnicutt v. Kent, 434 So.2d 91, 94 (La.App. 5th Cir.1982), writ denied, 435 So.2d 442 (La.1983).

[6] The third condition, mandated by LSA-C.E. art. 403, is applicable to all evidence, fact or expert, and permits exclusion of evidence whose probative value is substantially outweighed by certain dangers that threaten the validity of fact finding or by considerations of judicial economy. It assumes, in fact requires, that the examined evidence is relevant and probative. Judicial administration concerns aside, the chief purpose of this condition is to ensure that the evidence does not deny the fact finder the ability to reach a conclusion based on rational grounds.

*472 This is not merely of academic or hypothetical concern. Article 1, § 22, of the Louisiana Constitution guarantees every citizen, plaintiff or defendant, an adequate remedy by due process of law, administered without partiality or delay. Improperly applied, the Code of Evidence and its interpretive jurisprudence could conspire to undermine both the Louisiana Constitution and the very purposes for the Code's enactment, "to secure fairness and efficiency in administration of the law of evidence to the end that the truth may be ascertained and proceedings justly determined." LSA-C.E. art. 102. For most citizens, the only day in court of consequence is the one spent at the trial court level because:

> "It is well settled that a court of appeal may not set aside a trial court's or a jury's finding of fact in the absence of 'manifest error' or unless it is 'clearly wrong,' and where there is conflict in the testimony, reasonable evaluations of credibility and reasonable inferences of fact should not be disturbed upon review, even though the appellate court may feel that its own evaluations and inferences are as reasonable."

Rosell, supra, 549 So.2d at 844, and cites therein contained. "The reason for this well-settled principle of review is based not only upon the trial court's better capacity to evaluate live witnesses (as compared with the appellate court's access only to a cold record), but also upon the proper allocation of trial and appellate functions between the respective courts." Canter v. Koehring Company, 283 So.2d 716, 724 (La.1973).

Discretion Limited

[7] Essentially the same concerns articulated for giving latitude to trial judges in their factual findings justify leaving largely to their discretion the admission of cumulative evidence, Gormley v. Grand Lodge of State of Louisiana, 503 So.2d 181 (La.App. 4th Cir.), writ denied, 506 So.2d 1227 (La.1987); Varnell v. Service Merchandise Co., Inc., 613 So.2d 1042, 1044 (La.App. 3d Cir.1993), and in giving them "great discretion" in deciding which witnesses are qualified as experts, the breadth and scope of expert testimony, and the probative value of expert testimony, Armstrong v. Lorino, 580 So.2d 528, 531 (La.App. 4th Cir.), writ denied, 584 So.2d 1166 (La.1991); Comment (d), LSA-C.E. art. 702 and Weinstein and Berger, supra, ¶ 702 [02] (1981); 1 id. ¶ 104[03] (1982). (Broad, though not boundless, discretion is accorded the trial judge in his determinations as to whether expert testimony will be admissible.)

[8] While trial courts are given wide latitude, however, the Constitution of Louisiana does not permit appellate tribunals to abdicate their responsibilities in reviewing all findings of the lower courts as to either fact or law. To the contrary, the Constitution of 1974 provides in Article 5, § 10(B):

> "(B) Scope of Review. Except as limited to questions of law by this constitution, or as provided by law in the review of administrative agency determinations, appellate jurisdiction of a court of appeal extends to law and facts."

As a consequence, the jurisprudential rule of practice that a trial court's factual findings will not be upset absent manifest error is predicated upon there being evidence before the trier of fact which furnishes a reasonable factual basis for the trial court's finding. Arceneaux v. Domingue, 365 So.2d 1330, 1333 (La.1978); in accord, Rosell, supra; Canter, supra. The Code of Evidence provides trial courts with the evidentiary rules of the road and deserves especial care in its application, if for no other reason than denial of a litigant's evidentiary rights removes the foundation upon which the deference called for in Rosell, Arceneaux, Canter, Armstrong, Gormley and Varnell, supra, rests and can be grounds for reversal.

[9] Applying these precepts to the present facts, we find no basis for finding that the trial judge abused his great discretion in admitting the cumulative expert testimony. Defendants offered the sworn testimony of two pediatric neurologists, physicians who specialize in treating medical diseases of children's nervous systems. The two attended different medical schools; one is now principally a hospital administrator, the other a private practitioner. The trial judge therefore was correct in permitting each to testify, as each one's testimony added dimensional *473 perspective to the testimony of the other, and the testimony was offered in behalf of different parties who could conceivably prove adverse to one another.

Similarly, the trial judge did not abuse his much discretion in permitting the testimony of three obstetrician-gynecologists in addition to the opinion of the Medical Review Panel. Each differed in background and speciality. One graduated from LSU medical school, is chief of OB/GYN at a Dallas hospital and specializes in fetal-maternal medicine, which includes caring for the mother and fetus in high risk pregnancies (i.e., those most likely to have complications). Another attended the University of Tennessee Medical School, is board certified in OB/GYN, surgery, and perinatology, and is an academic at the University of Mississippi Medical Center. This expert has followed closely the development of babies like Adrien after birth and can claim credit for a number of awards and published articles. The third OB/GYN called by defendants trained at the University of Oregon, chaired the Department of OB/GYN at Tulane Medical Center, co-authored a handbook on obstetrics and gynecology published in 1992, and has performed years of antenatal diagnosis and treatment of birth defects, in addition to contributing to two books and several articles pertaining to this subject.

Nor can we say that the probative value of the expert testimony provided by defendants was outweighed, let alone substantially outweighed, by any of the concerns articulated in LSA-C.E. art. 403 . Plaintiffs were free to and did cross-examine opposing witnesses and present expert testimony supporting their case. Indeed, a greater danger to these proceedings could have arisen had the trial court denied defendants the ability to adduce the limited volume of expert testimony allowed in this case.

[10] Neither we nor the legislature can issue broad guidelines for applicability in every case. As a general rule, however, it would be safe to say that a party has a fundamental right to elicit the medical expert testimony of one witness on any point of significance to resolution of the issues presented and probably a second witness as well, for added perspective. As to whether a third or subsequent expert should be permitted, a number of factors appear pertinent, among them: the background and testimonial nature of the witnesses; whether the trier of fact is a jury or judge [FN1]; whether either of the parties litigant is a pauper whose lack of means would otherwise result in a lack of due process; the amount in controversy; the costs in time and money which would attend inclusion of the cumulative testimony; and the express willingness of the party seeking to elicit the testimony to bear the costs of the experts, regardless of the case's eventual outcome. Obviously, these considerations are most likely to arise when, as here, a party timely objects to another's introduction of cumulative testimony under LSA-C.E. art. 403.

> FN1. "Because in a bench trial the judge will often be able to evaluate the testimony of an expert without a significant risk of unfair prejudice, confusion of issues, etc., in applying this balancing test greater receptivity to expert testimony may properly be shown in a bench trial than in a jury case." Note 1, LSA-C.E. art. 702, citing Weinstein and Berger, supra, at ¶ 701[01], et seq.

Because such decisions necessarily must be made on a case by case basis, we attempt here to fashion neither a hard and fast rule on the subject, nor an exhaustive list of factors which the trial judge, whose broad discretion is unaffected by this decision, may draw upon. Nevertheless, parties are occasionally justified in their concern that a well-heeled party can obtain its version of justice at the trial court simply by retaining an arsenal of "hired guns" to prove its case, particularly in the context of a jury trial, then rest on the Canter-Arceneaux-Rosell line of defense. Protections against such a travesty can be found in the Code of Evidence. A party might seek to limit the number of experts permitted to testify in jury trials, LSA-C.E. art. 403, a difficult maneuver least likely to achieve the end sought. The concerned litigant may wish to have the trial judge instruct the jury that it is not the number of experts, but the relevance, credibility and probative value of their testimony which is of primary concern.

474 Another possibility would be to request under LSA-C.E. art. 706 that the trial court appoint an unbiased expert and disclose to the jury the expert's special court-appointed status. This underutilized provision enables litigants of modest means to have the court use its leverage to distinguish court-appointed neutral observers who are beyond reproach from "hired guns" retained by the highest bidder, reducing the perceived need and advantage of litigants to hire the most (and most expensive) experts to counter (or preempt) those that will (or might) be called by their opponents, thus offering parties to judicial proceedings greater assurance that findings of fact are indeed grounded on a reasonable factual basis.

MANIFEST ERROR

[11] Plaintiffs also complain that the triers of fact erred in finding no negligence on the part of defendants and in refusing to award damages to plaintiffs, but our thorough review of the voluminous transcript does not support these assertions. We cannot say that the triers of fact were clearly wrong in determining, consistent with the opinions expressed by several witnesses, that young Adrien would have been no better off had she been delivered immediately upon arrival at the hospital. Plaintiffs' expert, Dr. Shelburne, concluded that a majority of the injury to young Adrien could have been prevented and, further, that the baby would have been better off had she been delivered even a half hour sooner. His testimony, however, differs with Dr. Fleischmann's testimony that it would be difficult to tell whether delivery a half hour or more sooner would have made any difference. Even though both concluded that young Adrien would have been better off had she been delivered just two to four hours sooner, this testimony was refuted by that of other witnesses, including some who actually treated Adrien after birth, who testified that the unfortunate child sustained her injuries days, or even weeks before birth. According to both Dr. Burris and Dr. Chalub, the young baby suffered seizures as evidenced from twitching, stiffening, and changes in breathing several days prior to birth, making young Adrien's personal injuries inevitable upon birth, when the maternal life support of the fetus was severed. For this reason, according to Dr. Chalub, it would have made no difference whether Adrien was born at 9:00 a.m. or at 3:30 p.m. on the day Mrs. Frederick arrived at the hospital.

The trier of fact apparently was unconvinced that Dr. Boos was negligent for failing to pursue any of the options suggested by plaintiffs' expert, Dr. Chevernak, because it concluded that the young fetus was injured before birth. In addition, after hearing all of the evidence, the jurors apparently determined that the initial symptoms of mother and child called for the more cautious approach chosen by Dr. Boos and the other medical care providers. Another expert produced by plaintiff, neonatologist Dr. Fleischmann, concluded that the failure of Dr. Boos to assess the situation sooner by rupturing the membrane and taking fluid was a deviation from the standard of care. The probative value of Dr. Fleischmann's testimony, however, was foreshadowed by his admission that he had not delivered a baby since 1968 and was never an OB/GYN.

OTHER ASSIGNED ERRORS

Exclusion of Videotape

[12] Plaintiffs also complain of the trial judge's refusal to permit them to impeach defense expert, Dr. Morrison, by showing his bias. When plaintiffs sought to introduce isolated moments of his taped lectures to claims adjusters in 1984, defendants objected and expressed their concern that, unless the taped lectures were played in their entirety, Dr. Morrison's words might be misconstrued. The trial judge sustained defendants' objections and refused to permit playing several hours of tapes over plaintiffs' objection that the tapes would demonstrate Dr. Morrison's bias.

"The admissibility of a videotape is largely within the discretion of the trial judge. LaFleur v. John Deere Co., 491 So.2d 624, 632 (La.1986); United States Fidelity & Guaranty Co. v. Hi-Tower Concrete Pumping Service, 574 So.2d 424, 438 (La.App.2d Cir.), writs denied, 578 So.2d 136, 137 (La.1991); *475*Ashley v. Nissan Motor Corp.,* 321 So.2d 868, 872-873 (La.App. 1st Cir.), writ denied, 323 So.2d 478 (La.1975). Determination of the admissibility into evidence of videotapes must be done on a case-by-case basis depending on the individual facts and circumstances of each case. Douglas v. G.H.R. Energy Corp., 463 So.2d 5, 7 (La.App. 5th Cir.1984). The trial court must consider whether the videotape accurately depicts what it purports to represent, whether it tends to establish a fact of the proponent's case, and whether it will aid the jury's understanding. Against those factors, the trial court must consider whether the videotape will unfairly prejudice or mislead the jury, confuse the issues, or cause undue delay. The trial court may exclude the evidence if the factors favoring admission are substantially outweighed by the factors against admission. Louisiana Code of Evidence articles 401-403; Hi-Tower, 574 So.2d at 438; Burk v. Illinois Central Gulf Railroad Co., 529 So.2d 515 (La.App. 1st Cir.), writ denied, 532 So.2d 179 (La.1988)."

Malbrough v. Wallace, 594 So.2d 428, 431 (La.App. 1st Cir.1991), writ denied, 596 So.2d 196 (La.1992).

A careful review of the trial judge's reasons shows that he did not abuse his discretion. First, he concluded that the tape would take at least three hours for the jury to put it in the proper context, and this would be an undue waste of time. Second, even after reading the transcript several times, the trial judge concluded that the testimony, subject to different interpretations, might confuse the jury no matter how much videotape was played. Finally, the trial judge concluded that taken out of context, introduction of only excerpts from the taped lecture would result in unfair prejudice.

Collateral Source Benefits

[13] Finally, plaintiffs complain that the hospital's wrongful introduction of collateral source benefits is alone grounds for reversal.

"Under the 'collateral source' rule, a tort-feasor may not benefit, and an injured plaintiff's tort recovery may not be diminished, because of benefits received by the plaintiff from sources independent of the tort-feasor's procuration or contribution. This rule has been applied to hold that the plaintiffs' recovery cannot be diminished by amounts paid by Medicare. Womack v. Travelers Insurance Company, 258 So.2d 562 (La.App. 1st Cir.1972), writ denied, 261 La. 775, 260 So.2d 701 (1972); Weir v. Gasper, 459 So.2d 655 (La.App. 4th Cir.1984), writ denied 462 So.2d 650 (La.1985)."

Williamson v. St. Francis Medical Center, 559 So.2d 929, 934 (La.App.2d Cir.1990).

Our review of the transcript removes any question that the hospital did, in fact, seek to introduce such evidence during cross-examination of plaintiffs' expert, Dr. Shelburne:

"Q You mentioned that during the examination-I think you said there was a certain standardized or plug-in procedure for long-term care of children with Adrien's condition. I think you said it was something you just sort of plug in, and I'm trying to refresh your memory-

A I know what you're-I understand, and I think that's exactly what I said. There are certain needs that handicapped children with this degree of severity of problems have, and there's certain services that are generally utilized.

Q And in fact aren't these services generally provided by state and local and federal government-"

Immediately after the recited colloquy, plaintiffs objected and a bench conference was held outside the presence of the jury. Defendants argued briefly that the line of inquiry was admissible because the Disabilities Education Act of 1990, 20 U.S.C. Sections 1400 and 1409, requires assistance for education of all handicapped individuals, but then agreed to withdraw the question to avoid confusion. Plaintiffs asked for a mistrial or, alternatively, instructions to the jury that they disregard the previous exchange. The trial court acceded to the wishes of the parties with the following words to the jury:

"THE COURT: Please be seated. Ladies and Gentlemen of the Jury, the last *476 question that was asked by Mr. Zuber was a question in which he asked, "In fact, aren't these services generally provided by state and federal government?"

Mr. Zuber has agreed to withdraw his question at this time, so I want you to disregard the question entirely. You are not to consider the question nor speculate as to what the answer might have been if this witness was allowed to answer the question. Does everybody understand?

THE JURORS: [Indicate "yes"].

THE COURT: Okay."

The trial judge declined to grant plaintiffs' motion for a mistrial on two grounds:

"THE COURT: The court is going to deny the motion for a mistrial, finding that the mere question was asked, but there was no answer in response to the question before the jury was removed, and that the court has admonished the jury not to speculate as to the answer to the question; so I feel that the plaintiffs are not prejudiced as a result of the asking of the question, and particularly in view of the admonition given to the jury by the court, and I will deny your motion and note for the record your objection to the ruling of the court."

[14] We are unable to conclude that the trial judge erred in declining to order a new trial. The trial judge was in the best position to assess the prejudicial effect, if any, of the hospital's allusion to collateral benefits, and in the absence of clear abuse, the trial judge's sound discretion in denying a mistrial or new trial will not be disturbed on review, DeRosier v. South Louisiana Contractors, 583 So.2d 531, 538 (La.App. 3d Cir.), writ denied, 587 So.2d 700 (La.1991); Luquette v. Bouillion, 184 So.2d 766, 771 (La.App. 3d Cir.1966); Begnaud v. Texas & New Orleans Railroad Company, 136 So.2d 123, 129-130 (La.App. 3d Cir.1961), especially where, as here, there is "no actual evidence in the record" that might prejudice plaintiffs, Luquette, supra at 770, and the trial judge's error, if any, was harmless in light of all of the evidence presented.

CONCLUSION

In light of the foregoing, we affirm the judgment of the trial court and tax plaintiffs with the costs of these proceedings.

AFFIRMED.

cumulative evidence. It is not just that the evidence may be cumulative. It is that the -- whether the evidence is also needless.

The brief has attempted to show that the evidence is not cumulative. The brief goes through the fact that the experts' knowledge of the community standard is different; that they have different experience in laparoscopic cholecystectomies, particularly in comparison to the plaintiff's two expert witnesses, who have very little experience in those two subjects; that they have very little difference regarding the ability to visualize during one of these procedures. And this is important to the opinion regarding whether it was within the standard of practice to decide not to convert to an open procedure.

The experts have different opinions with respect to whether it is the, quote/unquote, standard of care that applies or the standard of health care practice or standard of practice, which are the -- which is the terminology used in 6-1012 and 6-1013. The experts have different opinions as to whether Dr. Ediger put a clip on the common bile duct and also with respect to the number of clips that were used, and this is very relevant in this case.

The experts have different opinions as to the risk of future problems for Mr. Yoonas. Indeed, Dr. Sheppard, who is a professor at Oregon Health Sciences University, says there's absolutely no risk for Mr. Yoonas.

And they also have differing experience as expert witnesses. Dr. Celli, for example, was procured by Mr. Yoonas through an expert witness service. Many of the defense experts have absolutely no experience as expert witnesses.

Your Honor, given the status of this case, given where we're at, given all of this information, the court should exercise its discretion here to wait until the time of trial, allow plaintiffs to make their case and then determine at that time if the testimony is cumulative.

There is no reason why Dr. Ediger should be penalized because there are a number of physicians who believe that he met the standard of health care practice and the plaintiffs could only find one who is willing to come into court and say that. It's not fair, Your Honor, and as long as that testimony is not needlessly cumulative and not a drag on the court's understandably limited resources in time, that should be permitted and this motion should be denied. Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. Stubbs.

Your response, Ms. Cunningham.

MS. CUNNINGHAM: Your Honor, I think this issue is likely to come up in jury selection and opening argument because as we talk about what we expect the evidence to show, you need to know whether or not there's going to be one witness or four or five. So that's the reason that I've made the motion pretrial.

I also think that given your order in this case about disclosure and the fact that the discovery deadline cutoff has passed, everyone's opinions have been fully disclosed. So you do have the information that you need in order to make this decision because what you have is the complete disclosures that we were given and, obviously, all the portions of the depositions that defense counsel thinks are relevant and show some distinctions between these. And I think that upon reviewing these, you can see that distinctions are minor.

Of course they're going to have performed a different number of laparoscopic cholecystectomies and of course they're all going to use slightly different words when they talk about it, but the bottom line is they all have very similar credentials and the same opinion and how many times do you need to put that opinion in front of the jury?

Very briefly, I don't think it's accurate to say that we have two expert witnesses who are going to testify about the same thing. Dr. Dayton is a treating physician who performed the surgery on Mr. Yoonas and he was disclosed as an expert in case there was going to be some kind of foundational problem or objection to his credentials. That was it. He wasn't asked about causation or anything else. He was asked about treating things. There is only one expert.

I think that it would have been nice if we had been able to have a hearing on this before the depositions were taken, and I attempted to do that, but we all have busy schedules and this was simply the earliest I could have that hearing held.

I kept the depositions to a minimum but was able to ascertain that everyone does have the same opinion. I think the bottom line is Rule 403 isn't specific as to when you can exercise your judgment and there is no real show... or good cause that we should wait and exercise that at trial after there has been additional time and everything expended in preparation for trial. The fact is, you have all the information that I have and all the information that should exist about the opinions of these doctors and I think that you should be able to tell whether or not the probative value outweighs the prejudicial effect.

Every piece of evidence has some probative value. I'm not saying that three of these doctors have nothing worthwhile to say. What I'm saying is how many times do you need to say the same thing.

Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Thank you, Ms. Cunningham.

Well, I'll say this. In ruling on the motion, I recognize the question, particularly under 403 rather than most areas of the rules that discretion of the trial court gets called into play, there is no doubt at a certain point the trial court has an ability to say enough is enough.

Taking the case completely out of the context of a medical malpractice case, if there was a case involving an automobile accident where on our 25th witness to say it was a clear and sunny day before getting ready to sit down and there was no dispute as to whether it was clear nor whether it was sunny, the court would undoubtedly probably long before the 25th witness start exercising its authority under 403, even though in general my view of the Rules of Evidence is that they are, for the most part, inclusive rather than exclusive of the admissibility of relevant evidence.

There's no question in my mind but that these proposed subjects of exclusion are relevant testimony to present. I cannot conclude that the presentation of four defense experts in this case would be needlessly cumulative. I do not think that it would necessarily result in unfair prejudice to the plaintiff in this action, which is the touchstone for exclusion. Not only does it have to be unfair prejudice, but there has to be a substantial danger that the unfair prejudice, which I'm having difficulty identifying, outweighs the probative value of the testimony.

As I view the testimony of these proposed experts, it goes to the heart of the litigation in this case, at least as to the question as to whether or not Dr. Ediger breached the appropriate standard of care. It ap... ...rs there's also spill-over questions as to future prognosis which may affect damages.

But under the circumstances, I do not think it's appropriate to exercise my discretion in the fashion requested by the plaintiff. The motion for exclusion or limitation of expert witnesses will be denied.

I have not addressed the motion to vacate trial. I know you wanted to hear that, Ms. Cunningham, here today. I just received before we came into court, an objection to the proposed hearing. Honestly, I was not inclined to hear the motion to vacate the trial today. I would prefer and I'll direct that you simply notice it for hearing at the time presently scheduled for our pretrial conference.

Just for the parties' benefit, having reviewed the motion, there is one area that causes me concern and that is, inasmuch as there's indications that discovery didn't get fired up until December, about seven months after I entered the order governing proceedings, I'm not much moved by that grounds in terms of the later disclosure of the identity of the defense experts in this case.

What is more problematic to me is Mr. Gustavsen's status. I think you'll find I'm a lot more solicitous of the attorneys perhaps in this sort of situation than anything else. I don't know and I will be expecting to see an explanation of just what Mr. Gustavsen's situation is, just why it is that he won't be available to participate in this litigation.

It is fair to say, in terms of your discussions between yourselves, if there is a good reason that Mr. Gustavsen, who is lead counsel in this case, if there is a good reason he can't participate in this litigation, I am likely to grant the request over the objection of Dr. Ediger, mindful of the defendant's need and legitimate interest in getting this case promptly tried. Any continuance would likely be relatively short, but I'll let you just fold that into the hopper for discussion. We can address the merits of that motion on the date scheduled for pretrial conference.

Is there anything further that we should address at this point from the plaintiff's perspective, Ms. Cunningham?

MS. CUNNINGHAM: No, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Now take up the case of Strandbakke versus Moreno. Mr. Kessinger is present on behalf of the Plaintiffs Strandbakke; Mr. Jones is present on behalf of Defendant Moreno. This is before the Court on Plaintiff's Motion to Limit Defendant's Expert Witnesses.

And I have had an opportunity to review materials that have been presented by the parties relative to this issue. And with that, Mr. Kessinger, would you like to present argument in support of the motion at this time?

MR. KESSINGER: I would. Thank you, your Honor.

May it please the Court, Counsel. As you know, this is a medical negligence case, you have indicated you have had a chance to review the motion, so I won't spend a lot of time re-hashing what it says. A couple preliminary matters I would like to clear up though.

The Defendant's reply has indicated that the Plaintiff has retained twenty-seven experts and there's some clarification in Plaintiff's reply brief, but I would like to touch on that. The Plaintiff has two medical experts that have been hired to present testimony at trial, and there's one medical expert that's been hired by the Plaintiff to testify to the standard of care has been violated. And I just wanted to make sure that was made clear with the Court.

The other twenty some medical providers that have been listed as witnesses were just that, they are medical providers. They are not people who have been hired specifically for purposes of litigation. They are fact witnesses who happen to have expert opinions.

And Defendant is aware that those treating doctors are treating doctors or fact witnesses. In fact, one of the attorneys for Defendant Jeremiah Quane, in fact, contacted one of those expert witnesses without objection from the Plaintiff. And that letter from Jeremiah Quane has been attached to Plaintiff's reply brief.

This motion has been brought before the Court because the Defendant has listed four witnesses with -- in their witness -- in their expert disclosure with similar, if not identical, opinions. This is a concern to Plaintiff. Plaintiff concedes that the experts may have different education and they may have different experiences; however, that doesn't merit listening to the same opinion three or four times over and over again by the jury and by the Court.

The Defendant in their response makes limitation of expert witnesses sound foreign. The Court clearly has the right to do that under the civil rules based on the Court's discretion.

I would also note just as an example that the US District Court of Eastern Washington has local rules that limit a party to two expert witnesses on any given issue. That's just a -- the Court limits them to two. They need the Court's approval -- the party needs the Court's approval to even have more than two experts on any given issue, and that's the local rule 43.1 in the US District Court of the Eastern District of Washington.

The other thing mentioned in Defendant's reply is that we are moving to limit these witnesses because there are two paragraphs that are the same in their witness disclosure. And I feel I need to point out that the opinions aren't the same just on two paragraphs. The first -- the first three witnesses after Dr. Moreno who are listed in the disclosure are all vascular surgeons. There's Dr. Tullis, Dr. Murray and Dr. Olcott. Dr. Olcott's actually a professor of vascular surgery.

But their disclosures are the same, virtually identical. And Dr. Montalbano who is the fourth expert listed after Dr. Moreno, he does have one page of unique information, but the other ten pages of his opinion is just like the first three vascular surgeons.

So we have got four people saying virtually the same thing. Dr. Montalbano, I will concede, that he does have a little bit of different opinion information listed in that disclosure. Then the different information that I found was last paragraph of page 79, the last paragraph of page 87, and the first paragraph of page 89 do not appear to be in the disclosures of the other vascular surgeons; but other than that, all of Dr. Montalbano's opinion disclosures are the same. And I would -- I have gone through and I have -- I have tabbed the identical paragraphs with the identical information and I would be happy to go through that for the Court, and I doubt you want me to go through a hundred pages though. But that information, Dr. Tullis, Dr. Murray and Dr. Olcott, paragraph for paragraph have the same disclosure.

And if I were to start reading this, for instance, and to say paragraph 1 under Dr. Tullis reads XYZ, and then go to the next doctor and read his, my guess is you would probably cut me off and I would expect you to because I would be reading the exact same thing over and over again. And that's the concern that we have with the jury is that they are going to be hearing the exact same thing based on this disclosure over and over again with no variation. Literally no variation in the first three experts, those three vascular surgeons.

The testimony that they are proposing is cumulative. Once you have heard it one time, I don't see any reason to hear it again. The Defendants talk about needless reputation whether it's needlessly cumulative, once the jury's heard it, anything after that is cumulative and I -- when it's the exact same thing, I don't see any reason why that should be repeated.

Allowing the Defendants to march in four witnesses with identical opinions flies in the face of the rules of evidence and the rules of procedure. It's contrary to Rule of Procedure 1A, it's not speedy, it's not inexpensive to have these people come in and testify, to have the jury and the Court have to spend two days perhaps sitting through expert testimony that's repetitive.

I don't need to remind the Court, I'm sure that the Defendant will mostly likely testify as an expert on his own behalf that he didn't violate the standard of care. And so that all of his testimony will be on top of Defendant's testimony.

And we -- Plaintiff concedes that the first expert witness, whomever it might be that Defendant calls, that they will have probative value and they certainly should be allowed to call their expert, but they shouldn't be allowed to march in three more witnesses saying the same thing. It will confuse the issue and it will turn into a battle of the experts for the jury, and that's not the purpose of the trial. They are here to listen to the case and to try it on its merits. The repetition and accumulation of identical testimony would just fly in the face of that, and it would unduly delay these proceedings, and it's just -- it's a needless repetition. There is just -- there's -- based on the exact same disclosure, there's no reason to listen to these people over and over again.

We are not asking for exclusion of any specific witness. It doesn't matter to us who they pick. They should pick their best qualified expert witness, what we are asking for is that they can't bring them all in one after the other to say the same thing.

The Defendants should be limited to one expert to testify about the standard of care and one expert to testify about whether that was violated. Between the treating doctor and the expert, that will give them two witnesses who are testifying presumably that Defendant did not violate the standard of care. So we would move the Court to limit the witnesses pursuant to that motion.

Thank you, your Honor.

THE COURT: Alright, thank you. Mr. Jones.

MR. JONES: Thank you, your Honor.

Essentially what I'm hearing from the Plaintiffs is the pot calling the kettle black. Plaintiffs have, in my opinion, played games in their documentation that they have submitted and have maintained inconsistent positions for purpose of trying to gain a technical or strategical advantage. Essentially they are saying although they listed six standards of practice witnesses in their disclosure back in December when they were due by the Court's scheduling order, that now they really only mean to call two. They haven't withdrawn the others, but despite that fact, they seek to have the Defendant penalized because the Defendant went out of its way to provide an extremely detailed lengthy and thorough expert witness disclosure covering the facts, the opinions and the substance of the opinions for the experts on the various topics that they may offer testimony at trial. That's an operative word, "may," because there are various experts, they each have their own area of expertise as respects to the issues in this case, and so the fact that there are similarities between their lengthy disclosures does not mean they will all get up here and read their disclosures to the jury.

In fact, quite the contrary. This will be a fascinating trial for the jury up here and for the Court. In fact, I dare say, it will be one of the most fascinating trials that have gone on up here in a while. The jury will love the medicine in this case, and we have gone out of our way to try to find very well qualified and pertinent expert witnesses to bring up here and present to this Court and to this jury.

Now, I think it's worth pointing out that if the Plaintiffs are going to complain that the Defense disclosures are similar, then perhaps we should read the Plaintiff's disclosure which I submitted as an attachment as Exhibit letter C. If you look up what they have for all of their expert witnesses except for Dr. Johansen, it's identical, word for word identical.

And they have several statements about Dr. Thorne, for example, may testify concerning the local standard of care as it relates to this claim. They say the same thing for Dr. Stolanoff or Dr. Spencer or Dr. Moreno, my client, or Dr. Hedrick. Why is it okay for them to say the same thing with respect to the standard of practice and they don't even flesh out their opinions, they just claim they are going to talk about those topics. I go out of my way and provide extreme detail, and all of a sudden I'm cumulative and repetitious and therefore I should be limited, but it's okay for the Plaintiffs. They can violate the Court rules by not giving a detailed disclosure, and I'm the one that's subject to being limited. That doesn't make sense to me.

Now, the facts in this case are complicated medically. The bottom line is did my client violate the standard of practice, but it's a long road between the beginning and the end with respect to the medical issues in this case.

We will offer testimony from our experts that will vary with respect to their opinions on whether or not the inferior mesenteric artery should have been ligated, whether or not it should have been left where it was, and all the supporting data that goes in favor and against. We will offer varying opinions from our expert as to whether or not the perfusion of the colon needed to be checked by pulse Doppler, by visual inspection or by touch which will vary amongst the various expert witnesses that we have.

We will offer varying opinions with respect to the issue of causation and whether or not it was a cord infarct due to lack of blood supply from one of the spinal arteries that was ligated as a matter of course when the aorta is severed for purposes of performing the bypass. We have causation theories on whether or not the artery of Adamkiewicz which was located in a different anatomical position with respect to this patient.

We have causation theories dealing with whether or not it was an episode of thrombus or a clot that caused this spinal cord infarct with respect to this patient, and all of our expert will testify differently on these issues and they will not be needlessly repetitious.

Now, today is an important day in this case not just because we were here but because it's June 8, and actually it plays well that we are here on the 8th and not the 5th. Today is the discovery cutoff in this case. As a result of that, this matter is no longer subject to being resolved by Rule 16(d). This matter is now subject solely to Rule 403 because discovery is closed, Rule 16(d) in the Defense's opinion does not apply for purposes of limiting the Defense experts.

Plaintiff's counsel has never asked to take any depositions of the Defense experts in this case. As a result and the fact that discovery will be closed in about three and a half hours, that issue is now off the table. So the only grounds upon which to address this motion from the Defense prospective is Rule 403. The arguments that have been advanced thus far by Plaintiff's counsel address solely the issue of whether testimony is cumulative, whereas Rule 403 specifically says "needlessly cumulative."

An example is where you line up twelve witnesses and they all come in and say the light was green. By the time you get to the sixth one, you don't need the seventh one to know that they are going to say the light was green. That's not the case in a medical malpractice case.

The issue that was raised by Plaintiff's counsel about a battle of experts and how that's a bad thing, well, that may be a bad thing in some people's opinions, but when the Idaho Legislature passed Idaho Code Section 6-1012, that's what they established. Medical malpractice cases are a battle of experts. Plaintiff has the ability to hire as many experts witnesses as they want. In fact, I dare say if they had hired four experts and we had eight, they would be here today saying we should only have four.

I find it odd and somewhat unfair that it's up to the plaintiffs to dictate how many expert witnesses the Defense should be allowed to utilize. They are seeking millions of dollars in this case, and they are hoping that they can convince this Court to screw the Defense, to limit the number of expert witnesses the Defendant can have in hopes that they can gain a tactical advantage in what will be a very medically complicated trial.

Now, it's our contention that based on our disclosures, based on the information contained within our brief, that there has not been a showing that the testimony of these four witnesses will be needlessly cumulative. And I think there are some ways that we can analyze this, and I tried to lay some of that out in my brief. One is just the sheer numbers. Plaintiffs listed twenty-seven, we have listed fourteen. They challenge four of ours.

Now, if you look at their disclosure, they show six standard of practice witnesses. Plaintiffs counsel has concluded his opening argument and has not withdrawn any of those experts. So by sheer numbers alone, they exceed us. I think it's disingenuous to take the position that well, only two of those are retained experts. That is not part of their disclosure. Their disclosure says "standard of practice."

I also think it's disingenuous for them to say that they didn't go out and try to contact all the general surgeons in the community in order to somehow deter the Defendant from being able to utilize local experts. And they point to the fact that, well, we let you contact Dr. Thorne. Well, Dr. Thorne's not going to be too happy with the Plaintiff's counsel, because when we did talk to him, since we listed him as someone who could talk about the local standard of practice, he said he was surprised to hear that the Plaintiff's counsel had listed him as an expert witness because he's never talked to the Plaintiff's counsel, knows nothing about the case and is furious that he would be listed by the Plaintiffs without ever being consulted. I think that goes to the evidence that we intend to show at trial that they are trying to make it more difficult for the Defense to be able to prove their case by contacting no one and listing all these people.

Another problem that I have with where this is going is we complied. We put all the materials down in good faith and on time. On our disclosure deadline of the 23rd of February, we put all the information possible down. If you compare that with the Plaintiff's disclosure, we got another disclosure from the Plaintiffs yesterday regarding their experts listing new opinions that have never been heretofore laid out. So I find it very surprising that the Plaintiffs can take the position that we should be limited when we have complied with the rules. They have not.

Now, with respect to the numbers. The fact that we have listed these four expert witnesses, I want to talk about them briefly for a moment because this issue of limiting the defense is just outrageously important to us as the Court can understand. Dr. Murray was contacted by my client during the treatment of this particular patient. His name appears in the medical records, it's our contention that Dr. Murray is the equivalent of a treating health care provider in this case. If the Plaintiffs are going to take the position that all these other doctors they listed are just treaters so they don't count, then neither should Dr. Murray regardless of the fact that he may offer standard of practice opinions, as will the standard of practice treaters they have listed. So he doesn't even count in this equation.

They have also listed a Dr. McBride and a Dr. Stolanoff which in their latest reply brief, they admit are not treaters. Regardless of whether or not they have retained them, they have listed them as experts who will testify in the standard of practice. They haven't withdrawn them. So add up the numbers, McBride, Stolanoff, Johansen. They have three. The Defense has Tullis, Olcott and Montalbano which is a different subspecialty. We have three. It doesn't matter how you add it up, there's either equality or the plaintiffs have an excessive number of standard of practice experts than the Defense.

Now, in my brief for the Court, I tried to outline in addition to the fact that Dr. Murray has his own area of specialty and unique testimony that he offers, he gets patients from this area. When there are trouble cases that leave the Lewiston Valley, they go up to Lewiston. That's one reason why his testimony is so important.

With respect to Dr. Olcott, Plaintiff's counsel has listed this Dr. Johansen who is a big gun coming in from Seattle where he works at a teaching institution there. It's only fair that we should have an academic expert which is why we have listed Dr. Olcott. He's somebody that will come in and talk about the training aspects and how on an academic parity level our client did not make any mistakes in this case as Dr. Johansen and their academic expert is going to contend.

Those two experts come down to the weight of their CVs, which one of them's more impressive. If we are limited on not being able to call Olcott, all of a sudden we don't have an academic expert and in the eyes of the jury, they may view Plaintiff's expert as far superior. The fact that we have listed one, we should be allowed to call that person. He will offer his own testimony that will not be needlessly cumulative. That's two of the three.

With respect to Dr. Tullis, he's our only Idaho guy. The issue is was the local standard of practice violated. That's what 6-1012 says. That's why we have Dr. Tullis who -- although he's not from Lewiston, he is at least an Idaho vascular surgeon who will be able to offer testimony on how things are done in Idaho. And he has worked outside of the Boise area. That's why we have those three experts listed.

Now, the fourth, Paul Montalbano, since he is a neurosurgeon, he's in a totally different subspecialty. His opinions are going to focus mainly on the issues associated with the blood supply to the spinal cord, the pre-operative imaging studies and whether or not there were any red flags in there that would have suggested that the excessive collateralization of the vasculature that this patient had would have suggested she was likely to suffer a spinal cord infarct during an aortal bi-femoral bypass procedure. That's one of the reasons why we seek to have this particular witness called. I can only presume the Plaintiff seek to have him excluded because they didn't chose to list a neurosurgeon. We did. They had the first shot at it. If they wanted a neurosurgeon, they could have listed one.

Now, with respect to the 403 analysis, it's the Defense contention that at this juncture it cannot be determined fairly as to whether or not the testimony from these witnesses will amount to a needlessly cumulative presentation of evidence. Until the witnesses testify, this Court is well suited at the time of trial to put the brakes on any testimony it deems to be needlessly cumulative. That determination cannot be made at this juncture. For those reasons, we feel that it's premature to be addressing the issue under 403. The Plaintiff's witnesses have not testified, the issues have not been laid out for the Defense to then address in its case in chief. Until that time has come to pass, it's unfair from the Defense prospective for this issue to be brought to the surface.

Now, there is another issue that is not in my briefing that I think also bears fruit on this. The Defense is listed a number of expert witnesses. Let's say at the time of trial if the Defense is limited to one at this particular point in time, my expert fails to qualify, or my expert is severely impeached at trial such that his credibility is worthless. I have listed four, but if I'm limited now, my client's ability to mount a significant and adequate defense to these allegations is diminished and destroyed because prematurely in advance of trial, things may happen ultimately that I can't predict that may impair one of my witness' presentations at trial. For that reason alone, I should not be limited.

Also the fact that each one of these experts is testifying as to what the standard of practice is for different reasons, as the case authorities that I presented to the Court in my brief outline, it's good to have more than one. One gives weight and dimension to the testimony of the last one to the issues that are being presented. Now, there's a line there , we acknowledge and concede that fact, but that line is drawn at the time of trial. That line is not drawn now.

Nothing under Idaho Code 6-1012 limits the number of witnesses that the Defense can call, and there hasn't been any case authorities that have been presented by the Plaintiffs which say in a medical malpractice case after the close of discovery that the Defense should be limited based on what their expert witness disclosure says or based on the number of witnesses that they have.

We provided this Court with a detailed disclosure, Plaintiffs put it in the record, the Court has a copy of it, we think we have played by the rules, we think we have been fair, we think that this motion is unfair to the Defense for all the reasons we have stated and we ask that it would be denied. Thank you.

THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. Jones.

Mr. Kessinger, any rebuttal?

MR. KESSINGER: Thank you, your Honor. We have heard a lot of talk about equality and inequity and unfairness and I would invite Defense Counsel right now to stipulate to one expert on each issue on the record if that's what he's looking for, that kind of fairness, that kind equality. Counsel, any interest?

MR. JONES: Finish your argument, Counsel.

MR. KESSINGER: Defense Counsel has indicated that Plaintiffs have been engaging in game playing, hiding the ball, that hasn't happened, your Honor. As you know, these cases are complex and there's a lot going on at the same time. Plaintiff feels that the disclosure rules were met with his disclosures, adequate explanation has been given for the number of witnesses who were disclosed as experts, and that is that they were treating people -- treating doctors, they have expert opinions, they are fact witnesses with expert opinions.

Defense has just spent a lot of time explaining how each of these medical experts have different expertise and how their opinions are going to be different. Defense spent approximately 18 pages per expert explaining their opinions. And in those 18 pages, there's no differences except for education and their experience at different facilities. I don't think that's the kind of differences that make their testimony noncumulative. And I don't think the jury -- I don't think it's going to be helpful for the jury to know that one was -- one was educated in Kentucky and the other was educated in Indiana. I don't think that makes any difference in the case. And those -- those, as it turns out, are the only differences that Defense can point out in the first three witnesses, that being -- that being Tullis, Murray, Olcott. And then Montalbano, we conceded he does have one page of unique information out of the 11-page opinion disclosure. So he does -- he does perhaps have some unique information.

And, again, we are not requesting that these people not be allowed to testify, what we are requesting is that they can't come in here and testify about the same thing over and over again, and that's what the disclosure tells us they are going to do. And Defense would like to work around that now and say, well, they are not going to say the same thing, that's quite convenient to come in here today and say they are not going to say the same thing, but the disclosure's here, it's in the record.

I hope he's right about it being a fascinating trial, the jury would probably like that.

I would disagree with Counsel's assessment of the rules as far as discovery being closed, these don't apply any more. Even if that were the case, this hearing, we attempted to have it earlier, it didn't work out. The Court clearly has a discretion to limit the number of witnesses in this case and Plaintiff believes that's appropriate.

The new disclosure, in fact we did supplement disclosure precisely because of Defendant's complaint listed in his brief. We did supplement our disclosure of Kaj Johansen, and that was in an effort to be fair to Defense. He had made some complaints in his brief, so we gave him all the information we had about that opinion in an effort to appease him.

Counsel's talked about Dr. Murray being the equivalent of a treater. We don't have any objection to Dr. Murray coming in and testifying this is what happened, this is what we talked about. But rendering -- rendering opinions on the ultimate issue would be -- would be outside the realm of what we would expect from him if he's just coming in and testifying as someone who maybe perhaps participated in that treatment. If he wants to come in and say, yeah, the doctor contacted me and we discussed XY and Z, we wouldn't be opposed to that. But coming in and rendering on opinion on the ultimate issue of whether the standard of care was violated, we would have a problem with that.

They are welcomed to call Dr. Olcott, they can call whichever expert they want, it's the repetition that is clearly outlined in this disclosure over and over and over again. Counsel has mentioned that Tullis is the only Idaho guy. Olcott can familiarize himself with the standard of care through Tullis if needs be.

He talked about the concern that maybe his experts will fail to qualify, maybe their credibility will be compromised, those are risks we all run with all our experts. That's the way that this process works is that experts are going to be exposed to some cross examination and sometimes that hurts the witness' opinion.

At the very least, at the very least we would ask that the Court limit Defendant's experts similar to what we see in the Federal Rules, and that being two experts on a single issue. They have already got the treater who is going to testify regarding these issues. He is an expert. He's going to carry a lot of weight with the jury in and of himself. At most we would ask that the Court allow them two witnesses for each issue which is in line with other jurisdictions, is in no way contrary to the case law that Defendants side of -- Defendants case law stands for the proposition that the court can limit witnesses at its discretion so long as the court goes through the correct process and follows the rule. A number of those -- at least two of those cases were remanded with the appellate court saying, yeah, you can limit the witness, just make sure you tell us why. And that's what we are asking that the Court does.

It's unfair to the Plaintiff, you know, there's been lot of talk of unfairness, it's unfair to the Plaintiff to march in four people in a row saying the exact same thing. And so we would renew our request that the Court limit the number of witnesses Defense can call.

THE COURT: Thank you, Mr. Kessinger.

Well, thank you both for your presentations and your written materials to the Court, I found both helpful.

This, of course, is governed in my analysis for purposes of this afternoon is following Idaho Rule of Evidence 403 where it talks about the Court can exclude relevant evidence for differing reasons. And clearly all the evidence that's been discussed through these witnesses would be relevant evidence to this case, I think that's clear.

I did have an opportunity obviously, and I would refer specifically to Defendant's memorandum on pages 21 and 22, where it's described what the four positions, backgrounds are and their areas of expertise and what they would expect their testimony to be, so they are all relative -- I'm sorry, relevant and there would certainly be probative value from those experts.

The rule goes on to give the Court discretion to exclude that evidence for various reasons. And one of those, and maybe the most important of which, is whether that evidence would be cumulative in this particular case. And first of all, I think the four expert witnesses that have been discussed from my review of the information relative to those witnesses, I can't conclude at this time that that would be a needless presentation of cumulative evidence.

Mr. Kessinger, I understand what you are saying relative to the information that's been disclosed to you, I guess I'm not so persuaded that the evidence is going to be so repetitious that in my discretion I would exclude it at this point in time. I think Mr. Jones is correct in that -- well, two things. At this point in time I'm not persuaded to grant the motion. I think Mr. Jones is correct in that it's somewhat premature at this point in time to limit the evidence under 403. As the trial progresses and if I think that expert testimony is cumulative, I can revisit that and that would apply to either side of this. So quite often in these cases I have to kind of take a wait and see approach and sometimes that argument comes up during the trial and I start agreeing with that argument. But at this point in time, I'm having difficulty agreeing with it based on what's presented before me today.

So based on that, in my review of Idaho Rule of Evidence 403, in recognizing it's in my discretion, I find that the evidence is relevant and I don't find that it would be a waste of time or a needless presentation of cumulative evidence based on my review of the materials today.

So with that, did you have anything further, Mr. Kessinger?

MR. KESSINGER: No, your Honor.

THE COURT: Alright. Thank you. Mr. Jones?

MR. JONES: No, your Honor.

THE COURT: Alright. Thank you both.

(Thereupon, the hearing was concluded at 1:40 p.m.)

Case No. CV OC 1204792

MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE CUMULATIVE EXPERT WITNESSES

This Memorandum is submitted in opposition to the Plaintiff's Motion seeking to unfairly limit the number of defense experts to only one per subject matter despite the fact that Plaintiff has in excess of this number himself. This is a medical malpractice case involving the death of Krystal Ballard who passed away in July 2010.

Plaintiff claims that the patient died as a result of malpractice by the Defendants which resulted in the decedent becoming infected which ultimately resulted in her death.

Plaintiff contends his claims are supported by the opinions of a number of experts in various fields including plastic surgery, infectious disease and pathology. The Defense disputes Plaintiff's claims and has identified experts to rebut these allegations. Despite the different backgrounds and specialties of these physicians, Plaintiff's counsel claims that pursuant to a rule of evidence, Idaho Rule of Evidence 403, the court should enter an order in advance of the trial limiting the defense to not more than one expert witness, other than the defendant himself, to testify on any given subject. For the reasons set forth below, the Plaintiff's Motion should be denied.

I.

ARGUMENT

A. Plaintiff Has Failed To Establish That The Probative Value Of The Testimony To Be Provided By Defendants' Expert Witnesses Is Substantially Outweighed By The Danger Of Presenting Needlessly Cumulative Evidence as required under IRE 403

As an initial starting point, the defense raises the standing and/or propriety of the Plaintiff to even bring the pending motion at this juncture in the case which is based solely on a rule of evidence. Expert witness disclosures are not evidence, nor are they admissible as evidence, but rather they are a discovery tool utilized to prepare for trial. The defense contends that Rule 403 has no application whatsoever at this pretrial stage and that this rule of evidence does not provide the Plaintiff with a vehicle or mechanism by which the number of defense experts can be limited months in advance of a trial.

In terms of addressing the application of Rule 403 if we were in a trial setting, additional background should be considered by the court. There are multiple Defendants in this case including Dr. Kerr and Silk Touch Laser and Med Spa. The complex medical issues in this case cover an unusually large number of areas including the performance of multiple cosmetic procedures and the equipment involved therein, the proper sterilization of surgical equipment and maintaining a proper sterile surgical field, the identification and treatment of a septic infectious process, the effectiveness of various antibiotics, the cause and effect of multi-system organ failure and theories as to the cause of death for this particular patient.

Due to the number of medical issues in this case, Plaintiff has listed the opinions of not less than three retained experts to address both standard of practice and causation issues including: Dean Sorensen, M.D., George Nichols, M.D. and Keith Armitage, M.D. These individuals are disclosed as experts in various areas of medicine including plastic surgery, anatomical, clinical and forensic pathology and infectious disease. See Plaintiff's First and Second Supplemental Responses to Defendants First Set of Interrogatories attached to the Affidavit of Counsel in Opposition as Exhibits A and B.

In order to oppose these experts, the defense disclosed six retained experts including: Gregory Laurence, M.D., a cosmetic surgeon with his background and training in family practice medicine in which he is boarded; Charles Garrison, M.D., forensic pathology; Thomas Coffman, M.D., infectious disease; John Lundeby, M.D., a cosmetic surgeon with his background and training in general surgery in which he is boarded; Geoffrey Stiller, M.D., who completed a fellowship in cosmetic surgery on top of his background in general surgery; and Angier Wills, M.D., a plastic surgeon. In response to the Plaintiff's request that the defense voluntarily agree to reduce the number of its experts prior to conducting depositions, the Defense withdrew Dr. Wills thereby effectively reducing the number of retained defense experts on the issues of standard of practice and causation to five. See the professional credentials and curriculum vitae for each of these experts attached to the Affidavit of Counsel in Opposition as Exhibit C.

At issue is whether Rule 403 provides a basis upon which the court may limit the number of defense experts during discovery, as opposed to the number of experts that may ultimately testify at trial. Idaho Rule of Evidence 403 provides:

> Although relevant, evidence may be excluded if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, confusion of the issues, or misleading the jury, or by considerations of undue delay, waste of time, or needless presentation of cumulative evidence.

In terms of interpreting and applying Rule 403, Idaho courts have consistently determined that "the language of I.R.E. 403 tilts in favor of admissibility." State v. McGuire, 135 Idaho 535, 540 20 P.3d 719 (Ct. App. 2001). Only if the probative value of the testimony is "substantially outweighed by danger of needless presentation of cumulative evidence," may a trial court exclude relevant evidence. See State v. Knight, 120 Idaho 862, 865, 920 P.2d 78 (Ct. App. 1996). In addition, "statements by witnesses which corroborate the facts, to which another has already testified, are not necessarily inadmissible because they are cumulative." State v. Blackstead, 126 Idaho 14, 22, 878 P.2d 188 (Ct. App. 1994). Instead, "Rule of Evidence 403, prohibits the introduction of needlessly cumulative evidence." Id.

Under the clear and unambiguous language of Rule 403, in order for the relevant testimony of any of the defense experts to be limited in any way, the Plaintiff must show that the presentation of such testimony from the Defense experts would amount to the "needless presentation of cumulative evidence." The fact that evidence to be provided by an expert witness may be similar or even cumulative to that of another witness does not, standing alone, meet the threshold test for exclusion under the Rule upon which the Plaintiff's motion is solely based. Rather, the evidence must be "needlessly" cumulative before the Court can even consider whether to limit it. The defense contends that such a determination cannot be made months prior to trial before the Plaintiff has presented any evidence.

The Plaintiff's Motion fails to establish anything more than sheer speculation that based solely on the number of Defense experts that their respective testimony would even be cumulative as opposed to needlessly cumulative as specifically stated by Rule 403. What opinions, facts and foundation the defense experts may testify to at trial as broadly set forth in the Defendants' Expert Disclosure cannot be fairly relied upon during discovery as grounds to limit the number of experts at this point. Unique to the nature of this case and equally critical to the Court's resolution of this matter, is the fact the parties are required to prove their respective cases by way of expert testimony pursuant to Idaho Code §§ 6-1012 and 6-1013. Idaho Code § 6-1012 provides:

> Proof of community standard of health care practice in malpractice case
> In any case, claim or action for damages due to injury to or death of any person, brought against any physician and surgeon or other provider of health care, including, without limitation, any dentist, physicians' assistant, nurse practitioner, registered nurse, licensed practical nurse, nurse anesthetist, medical technologist, physical therapist, hospital or nursing home, or any person vicariously liable for the negligence of them or any of them, such claimant or plaintiff > must, as an essential part of his or her case in chief, affirmatively prove by direct expert testimony and by a preponderance of all the competent evidence, that such defendant then and there negligently failed to meet the applicable standard of health care practice of the community in which such care allegedly was or should have been provided, as such standard existed at the time and place of the alleged negligence of such physician and surgeon, hospital or other such health care provider and as such standard then and there existed with respect to the class of health care provider that such defendant then and there belonged to and in which capacity he, she or it was functioning. Such individual providers of health care shall be judged in such cases in comparison with similarly trained and qualified providers of the same class in the same community, taking into account his or her training, experience, and fields of medical specialization, if any . . .. (Emphasis added).

In order for the jury to understand what will be complex medical matters, experts will be relied upon by both parties to explain, rebut and educate the jury. As part of this process, experts will discuss in detail the medical issues in question and offer their varying opinions on whether Dr. Kerr's care and treatment in question complied with the local standards and practices of health care within the community to which he is held as well as their varying opinions as to the cause of the patient's death. See Idaho Code § 6-1012.

Indeed, a review of the defense disclosure shows the Defendants fully complied with the rules governing expert witness discovery in this case. The Defendants provided Plaintiff with an extremely detailed and timely Expert Witness Disclosure setting forth the opinions and factual basis expected to be presented on a variety of topics. See Defense Disclosure attached to the Affidavit of Scott McKay as Exhibit A. The Defendants cannot be faulted for complying with Rule 26(b)(4) in disclosing their experts' opinions regarding the substance, foundation and subject matter of their opinions. The Defendants have set forth the full scope of the potential of the experts' testimony, but this does not mean that the experts will ultimately testify as to each and every opinion and issue stated therein.

This is because the Plaintiff goes first, has the burden of proof and the defense must plan ahead and be prepared at trial to meet and oppose the evidence and adverse opinions offered. Plaintiff's complaint that he is somehow outnumbered is insufficient to limit the defense's ability to present key testimony on the main issues in this case. Plaintiff has not cited any legal authority to support his argument that based on numbers alone the defense should be limited. There are multiple reasons why the testimony of defense experts will not be needlessly cumulative.

First, each of the Defendants' standard of health care practice experts will offer unique and relevant testimony on various aspects of the standard of practice topic which will not be needlessly cumulative. The Defendants have disclosed three retained experts regarding the standard of health care practice. Of these experts, Gregory Laurence, M.D. is from Tennessee and has a background in family practice medicine a specialty which the Plaintiff does not have; John Lundeby, M.D., is from Spokane, Washington and was involved in providing cosmetic surgery training to the Defendant Dr. Kerr; and Geoffrey Stiller, M.D. from Moscow, Idaho, and has a background in general surgery, another specialty which the Plaintiff does not have. Each one of these experts approach this case from a different perspective and simply because their respective disclosure reflects that they will be prepared to address similar topics does not mean that the presentation of their testimony at trial will result in the presentation of needless cumulative evidence.

Moreover, simply because these experts reach the same or similar conclusions that Dr. Kerr did not violate the applicable standard of health care practice is not a basis to limit or preclude their testimony on the key issues in the case which is governed by the unique statutory scheme set forth under Idaho Code §6-1012. This is significantly different from a situation where a party seeks to call multiple witnesses to testify on the same fact, such as whether a traffic light was green or red immediately prior to an automobile accident. Under that scenario, the defense concedes there would be little value to calling five witnesses to all say what color the light was at the time of the accident.

In contrast, a review of the Defendants' Expert Disclosure regarding the standard of health care practice experts establishes that there are different reasons and different aspects to their respective testimony. Each of these experts provides a unique aspect to the case that the Defendants should be entitled to present. In order to give a complete disclosure, and in an effort to avoid the potential argument by the Plaintiff that certain opinions were not disclosed, there is naturally going to be some overlap to testimony and to the disclosure itself in order to ensure compliance with Rule 26(b)(4). Many district courts in Idaho take the strict position that if an opinion is not set forth in the expert disclosure, then it cannot be presented by the witness at trial. Mindful of this position, the defense takes great pains to ensure the expert disclosure is complete. As a result, there is no justifiable reason for the Court to conclude at this early discovery phase juncture, that the highly relevant testimony of these experts will be needlessly cumulative and therefore subject to exclusion and/or limitation.

Second, each of these three experts come from different practice backgrounds and gained their knowledge of the applicable standard of practice in a variety of ways. For example, Dr. Laurence is from Tennessee and has a background in family practice medicine rather than general surgery or plastic surgery like the Plaintiff's expert, Dr. Sorensen. This is a critical difference since Dr. Kerr has an anesthesia background and has been criticized by Plaintiff's expert because he does not have a general or plastic surgery background. Similarly, although Dr. Lundeby has a general surgery background, he will explain to the jury that he is actively involved in providing training to physicians from other medical specialties like family practice, ob/gyn, dermatology and anesthesia to perform the very procedures at issue without need of any formal general or plastic surgery residency as has been advanced by Plaintiff in this case.

Finally, Dr. Stiller is the only Idaho physician. His testimony is unique from that perspective in addition to the fact that he has knowledge that many, if not most, of the physicians in Idaho who are performing the surgery at issue in this case are not plastic surgeons, but rather some other specialty like Dr. Kerr. Furthermore, since there are additional claims against not only Dr. Kerr, but also the Defendant spa facility regarding sterilization procedures and techniques, the Defense is entitled to call witnesses who may be capable of rendering opinions more for one defendant than another. The Defense cannot get the breadth of this testimony from one witness and the rules do not require or advocate for Dr. Kerr to be limited as Plaintiff contends.

Third, if the Defendants are limited to a certain number of experts prior to trial, this may result in unfairly prejudicing the defense. For example, if one of these three standard of practice witnesses should fail to qualify as an expert at trial for any reason, or should a defense expert be meaningfully impeached, then the Defendants would need to rely upon a similar expert to establish certain issues. The fact that the defense has retained multiple experts should entitle them to be available at the trial if needed. In addition, the Plaintiff's experts may be permitted to testify on issues that requires a certain Defense expert to rebut which the Defense has taken the time and effort to properly identify and disclose in full compliance with the rules of discovery. Thus, the difficulty in even considering placing limits on the Defense experts at this stage is that it is impossible to predict what will happen at trial or how Plaintiff will present his case.

Plaintiff is seeking millions of dollars in damages from the defense in this case. In order to fairly defend against these claims the Defense took the time and made the investment into utilizing the right experts for this case. As a result, the defense should be entitled to present the testimony of its timely retained and properly disclosed standard of practice experts. It is premature to decide at this juncture where the parties are still engaged in discovery whether the testimony of these witnesses at trial will amount to the needless presentation of cumulative evidence. Rule 403 does not provide the Plaintiff with a mechanism by which the Defense can be limited during discovery. As a result, the Plaintiff's Motion should be denied.

B. The Plaintiff's Motion Should Be Denied Consistent With The Case Authorities From Numerous Jurisdictions Which Have Refused To Limit The Number Of Medical Experts In Similar Cases

While there is no Idaho authority specifically regarding I.R.E. 403 and its application to limit the number of expert witnesses in a medical malpractice action, there are a number of other jurisdictions with similar or identical Rules of Evidence which have addressed this issue. For example in the very recent case of McLean v. Liberty Health System, 62 A.3d 922 (N.J. 2013), the New Jersey Appellate Court held that the district court in a medical malpractice case had abused its discretion in only allowing the plaintiff to call one standard of care expert. McLean involved the death of a teenager whose family sued various health care providers claiming that they had failed to timely diagnose and treat him for an infection. Id. at 924. At trial, counsel for the plaintiff sought to produce the testimony of multiple standard of practice experts in the same field of emergency medicine, but the court refused to allow him to call more than one in response to the defense position that allowing more than one expert would be duplicative. Id. at 926.

Reversing the district court, the McLean court stated:

> We now hold that the trial court erred in limiting expert witnesses to only one per side for each relevant field of medicine, in particular, on the crucial issue of deviation from accepted standards of medical care. . . Nothing in our rules of evidence, or other laws or rules, gives a trial court authority to balance the number of witnesses presented by each side at the trial. Nor is the trial court authorized by N.J.R.E. 403 or any other rule or law to bar crucial evidence merely on the ground that it duplicates another witness's testimony. McLean, 62 A.3d at 928. (Emphasis added). See McLean Decision attached to the Affidavit of Counsel in Opposition as Exhibit D.

The McLean court further observed:

> Here, the testimony that plaintiff wished to present went to the heart of her case: whether defendant deviated from accepted standards of care for an emergency room physician. Although a second expert would have taken more time at the trial, it might have been time well spent. In the field of medicine, second opinions are often sought to test the accuracy of a diagnosis or the benefits and risks of proposed treatment. Surely it cannot be said that > additional expert testimony in a case that involved complicated issues of emergency and diagnostic medicine had such low probative value as to be substantially outweighed by its partially repetitive nature. . . We note that Rule 403 does not refer to "duplicative evidence" but to "needless . . . cumulative evidence that might cause undue delay in the trial and a waste of time. McLean, 62 A.3d at 929. (Emphasis added).

Another example can be found in the case of B.C. Sims v. Brackett, 885 S.W.2d 450 (Tex. Ct. App. 1994), the Court held that the exclusion of an expert medical witness's testimony as to the cause of the patient's post-surgery intestinal leak on the grounds that such testimony was cumulative was improper. The Texas court discussed the fact that in a medical malpractice trial expert testimony is a necessity and the matters at issue are addressed by opposing experts. Id. at 454. In order for the trial court to exclude testimony, it must not just be cumulative, but rather the probative value of the expert's testimony must be "substantially outweighed by . . . [the] needless presentation of cumulative evidence." Id. In applying the Texas nearly identical equivalent of Idaho's Rule 403, the Court stated:

> To exclude evidence under Rule 403, the trial court must conduct a balancing test and only when the balance weighs significantly on the side of judicial efficiency may relative evidence be excluded as cumulative. . .. The test is not merely whether the evidence to be deduced from the two witnesses is similar, but also whether the excluded testimony would have added substantial weight to the offering party's case. If so, it is error to exclude it. B.C. Sims, 885 S.W. 2d at 454. (Emphasis added).

The Court concluded that the excluded witnesses credentials and specialty gave their testimony great probative value which was not purely cumulative. Id. Where a party is denied the right to make a fair presentation to the jury, the court has not acted reasonably and has abused its discretion in excluding the testimony of a witness on a "hotly contested issue" in the case. Id. See B.C. Sims Decision attached to the Affidavit of Counsel in Opposition as Exhibit E.

The Supreme Court of Wyoming reached a similar result in Kobos v. Everts, 768 P.2d 534, 546 (Wyo. 1989). There the Court stated:

> Not all evidence which is entirely duplicative is therefore cumulative and excludable. Evidence may vary in degree of persuasiveness, and when an item of proof which is offered on a point is very different in character or persuasive impact from an item of proof previously received, the former cannot be considered merely "cumulative" of the latter. Moreover, at times it is entirely reasonable for a party to insist, "One witness is good, but two or three will make my case much stronger, even though all will testify in a similar vein." In short, the discretion of the trial judge to exclude cumulative evidence must be exercised in a discriminating fashion, and with wisdom, particularly where the evidence in question goes to issues of central importance in the case. *Kobos, 768 P.2d at 546 (Emphasis added).

See Kobos Decision attached to the Affidavit of Counsel in Opposition as Exhibit F. See also 2 D. Lonisell and C Mueller, Federal Evidence § 128 at 74-75 (1985); Hill v. Bache Halsey Stuart Shields, Inc., 790 F.2d 817 (10th Cir. 1986); Bower v. O'Hara, 759 F.2d 1117 (3rd Cir. 1985); and United States v. Fessel, 531 F.2d 1275 (5th Cir. 1976). See also the case of Johnson v. United States, 780 F.2d 902 (11th Cir. 1986), where the Eleventh Circuit held that the District Court abused its discretion excluding a third medical expert witness when the witness had different credentials and would have offered slightly different evidence and analysis. See Johnson Decision attached to the Affidavit of Counsel in Opposition as Exhibit G.

Finally, in Frederick v. Woman's Hospital of Acadiana, 626 So.2d 467

(La. Ct. App. 1993), the Louisiana Court held that cumulative expert testimony was properly admitted. In Frederick, the defendants in a medical malpractice case offered the testimony of two pediatric neurologists. Id. at 472. The two physicians attended different medical schools; one was principally a hospital administrator, the other was a private practitioner. The court determined that the trial judge was correct in permitting each to testify, as each one's testimony added dimensional perspective to the testimony of the other. Id. at 472-73.

The Frederick court also held that the trial judge properly admitted the testimony of three obstetrical-gynecologists. Id. at 473. Each witness differed in background and sub-specialty. One graduated from L.S.U. Medical School, was chief of OB/GYN at a Dallas hospital and specialized in fetal-maternal medicine. Another attended the University of Tennessee Medical School, was board-certified in OB/GYN, surgery and perinatology, and was a professor at the University of Mississippi Medical Center. The third OB/GYN called by the defendants trained at the University of Oregon, chaired the Department of OB/GYN at Tulane Medical Center, co-authored several books and had performed years of antenatal diagnosis and treatment of birth defects. The court concluded that the probative value of the testimony from each of these three experts, although similar, was not substantially outweighed by any concerns articulated in Rule 403. Id.; see also Hall v. Brookshire Bros., 831 So.2d 1010 (La. Ct. App. 2002). See Frederick Decision attached to the Affidavit of Counsel in Opposition as Exhibit H.

In further opposition to the Plaintiff's Motion, the Defendants submit the transcript from an oral ruling by the Honorable Joel D. Horton in the case of Yoonas v. Ediger, Ada County Case No. CV PI 0000249D. The transcript, a copy of which is attached to the Affidavit of Counsel in Opposition as Exhibit I, is an excerpt of the hearing before (now Supreme Court Justice) Judge Horton on a similar plaintiff's motion to limit defense experts in a medical malpractice case. The defense in that case sought to call four experts in addition to the defendant. The excerpt provided contains Judge Horton's oral ruling that the presentation of four defense experts would not be needlessly cumulative. Similarly, the Defendants submit the transcript from an oral ruling by the Honorable Carl B. Kerrick in the case of Strandbakke v. Moreno, Nez Perce County, No. CV 05-0002547. The transcript, a copy of which is attached to the Affidavit of Counsel in Opposition as Exhibit J, reaches the same conclusion as the court in Yoonas. The court in Strandbakke concluded that the expert testimony was relevant, would not be needlessly cumulative can could not be limited in advance of trial just as the Plaintiff has argued in the case at bar.

This is a complex medical malpractice case involving several different areas of medicine including: cosmetic surgery, general surgery, forensic pathology, bacteriology, infectious disease, toxicology, anesthesiology, emergency medicine, internal medicine and urology. The issues in this case involve not only the performance of cosmetic surgery in multiple areas of the body, but also the determination of the cause for the patient to become septic and the various bacterial issues which are involved. The patient in this case died of unusual circumstances and the autopsy records, tissue slides and blood samples in this case have been or will be reviewed and evaluated by multiple specialists in medicine. The Defendants are entitled to present this evidence to the jury and the opinions of the properly disclosed witnesses. Similar to the decisions reached by courts from other jurisdictions, as well as Idaho District Courts, the Defendants respectfully request this Court rule that at this early juncture there is no evidence before the Court which would support the Plaintiff's proposal to limit the number of Defense experts from three to one and deny said Motion.

III.

CONCLUSION

Excluding and/or limiting several of the defense experts from being able to testify on the key standard of practice and causation issues in this case despite the fact they were timely and properly disclosed would unfairly prejudice and hamper the Defendants' ability to present an effective defense, especially in light of the complicated nature of the medicine in this case. The complex medical issues in this case require significant expert witness testimony, which the jury should be entitled to receive without the arbitrary limitations proposed by Plaintiff. Each of the Defendants' expert witnesses will provide a different dimensional perspective to the testimony of the other without needlessly re-plowing the same ground. Thus, the number of retained standard of practice expert witnesses disclosed by the Defendants (three) are not excessive, and should not provide a basis to limit the experts to be called by the Defendants at trial on the most critical issues in the case.

Any decisions regarding the cumulative nature of the testimony to be proffered by the Defendants' expert witnesses can be adequately controlled and monitored by the Court at trial. The Plaintiff has yet to put on their case-in-chief and none of the Defense experts have testified or even given deposition testimony. It will not be known until the time of trial what evidence the Defendants will need to present in their case-in-chief through various experts. For all of the reasons discussed herein, the Defendants respectfully request that the Court deny Plaintiff's Motion to Exclude Cumulative Expert Witnesses.

Case No. CV OC 1204792

REPLY TO DEFENDANTS' MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO EXCLUDE CUMULATIVE EXPERT WITNESSES

628253

ORIGINAL

COMES NOW the Plaintiff, Charles Ballard, by and through his attorneys, and files his Reply to Defendants' Memorandum in Opposition to Plaintiff's Motion to Exclude Cumulative Expert Witnesses. By their memorandum in opposition, Defendants attempt to justify a parade of defense experts on standard of care by looking to persuasive authorities, and by emphasizing that "each one of [their] experts approach this case from a differing perspective . . . ." (Defs.' Memo in Opp. 7.) Defendants also attempt to convince the Court that there is no vested authority granting this Court the discretion to limit expert witnesses during discovery.

In fact, there is Idaho case law specifically recognizing this Court's discretion to limit the number of expert witnesses during discovery. Many of the persuasive authorities provided by Defendants actually comport with the limitation requested by Plaintiff. And because differing perspectives should not obscure the fact that only one standard of care applies in this case, the Court would be well within its discretion to limit Defendant in accordance with Plaintiff's Motion to Exclude Cumulative Expert Witnesses.

As an initial point, nowhere in Plaintiff's motion does he "[complain] that he is somehow outnumbered . . . ." (Id.) Defendants' statement to the contrary should be disregarded. So, too, should Defendants' related assertion that "Plaintiff's Motion fails to establish anything more than sheer speculation that based solely on the number of Defense experts that their respective testimony would be cumulative." (Id.) The reason for this is obvious: Plaintiff need not speculate as to the cumulative nature of defense experts' testimony because "Defendants provided Plaintiff with an extremely detailed . . . Expert Witness Disclosure . . . ." (Id. at 6.) The clearly repetitive expert opinions contained within that disclosure speak for themselves as to the cumulative nature of the anticipated testimony. And to the extent Defendants support their opposition by reference to hearing transcripts (or excerpts thereof) without valid, corresponding court orders, those purported "authorities" should be ignored.

Defendants would have this Court believe that no precedential authority exists to support the Court's limitation of expert witnesses during discovery. This is simply incorrect. In Edmunds v. Kraner, the Idaho Supreme Court ruled as follows:

> Our law and our rules of civil procedure both provide that courts have the authority to limit the number of expert witnesses prior to trial. We have long recognized that courts have broad, inherent powers to control discovery. See Bailey v. Sanford, 139 Idaho 744, 749, 86 P.3d 458, 463 (2004). This includes the inherent authority to limit the number of expert witnesses during discovery. See Hansen, 974 P.2d at 1161 (finding no abuse of discretion where district court disallowed three expert witnesses prior to trial when it did not preclude the party seeking to use the witness testimony from raising a relevant issue). We have also advised that "judges should not hesitate to exercise appropriate control over the discovery process." Sierra Life Ins., Co. v. Magic Valley Newspapers, Inc., 101 Idaho 795, 801, 623 P.2d 103, 109 (1980) (quoting Herbert v. Lando, 441 U.S. 153, 177, 99 S.Ct. 1635, 1649, 60 L.Ed.2d 115, 134 (1979)).
> Our rules of civil procedure and the express purposes behind our discovery rules likewise recognize the court's authority to limit the number of expert witnesses. Rule 16(d)(4) provides that a court may limit the number of expert witnesses prior to trial. Rule 1(a) requires that the rules of civil procedure "be liberally construed to secure the just, speedy, and inexpensive determination of every action and proceeding."

142 Idaho 867, 877-78, 136 P.3d 338, 348-49 (2006) (emphasis added). Therefore, it is not, as Defendants suggest, premature to grant the requested relief.

And with regard to the case law provided in support of Defendants' argument, it is prudent to note those cases are consistent with Plaintiff's proposed limitation. In McLean v. Liberty Health System, for instance, the Court ruled that "the trial court erred in prohibiting plaintiff from presenting testimony by a second malpractice liability expert . . . ." 430 N.J.Super 156, 162, 62 A.3d 922, 926 (2013) (emphasis added).

In B.C. Sims v. Brackett, a case involving claims against surgeons, an infectious disease specialist, a kidney specialist, nurses, pharmacists, as well as the hospital in which those medical professionals worked, the Texas Court of Appeals employed a Rule 403 analysis in determining "that the trial judge abused his discretion in excluding [a medical expert who the plaintiff intended to offer on the standard of care for recovery]." 885 S.W.2d 450, 451-454 (1994). The improperly excluded expert was board certified in internal medicine, and the lower court ruled that his testimony would be cumulative of a board certified general surgeon who had previously testified. Id. at 453.

In Johnson v. U.S., a medical malpractice case under the Federal Tort Claims Act, the Eleventh Circuit Court of Appeals vacated the judgment and remanded for continuation of the bench trial below, in part, because the government should have been allowed to offer an expert witness in child behavior in addition to its two other experts. 780 F.2d 902, 904-906 (1986). And in Kobos v. Everts, the Supreme Court of Wyoming employed a Rule 403 analysis in ruling that a the trial court erroneously precluded the plaintiff from offering a pediatrician and a pathologist in a case involving defendant pediatricians, orthopedic surgeons, and radiologists. 768 P.2d 534, 536, 545 (1989).

Though Defendants cite these cases in support of their opposition, there are two reasons why those cases provide more support for Plaintiff's motion than for Defendants' opposition. First, in none of these cases are five experts being offered to shed light on any single issue. In this case, however, Defendants seek to tender five experts as to standard of care. Additionally, these cases involve multiple defendants of varying specialties. Accordingly, it would follow that, in cases where multiple standards of care would apply, greater numbers of standard of care experts would be appropriate to shed light as to the applicable duties involved.

In this case, no such demand exists. Plaintiff, by his Complaint, invokes a single standard of care. Therefore, it is inevitable that Defendants' proposed standard of care experts -- all five of them -- would provide needlessly cumulative evidence on the one standard of care that applies in this case. Differing expert perspectives do nothing to mitigate this reality, and the Court would be well within its discretion to limit Defendants' experts in accordance therewith. This case is about one doctor's conduct, whether or not Defendants seek to emphasize the diverse perspectives of its proposed experts, which is a transparent attempt to justify inappropriately cumulative expert witnesses.

And while Defendants state that the limitation requested by Plaintiff "may result in unfairly prejudicing the defense[,]" practical consideration of this issue reveals that Plaintiff will be severely and unfairly prejudiced without such a limitation. (Defs.' Memo in Opp. at 9.) Not only will Plaintiff incur massive costs associated with expert discovery, most notably on expert depositions, but Defendants will directly benefit from these expenditures. Specifically, with a deposition transcript for each of their expert witnesses in hand, Defendants will be able to pick and choose which of the five standard of care experts they prefer to call at trial, excuse the remainder, and simultaneously reduce their trial expenses. Plaintiff's costs balloon while Defendants enjoy very apparent strategic and cost benefits.

Because this Court's authority to limit expert witnesses during discovery is explicitly recognized by the Idaho Supreme Court, because the authorities provided by Defendants fail to add merit to their argument, and because Plaintiff will suffer significant and unfair prejudice without the requested relief, Defendants should be limited to two expert witnesses, one of which would include Defendant, Dr. Kerr, on any single topic.

SUPPLEMENTAL MEMORANDUM IN OPPOSITION TO PLAINTIFF'S MOTION TO LIMIT DEFENSE EXPERTS

I.
INTRODUCTION

This Supplemental Memorandum is submitted in opposition to Plaintiff's

Reply Brief which raises an entirely new ground in support of his Motion which was not addressed in Plaintiff's initial Memo. Plaintiff's Motion and supporting documents were based solely on the application of Rule 403 to which the defense responded. Now, in his reply brief the Plaintiff cites for the first time to the Supreme Court case of Edmunds v. Kraner, 142 Idaho 867, 136 P.3d 338 (2006). The portion of the case cited by the Plaintiff did not involve a Rule 403 analysis, but rather a totally separate basis involving the potential application of Rule 16(d) which involves pretrial conferences. In fairness, and in order to address this entirely new issue, the defense has submitted this supplemental memorandum in order to respond to this new issue.

II.
ARGUMENT

A. Idaho Law Does Not Require The Court To Limit The Defendants' Experts

The defense contends that the Edmunds decision does not apply in this case, nor does it set forth any requirement that the Court limit the number of defense expert witnesses in this case. Edmunds was a malpractice case involving an alleged overdose of the antibiotic Gentamicin causing one of the plaintiffs to suffer from neurotoxicity and ototoxicity. The defendant hospital, Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center (SARMC), moved for summary judgment as to all of the plaintiffs' claims. In opposition to this motion, the plaintiffs filed the second affidavit of their expert, Dr. Hollander as well as an affidavit of an additional expert Dr. Rotschafer. The district court struck these affidavits as being untimely and granted the hospital's motion. The plaintiff appealed the district court's grant of summary judgment.

On appeal, the issue was whether the district court abused its discretion by excluding the testimony of Drs. Hollander and Rotschafer. The Court in Edmunds concluded that the affidavit of Dr. Rotschafer, who had never been disclosed, was untimely and properly excluded by the district court. Id. at 873, 136 P.3d at 344. However, as to the affidavit of Dr. Hollander, the Court found that Dr. Hollander had previously been disclosed by plaintiffs as an expert witness before the disclosure deadline had passed and that the opinions set forth in Dr. Hollander's second affidavit were timely offered in opposition to the issues raised by the hospital's motion for summary judgment. Id. at 344-46, 136 P.3d at 873-875.

Since the District Court's scheduling order did not require anything other than the names of the experts to be utilized, the Supreme Court in Edmunds held it was error for the trial court to conclude the supplemental affidavit of plaintiffs' expert, Dr. Hollander, was untimely. Id. at 346, 136 P.3d at 875. Since the Supreme Court in Edmunds concluded it was an abuse of discretion for the district court to have excluded the second affidavit of Dr. Hollander, the Court also concluded that the district court erred in granting the hospital's motion for summary judgment. Id.

The Court's resolution of the summary judgment issues in Edmunds was dispositive of the entire appeal. Despite this fact, in dicta, the Edmunds court then went on to discuss whether the district court abused its discretion by failing to recognize that it had the inherent authority to limit the number of expert witnesses during pretrial discovery. In Edmunds, the hospital identified 53 witnesses in its expert witness disclosure against the plaintiffs.

The plaintiffs in Edmunds argued that the number of experts disclosed by the hospital was excessive and unfairly prevented the plaintiffs from engaging in meaningful discovery as to the opinions of the defense experts. Id. at 348, 136 P.3d at 877. The Court in Edmunds noted that the trial court had discretion regarding limitations on the number of experts utilized by a party and that the district court had erred by concluding that its power to limit experts was "simply an evidentiary issue for trial, not a discovery matter." Id. The Court stated, "[a]t the very least the trial court should have considered the Edmunds' request to limit the number of experts as a discovery issue and examined the purposes behind our discovery rules when ruling on the motion." Id. The Court in Edmunds reversed and remanded the trial court's decision, but also held open the possibility that the trial court could ultimately deny the plaintiffs' motion.

The decision in Edmunds remanding the issue of limiting experts arose out of the plaintiffs' argument that the disclosure of 53 experts was "an abusive tactic that prevented genuine discovery of expert opinions by deposition." Id. at 877, 136 P.3d at 348. The concern by the Court in Edmunds arose out of potential problems obtaining expert opinions as to 53 different experts in discovery. The decision did not address limiting experts at trial, which is the issue presented in the instant case. Since it was a discovery issue, the Court did not address I.R.E. 403 in its decision, and concluded that the trial court improperly focused on I.R.E. 403 and the evidentiary issues.

In this case, however, the issue before the Court is vastly different. Here, the issue relates to three standard of health care practice experts, plus Dr. Kerr. This is a far cry from the defendant disclosure in Edmunds of a whopping 53 experts with no opinions produced for any of them. In addition, Plaintiff's reference throughout his reply brief to the defense having five standard of practice experts is false and misleading. Further, unlike Edmunds, the Defendants in this case disclosed over 100 pages of detailed opinions of their experts, so there is no issue that the Plaintiffs do not know the substance of opinions of the experts involved. Indeed, given the scope of the disclosures produced, one questions why the Plaintiff is seeking to take the depositions of these witnesses at all and that in reality his motion is but a ruse to try and manufacture a claim of prejudice simply to try and even out for his client the number of experts set to testify at trial.

At a minimum, nothing in the Edmunds decision requires this Court to limit the Defense expert witnesses. Furthermore, it is of important note that the Supreme Court did not prohibit the trial court from refusing to limit the number of experts on remand, nor did the court set any magic number for experts on any one subject as the Plaintiff seeks to have done in this case. Rather, the Court in Edmunds directed the trial court that it was allowed to consider the motion to limit as a discovery motion and to not simply pass on it as an evidentiary issue. The Court did not, however, give specific guidance as to how the trial court could properly analyze the issue or how to analyze the number of experts that should be allowed to testify at trial. Plaintiff is seeking several million dollars from the Defendants who contend it would be an abuse of discretion to limit the defense to less than those experts currently listed to testify on the key issues in this case. There is no blanket rule set forth by Edmunds which says the defense can only call one expert on a topic as alleged by the Plaintiff.

Plaintiff argues that his trial costs will increase because of the cost of having to conduct the depositions of each of the defense experts. This is a perplexing statement. There is no requirement that Plaintiff's counsel take any expert depositions. In point of fact, counsel for the defense rarely takes the depositions of the Plaintiff's experts. This is because the rules of discovery entitle a party to rely on the contents of the disclosure and interrogatory responses to Rule 26(b)(4) interrogatories. Thus, to the extent the Plaintiff wants to argue that his costs will increase if he has to take all of the defense expert depositions, this is a tactical decision on his counsel's part and not a requirement of discovery, nor should such an argument serve as a valid basis upon which to limit the minimal number of defense experts in this case. For these reason, the defense respectfully requests that Plaintiff's Motion to limit be denied.

Case No. CV OC 1204792

PLAINTIFF'S NOTICE OF INTENT TO OFFER TESTIMONY OF MEDICAL EXPERT BY VIDEO TELECONFERENCE AND REQUEST FOR LEAVE TO PERMIT SAME

ORIGINAL

Plaintiff Charles Ballard, through his attorneys, hereby gives notice of his intent to offer the testimony of plaintiff's medical expert, Keith Armitage, M.D. during trial through video teleconference via simultaneous electronic transmission. Plaintiff will take responsibility for coordinating and establishing this video feed into the courtroom. Through this video feed, Dr. Armitage will be visible and able to communicate with the Court, counsel and jury during his testimony.

Good cause exits for permitting Dr. Armitage to appear and testify in this manner. Plaintiff's counsel has just learned that Dr. Armitage has conflicting travel including a scheduled trip to Qatar during the time that Plaintiff will present Plaintiff's case in chief. As a result, Dr. Armitage is unable to travel to Boise and present testimony at the time Plaintiff requires him to do so. Dr. Armitage is a necessary and important witness to the presentation of Plaintiff's case. He is an infectious disease specialist who will testify to the cause of Krystal Ballard's death - an issue that is disputed by the parties. Plaintiff will be significantly prejudiced unless he is able to present the testimony of this medical expert.

Accordingly, Plaintiff seeks leave of court to present the testimony of Dr. Armitage during trial as described above.

MEDIASTINUM:	Endotracheal tube terminates above the level of the carina in satisfactory position.
CARDIAC:	Normal.
PLEURA/CHEST WALL:	Normal.
LIVER:	Periportal edema likely due to resuscitation.

Case No. CV OC 1204792

PLAINTIFF'S MOTON FOR ENTRY OF PROTECTIVE ORDER

ORIGINAL

NOW COMES Plaintiff, Charles Ballard, by counsel, and moves the Court for entry of a protective order. The protective order at issue should be entered because Plaintiff and Defendants previously agreed to the language contained therein.

On July 31, 2013, Plaintiff's counsel presented Defendants' counsel with a draft stipulated protective order for review. (Exhibit A, Email from B. McAllister to J. Quane and T. Jones.) On August 1, 2013, defense counsel approved the language of the proposed stipulated protective order. (Exhibit B, Email from T. Jones to B. McAllister.) The next day, defense counsel signed the agreement and returned the signed stipulation electronically. (Exhibit C, Email from T. Jones to B. McAllister, Aug. 2, 2013.) Plaintiff's counsel signed the stipulated protective order on August 6, 2013, and mailed it to the Clerk for filing the same day. (Exhibit D, Correspondence from P. Gregory Haddad to Clerk enclosing stipulated protective order (unrelated enclosure omitted).)

On or around August 13, 2013, a member of the Clerk's office contacted Plaintiff's local counsel to explain that the parties' stipulation could not be filed without a proposed protective order to be entered by the Court. On September 4, 2013, Plaintiff's counsel provided defense counsel with a proposed protective order for review and approval; there is no substantive difference in content between the original stipulation and the proposed order. (Exhibit E, Email from B. McAllister to J. Quane and T. Jones with attachments.)

Having received no response from defense counsel, Plaintiff's counsel followed-up with defense counsel on September 11, 2013. (Exhibit F, Email from B. McAllister to J. Quane and T. Jones.) On September 23, 2013, having still received no response, a paralegal for Plaintiff's counsel contacted defense counsel to seek defense counsel's approval of the proposed protective order. (Exhibit G, Email from F. Caruthers to J. Quane and T. Jones.) Defense counsel elected to ignore Plaintiff's counsel's communications once again.

Plaintiff now seeks entry of the proposed protective order, attached hereto at Exhibit H. Plaintiff made every effort to obtain Defendants' approval of the proposed protective order. And because there is no substantive difference between the content of the original stipulation, which all parties endorsed, and the order currently being submitted for entry, Plaintiff's counsel respectfully requests that the proposed Protective Order attached hereto at Exhibit H be entered.

Dated this 11th day of October, 2013.

Respectfully Submitted,

Assuming the document you sent me is the same as the prior version aside from the date lines, here is a signed copy. The confusion regarding the order is simply that we usually see a proposed order for the court to sign regarding the stipulation of the parties. If you are satisfied without a separate order then please sign and submit the document and then we are ready to receive the tax records.

Terry –

Per your request, attached please find the stipulated protective order with date lines included, which can be returned to us once you've had a chance to sign.

With reference to your request for a draft proposed order, perhaps there is some confusion. It was our intention to avoid the need for an entered order by simply filing the attached stipulation.

Please advise.

Thanks.

IN THE DISTRICT COURT FOR THE FOURTH JUDICIAL DISTRICT OF

THE STATE OF IDAHO, IN AND FOR THE COUNTY OF ADA

CHARLES BALLARD, Plaintiff, vs. BRIAN CALDER KERR, M.D.; SILK TOUCH LASER, LLP, an Idaho limited liability partnership; and SILK TOUCH LASER, LLP, an Idaho limited liability partnership, d/b/a SILK TOUCH MED SPA, and/or SILK TOUCH MED SPA AND LASER CENTER, and/or SILK TOUCH MED SPA, LASER, and LIPO OF BOISE, Defendants.	Case No. CV OC 1204792 STIPULATED PROTECTIVE ORDER

The parties to this action have determined that certain information to be filed with the Court or produced during discovery by the parties to this action is Confidential (as defined below), the unauthorized disclosure of which would be detrimental to the legitimate commercial or privacy interests of the parties. Accordingly, based upon the stipulation of the parties, upon consideration of the record, and pursuant to the provisions of Rule 26(c) of the Idaho Rule of Civil Procedure, the parties, by their respective counsel, hereby agree as follows:

1. When used in this Order, the word "document" includes, but is not limited to documents produced by any party or nonparty in this action whether pursuant to the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure, subpoena, or by agreement; responses to requests for admissions, requests for production, and/or interrogatories; deposition transcripts and exhibits; and any portions of any court papers which quote from or summarize any of the foregoing.

2. All documents or testimony designated as confidential in accordance with this order shall be used solely for the prosecution and/or defense of this action and for no other purpose.

3. Any party or nonparty producing documents which contain or disclose commercially sensitive information, proprietary information, financial information, or personal health information may designate such documents as confidential. The party or nonparty producing agreed-upon "CONFIDENTIAL" documents shall stamp such documents with the notice "CONFIDENTIAL."

4. Any party or nonparty giving testimony in this action may designate as "CONFIDENTIAL" that portion of the testimony containing or disclosing commercially sensitive information, proprietary information, financial information, or personal health information by advising the reporter of such confidentiality. The reporter shall separately transcribe those portions of the testimony so designated and shall mark the face of the transcript as "CONFIDENTIAL" as the designating person may direct. Each party or nonparty shall have twenty (20) days after receipt of the transcript of any deposition (as certified by the Court Reporter) within which to notify the other party in writing of the portions of the transcript that it wishes to designate as Confidential Information. Prior to the expiration of such twenty (20) day period, all information disclosed during a deposition shall be treated as though designated confidential, unless otherwise agreed by the parties and the witness, or ordered by the Court.

5. Confidential documents or testimony may be referred to in pleadings, motions and briefs, and may be used in depositions and marked as deposition exhibits in this action. However, no such document or testimony shall be used for any of these purposes unless it, and that portion of the court paper in which the confidential information is revealed, is appropriately marked confidential and filed under seal with the Clerk of the Court. If a court pleading refers to a Confidential document but does not reveal the content of the Confidential document the pleading need not be filed under seal (although the Confidential document, if attached, shall be file under seal).

6. Except as set forth above, or with the prior written consent of the party or nonparty asserting confidential treatment, no document or testimony designated as "CONFIDENTIAL" and no information contained in it or obtained from it may be disclosed to any person other than:

a. The Court, its staff, and court reporters;

b. Counsel for the parties in this action and their staff;

c. Independent experts retained by counsel for the parties to assist them in litigation;

d. Potential witnesses; and

e. The parties in this action.

7. Any independent expert or potential witness to whom any document or testimony designated as confidential is disclosed must agree to be bound by the terms of this Protective Order and to be subject to the jurisdiction of this Court for contempt and any other appropriate proceedings in the event of an alleged or actual violation of this Order. Each such person to whom confidential testimony or documents is disclosed must sign a document stating that he or she has read this Order and agrees to comply with its terms and to be subject to the jurisdiction of this Court for any proceedings involving alleged improper use or disclosure of the confidential information.

8. This Order shall not prevent the disclosure of documents to the persons who were the authors or addressees of the documents or are shown as having received copies of them.

9. Documents produced by parties or nonparties (i.e., materials produced from personal or business files, not deposition transcripts, court papers and so on) which are designated confidential and all copies of them (other than exhibits of record) shall be destroyed or returned to the party producing such documents when the action is concluded.

10. The restrictions and obligations relating to documents or testimony designated as confidential in accordance with this Stipulated Protective Order shall not apply to any document or information: 1) which all parties agree in writing were publicly known at the time it was produced; 2) which this Court rules was publicly known at the time it was produced to the receiving party; or 3) which this Court rules has since become publicly known through no fault of the receiving party.

11. If a party or nonparty, through inadvertence, produces any confidential document without labeling or marking or otherwise designating it as such in accordance with the provisions of this Stipulated Protective Order, the designating party may give written notice within 30 days of discovery to the receiving party that the document is deemed confidential and should be treated as such in accordance with the provisions of this Stipulated Protective Order. The receiving party must treat such document as confidential from the date such notice is received. Disclosure, prior to the receipt of such notice, of a confidential document to persons not authorized to receive it shall not be deemed a violation of this Stipulated Protective Order; provided, however, that the party making such disclosure shall notify the designating party in writing of all such unauthorized persons to whom such disclosure was made and shall use best efforts to secure the return of all such confidential documents. The inadvertent disclosure of a confidential document by a producing party without designation at the time of disclosure shall not be treated as a waiver of the confidentiality of the subject matter.

12. Nothing contained in this Stipulated Protective Order shall be construed to require production of a confidential document or testimony that is privileged or otherwise protected from discovery. If a party, through inadvertence, produces a document that it believes is immune from discovery pursuant to the attorney-client privilege and/or the work product privilege, such production shall not be deemed a waiver of any privilege, and the producing party may give written notice to the receiving party that the document or information produced is deemed privileged and that return of the document or information is requested. Upon receipt of such written notice, the receiving party shall immediately gather the original and all copies of the document or information of which the receiving party is aware and shall immediately return the original and all such copies to the producing party. The return of the document(s) and/or information to the producing party shall not preclude the receiving party from later moving the Court to compel production of the returned documents and/or information.

13. Nothing in this Stipulated Protective Order shall prevent any party or nonparty to this action from seeking modification of this Order or from objecting that a document or testimony has been inappropriately classified as confidential. In addition, nothing in this Order shall prevent a party from objecting to discovery which it believes to be otherwise improper. All parties and nonparties shall endeavor in good faith to resolve any dispute over the designation of documents as confidential on an informal basis before presenting the matter to the Court for resolution. In any motion brought to challenge or sustain a designation as confidential, the burden of establishing confidentiality shall be on the designating party

CHARLES BALLARD, Plaintiff, vs. BRIAN CALDER KERR, M.D.; SILK TOUCH LASER, LLP, an Idaho limited liability partnership; and SILK TOUCH LASER, LLP, an Idaho limited liability partnership, d/b/a SILK TOUCH MED SPA, and/or SILK TOUCH MED SPA AND LASER CENTER, and/or SILK TOUCH MED SPA, LASER, and LIPO OF BOISE, Defendants.	Case No. CV OC 1204792 STIPULATION FOR PROTECTIVE ORDER

The parties to this action have determined that certain information to be filed with the Court or produced during discovery by the parties to this action is confidential (as defined below), the unauthorized disclosure of which would be detrimental to the legitimate commercial or privacy interests of the parties. Accordingly, based upon the stipulation of the parties, upon consideration of the record, and pursuant to the provisions of Rule 26(c) of the Idaho Rule of Civil Procedure, the parties, by their respective counsel, hereby agree as follows:

1. When used in this Order, the word "document" includes, but is not limited to documents produced by any party or nonparty in this action whether pursuant to the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure, subpoena, or by agreement; responses to requests for admissions, requests for production, and/or interrogatories; deposition transcripts and exhibits; and any portions of any court papers which quote from or summarize any of the foregoing.

2. All documents or testimony designated as confidential in accordance with this order shall be used solely for the prosecution and/or defense of this action and for no other purpose.

3. Any party or nonparty producing documents which contain or disclose commercially sensitive information, proprietary information, financial information, or personal health information may designate such documents as confidential. The party or nonparty producing agreed-upon "CONFIDENTIAL" documents shall stamp such documents with the notice "CONFIDENTIAL."

4. Any party or nonparty giving testimony in this action may designate as "CONFIDENTIAL" that portion of the testimony containing or disclosing commercially sensitive information, proprietary information, financial information, or personal health information by advising the reporter of such confidentiality. The reporter shall separately transcribe those portions of the testimony so designated and shall mark the face of the transcript as "CONFIDENTIAL" as the designating person may direct. Each party or nonparty shall have twenty (20) days after receipt of the transcript of any deposition (as certified by the Court Reporter) within which to notify the other party in writing of the portions of the transcript that it wishes to designate as Confidential Information. Prior to the expiration of such twenty (20) day period, all information disclosed during a deposition shall be treated as though designated confidential, unless otherwise agreed by the parties and the witness, or ordered by the Court.

5. Confidential documents or testimony may be referred to in pleadings, motions and briefs, and may be used in depositions and marked as deposition exhibits in this action. However, no such document or testimony shall be used for any of these purposes unless it, and that portion of the court paper in which the confidential information is revealed, is appropriately marked confidential and filed under seal with the Clerk of the Court. If a court pleading refers to a Confidential document but does not reveal the content of the Confidential document the pleading need not be filed under seal (although the Confidential document, if attached, shall be file under seal).

6. Except as set forth above, or with the prior written consent of the party or nonparty asserting confidential treatment, no document or testimony designated as "CONFIDENTIAL" and no information contained in it or obtained from it may be disclosed to any person other than:

a. The Court, its staff, and court reporters;

b. Counsel for the parties in this action and their staff;

c. Independent experts retained by counsel for the parties to assist them in litigation;

d. Potential witnesses; and

e. The parties in this action.

7. Any independent expert or potential witness to whom any document or testimony designated as confidential is disclosed must agree to be bound by the terms of this Protective Order and to be subject to the jurisdiction of this Court for contempt and any other appropriate proceedings in the event of an alleged or actual violation of this Order. Each such person to whom confidential testimony or documents is disclosed must sign a document stating that he or she has read this Order and agrees to comply with its terms and to be subject to the jurisdiction of this Court for any proceedings involving alleged improper use or disclosure of the confidential information.

8. This Order shall not prevent the disclosure of documents to the persons who were the authors or addressees of the documents or are shown as having received copies of them.

9. Documents produced by parties or nonparties (i.e., materials produced from personal or business files, not deposition transcripts, court papers and so on) which are designated confidential and all copies of them (other than exhibits of record) shall be destroyed or returned to the party producing such documents when the action is concluded.

10. The restrictions and obligations relating to documents or testimony designated as confidential in accordance with this Stipulated Protective Order shall not apply to any document or information: 1) which all parties agree in writing were publicly known at the time it was produced; 2) which this Court rules was publicly known at the time it was produced to the receiving party; or 3) which this Court rules has since become publicly known through no fault of the receiving party.

11. If a party or nonparty, through inadvertence, produces any confidential document without labeling or marking or otherwise designating it as such in accordance with the provisions of this Stipulated Protective Order, the designating party may give written notice within 30 days of discovery to the receiving party that the document is deemed confidential and should be treated as such in accordance with the provisions of this Stipulated Protective Order. The receiving party must treat such document as confidential from the date such notice is received. Disclosure, prior to the receipt of such notice, of a confidential document to persons not authorized to receive it shall not be deemed a violation of this Stipulated Protective Order; provided, however, that the party making such disclosure shall notify the designating party in writing of all such unauthorized persons to whom such disclosure was made and shall use best efforts to secure the return of all such confidential documents. The inadvertent disclosure of a confidential document by a producing party without designation at the time of disclosure shall not be treated as a waiver of the confidentiality of the subject matter.

12. Nothing contained in this Stipulated Protective Order shall be construed to require production of a confidential document or testimony that is privileged or otherwise protected from discovery. If a party, through inadvertence, produces a document that it believes is immune from discovery pursuant to the attorney-client privilege and/or the work product privilege, such production shall not be deemed a waiver of any privilege, and the producing party may give written notice to the receiving party that the document or information produced is deemed privileged and that return of the document or information is requested. Upon receipt of such written notice, the receiving party shall immediately gather the original and all copies of the document or information of which the receiving party is aware and shall immediately return the original and all such copies to the producing party. The return of the document(s) and/or information to the producing party shall not preclude the receiving party from later moving the Court to compel production of the returned documents and/or information.

13. Nothing in this Stipulated Protective Order shall prevent any party or nonparty to this action from seeking modification of this Order or from objecting that a document or testimony has been inappropriately classified as confidential. In addition, nothing in this Order shall prevent a party from objecting to discovery which it believes to be otherwise improper. All parties and nonparties shall endeavor in good faith to resolve any dispute over the designation of documents as confidential on an informal basis before presenting the matter to the Court for resolution. In any motion brought to challenge or sustain a designation as confidential, the burden of establishing confidentiality shall be on the designating party.

CHARLES BALLARD, Plaintiff, vs. BRIAN CALDER KERR, M.D.; SILK TOUCH LASER, LLP, an Idaho limited liability partnership; and SILK TOUCH LASER, LLP, an Idaho limited liability partnership, d/b/a SILK TOUCH MED SPA, and/or SILK TOUCH MED SPA AND LASER CENTER, and/or SILK TOUCH MED SPA, LASER, and LIPO OF BOISE, Defendants.	Case No. CV OC 1204792 PROTECTIVE ORDER

The parties to this action have determined that certain information to be filed with the Court or produced during discovery by the parties to this action is confidential (as defined below), the unauthorized disclosure of which would be detrimental to the legitimate commercial or privacy interests of the parties. Accordingly, based upon the stipulation of the parties by their respective counsel, upon consideration of the record, and pursuant to the provisions of Rule 26(c) of the Idaho Rule of Civil Procedure, the Court hereby ORDERS as follows:

1. When used in this Order, the word "document" includes, but is not limited to documents produced by any party or nonparty in this action whether pursuant to the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure, subpoena, or by agreement; responses to requests for admissions, requests for production, and/or interrogatories; deposition transcripts and exhibits; and any portions of any court papers which quote from or summarize any of the foregoing.

2. All documents or testimony designated as confidential in accordance with this order shall be used solely for the prosecution and/or defense of this action and for no other purpose.

3. Any party or nonparty producing documents which contain or disclose commercially sensitive information, proprietary information, financial information, or personal health information may designate such documents as confidential. The party or nonparty producing agreed-upon "CONFIDENTIAL" documents shall stamp such documents with the notice "CONFIDENTIAL."

4. Any party or nonparty giving testimony in this action may designate as "CONFIDENTIAL" that portion of the testimony containing or disclosing commercially sensitive information, proprietary information, financial information, or personal health information by advising the reporter of such confidentiality. The reporter shall separately transcribe those portions of the testimony so designated and shall mark the face of the transcript as "CONFIDENTIAL" as the designating person may direct. Each party or nonparty shall have twenty (20) days after receipt of the transcript of any deposition (as certified by the Court Reporter) within which to notify the other party in writing of the portions of the transcript that it wishes to designate as Confidential Information. Prior to the expiration of such twenty (20) day period, all information disclosed during a deposition shall be treated as though designated confidential, unless otherwise agreed by the parties and the witness, or ordered by the Court.

5. Confidential documents or testimony may be referred to in pleadings, motions and briefs, and may be used in depositions and marked as deposition exhibits in this action. However, no such document or testimony shall be used for any of these purposes unless it, and that portion of the court paper in which the confidential information is revealed, is appropriately marked confidential and filed under seal with the Clerk of the Court. If a court pleading refers to a Confidential document but does not reveal the content of the Confidential document the pleading need not be filed under seal (although the Confidential document, if attached, shall be file under seal).

6. Except as set forth above, or with the prior written consent of the party or nonparty asserting confidential treatment, no document or testimony designated as "CONFIDENTIAL" and no information contained in it or obtained from it may be disclosed to any person other than:

a. The Court, its staff, and court reporters;

b. Counsel for the parties in this action and their staff;

c. Independent experts retained by counsel for the parties to assist them in litigation;

d. Potential witnesses; and

e. The parties in this action.

7. Any independent expert or potential witness to whom any document or testimony designated as confidential is disclosed must agree to be bound by the terms of this Protective Order and to be subject to the jurisdiction of this Court for contempt and any other appropriate proceedings in the event of an alleged or actual violation of this Order. Each such person to whom confidential testimony or documents is disclosed must sign a document stating that he or she has read this Order and agrees to comply with its terms and to be subject to the jurisdiction of this Court for any proceedings involving alleged improper use or disclosure of the confidential information.

8. This Order shall not prevent the disclosure of documents to the persons who were the authors or addressees of the documents or are shown as having received copies of them.

9. Documents produced by parties or nonparties (i.e., materials produced from personal or business files, not deposition transcripts, court papers and so on) which are designated confidential and all copies of them (other than exhibits of record) shall be destroyed or returned to the party producing such documents when the action is concluded.

10. The restrictions and obligations relating to documents or testimony designated as confidential in accordance with this Stipulated Protective Order shall not apply to any document or information: 1) which all parties agree in writing were publicly known at the time it was produced; 2) which this Court rules was publicly known at the time it was produced to the receiving party; or 3) which this Court rules has since become publicly known through no fault of the receiving party.

11. If a party or nonparty, through inadvertence, produces any confidential document without labeling or marking or otherwise designating it as such in accordance with the provisions of this Stipulated Protective Order, the designating party may give written notice within 30 days of discovery to the receiving party that the document is deemed confidential and should be treated as such in accordance with the provisions of this Stipulated Protective Order. The receiving party must treat such document as confidential from the date such notice is received. Disclosure, prior to the receipt of such notice, of a confidential document to persons not authorized to receive it shall not be deemed a violation of this Stipulated Protective Order; provided, however, that the party making such disclosure shall notify the designating party in writing of all such unauthorized persons to whom such disclosure was made and shall use best efforts to secure the return of all such confidential documents. The inadvertent disclosure of a confidential document by a producing party without designation at the time of disclosure shall not be treated as a waiver of the confidentiality of the subject matter.

12. Nothing contained in this Stipulated Protective Order shall be construed to require production of a confidential document or testimony that is privileged or otherwise protected from discovery. If a party, through inadvertence, produces a document that it believes is immune from discovery pursuant to the attorney-client privilege and/or the work product privilege, such production shall not be deemed a waiver of any privilege, and the producing party may give written notice to the receiving party that the document or information produced is deemed privileged and that return of the document or information is requested. Upon receipt of such written notice, the receiving party shall immediately gather the original and all copies of the document or information of which the receiving party is aware and shall immediately return the original and all such copies to the producing party. The return of the document(s) and/or information to the producing party shall not preclude the receiving party from later moving the Court to compel production of the returned documents and/or information.

13. Nothing in this Stipulated Protective Order shall prevent any party or nonparty to this action from seeking modification of this Order or from objecting that a document or testimony has been inappropriately classified as confidential. In addition, nothing in this Order shall prevent a party from objecting to discovery which it believes to be otherwise improper. All parties and nonparties shall endeavor in good faith to resolve any dispute over the designation of documents as confidential on an informal basis before presenting the matter to the Court for resolution. In any motion brought to challenge or sustain a designation as confidential, the burden of establishing confidentiality shall be on the designating party.

Supreme Court of Alabama.
Ben Cleburn HATHCOCK
v.
Marshall WOOD and Reba Wood.

March 16, 2001.

Motorist and passenger in lead vehicle brought personal injury action against driver of following vehicle arising out of rear-end accident. The Circuit Court, Etowah County, No. CV-96-330,William H. Rhea III, J., entered jury verdict awarding $200,000 to the motorist and $600,000 to passenger-husband. Defendant driver appealed. The Supreme Court, Brown, J., held that: (1) whether driver breached duty of care by not anticipating that vehicles he was following might stop was issue for jury; (2) evidence concerning probationary status of plaintiffs' medical expert's professional license improperly related to specific evidence bearing on witness's reputation for veracity; (3) motorist's comment that she and her husband had been unable to afford consistent medical care and that they had been forced to sell their home to pay for husband's treatment properly provided jury with a concise explanation to implication raised by defense counsel that they were exaggerating extent of husband's original injuries or that his current physical condition could not be found to have been proximately caused by the automobile accident, given the 10-month lapse in treatment; (4) motorist was entitled to general damages of $200,000, largely to compensate her for loss of husband's consortium; and (5) passenger was entitled to general damages of $600,000, largely on basis of claim to compensate for mental anguish.

Affirmed.

Award to injured passenger of general damages of $600,000 for accident in which vehicle in which he was a passenger was struck from behind was not excessive, given that bulk of his claim was intended largely to compensate for mental anguish from accident; evidence suggested that passenger frequently experienced intense emotional outbursts and generally suffered from depression because of his chronic pain and his inability to work, that his suicide attempt was another acute indicator of his mental condition, and medical expert suggested that passenger's head injury had caused a permanent change in his cognitive ability, memory, and emotional capacity to handle elements of daily life.

BROWN, Justice.

This negligence case arises out of an automobile accident that occurred on March 19, 1994. The defendant Ben Cleburn Hathcock appeals from a judgment entered upon a jury verdict awarding $600,000 to the plaintiff Marshall Wood and $200,000 to the plaintiff Reba Wood. We affirm.

I. Facts and Procedural History

On the morning of March 19, 1994, Ben Hathcock was traveling west, behind three automobiles, on Highway 278, which connects Piedmont and Gadsden. Dorothy Law was driving the first vehicle, the one the farthest ahead of Hathcock; Reba Wood, with her husband Marshall Wood as her passenger, was driving the second vehicle; an unknown person was driving the third vehicle, the vehicle immediately ahead of Hathcock. According to the evidence presented at trial, Law, driving the lead automobile, activated her left turn signal as she reached the crest of a hill, to indicate her intent to turn into the driveway of a private residence. As Law stopped on the highway to allow an oncoming car to pass, Mrs. Wood prepared to stop behind her. The third vehicle, however, swerved to the right and headed toward the shoulder of the road past the Woods' vehicle. Hathcock, who testified that he did not see Law's turn signal or brake lights, quickly applied his brakes and turned to the right also; his vehicle hit the rear of the Woods' vehicle, at an angle, shoving it into Law's vehicle.

Mr. and Mrs. Wood were injured in the accident. Soon after the accident, they sought medical treatment for their injuries at a hospital emergency room. Mrs. Wood complained of rib and chest pain; she was treated and released that same day. Her medical expenses totalled $1,068.50. Mr. Wood was treated for a neck strain and was given a cervical collar, and he, too, was released that same day. This visit to the hospital provided Mrs. Wood's only treatment, but the record suggests that it merely marked the beginning of Mr. Wood's treatment.

Over the next two years, Mr. Wood sought treatment from several doctors. On April 7, 1994, almost three weeks after the accident, Mr. Wood sought treatment for his neck. He was diagnosed with a neck strain; he did not return for treatment until February 2, 1995. At that time, he was continuing to complain about pain in his neck. On March 22, 1995, Mr. Wood sought treatment from a chiropractor; the chiropractor treated him 34 times, until August 1995. After Mr. Wood had concluded the chiropractic treatments, he sought medical attention, in December 1996, from a new physician. The record suggests that, after that time, Mr. Wood sought regular treatment from several physicians, including a neurosurgeon, for pain in his neck, shoulders, and back, as well as for what he alleges was a deteriorating mental condition.

506 [1] The Woods sued Hathcock on March 18, 1996, alleging that Hathcock had negligently or wantonly caused the 1994 automobile accident. As the trial began, defense counsel suggested in her opening argument that the evidence would show that Mr. Wood's alleged injuries were exaggerated, or, alternatively, were not related to the 1994 accident. She specifically stated that the evidence would show significant gaps of time between treatments, especially during the year following the accident. At the conclusion of the opening statements, the Woods' counsel called Mrs. Wood as his first witness. During her testimony, Mrs. Wood on several occasions referred the Woods' financial condition, indicating that it was poor, and at times suggesting that it caused them to delay Mr. Wood's medical visits. Mrs. Wood also said that as a result of the accident she and her husband had been poor and that their poverty had caused them to lose their house and their upholstery business. Defense counsel, who had previously made a motion in limine to exclude all testimony as to the Woods' poverty, properly objected to Mrs. Wood's statement. [FN1]

> FN1. Defense counsel, however, did not object to statements made by plaintiffs' counsel during his closing argument, in which he asked the jury to compensate the Woods for their injuries so that they could regain their home. Therefore, any error in regard to those statements in the closing argument of the plaintiffs' counsel has not been preserved for review.

The trial court entered a judgment as a matter of law ("JML") in favor of Hathcock on the wantonness claim, but submitted the negligence claim to the jury. The jury returned a verdict in favor of the Woods, awarding them $600,000 for Mr. Wood's physical injuries, mental anguish, and lost earnings and $200,000 for Mrs. Wood's physical injuries and the loss of consortium of her husband. Hathcock moved for a remittitur or, alternatively, for a new trial. The court conducted a hearing on the motion and then denied it. The court entered a judgment on the verdict. This appeal followed.

II. Analysis

[2] Hathcock first argues that the trial court erred in not entering a JML for him on the Woods' negligence claim because, he says, he did not breach a duty of care. He contends that he was driving at a safe speed and was following the vehicle in front of him at a lawful distance, but that he was nevertheless unable to see that the Woods' vehicle was stopping, because his view of its brake lights was obstructed by the vehicle between the Woods and Hathcock.

[3][4][5][6] The standard by which we review an appeal from a ruling on a motion for a JML is materially indistinguishable from the standard by which we review a summary judgment. Simply, this standard is " 'whether the nonmoving party has presented substantial evidence in support of his position.' " Norfolk So. Ry. v. Bradley, 772 So.2d 1147, 1150 (Ala.2000) (quoting K.S. v. Carr, 618 So.2d 707, 713 (Ala.1993)). Evidence is "substantial" only if it is "of such weight and quality that fair-minded persons in the exercise of impartial judgment can reasonably infer the existence of the fact sought to be proved." West v. Founders Life Assurance Co. of Fla., 547 So.2d 870, 871 (Ala.1989). A JML should be entered only when "there is a complete absence of proof on a material issue or where there are no disputed questions of fact for the jury to determine." Norfolk So., supra, 772 So.2d at 1150 (quoting K.S. v. Carr, 618 So.2d at 713). In determining whether material 507 questions of fact exist, the court must view the evidence presented at trial in a light most favorable to the nonmoving party. Given that principle, we must resolve all factual disputes in favor of the Woods.

Hathcock relies, in part, on Tinsley v. Henderson, 613 So.2d 1268 (Ala.1993). In that case, Henderson was driving down a two-lane road, at a speed below the legal limit, when his truck struck and killed Timothy Tinsley, as Timothy was riding his bicycle. Timothy's parents sued Henderson, claiming that he had negligently or wantonly caused the accident. This Court affirmed a summary judgment in Henderson's favor, holding that the Tinsleys had failed to present substantial evidence indicating that Henderson's actions were not reasonably prudent. Tinsley, 613 So.2d at 1271.

This present case is distinguishable from Tinsley, because Hathcock could reasonably have expected that the vehicles traveling in front of him could suddenly slow down or stop at any time; indeed, slowing down or stopping is part of the nature of traffic on a two-lane road. Thus, while Hathcock claims he was confronted with "a sudden emergency not of his making," he was not presented with an unexpected emergency as Henderson was in Tinsley. The jury could reasonably infer from the evidence that Hathcock breached a duty of care by not anticipating that the vehicles he was following might stop. See Martin v. Arnold, 643 So.2d 564, 567 (Ala.1994) ("a motorist is negligent if he fails to discover a vehicle that he reasonably could have discovered in time to avoid injury").

[7] Hathcock also argues that the trial court erred by not allowing defense counsel to cross-examine Dr. Thomas Conboy, one of the Woods' expert witnesses, as to the probationary status of his professional license. The trial court refused to admit this evidence, concluding that its prejudice outweighed its relevance. In Ayres v. Lakeshore Community Hospital, 689 So.2d 39 (Ala.1997), this Court stated the following general rule regarding the cross-examination of an expert witness:

> "[T]he trial judge has substantial discretion as to the questions a party is allowed to ask of an expert witness. The scope and extent of cross-examination [are] vested in the trial court's sound discretion, and this court will not reverse on the basis of the trial court's rulings regarding cross-examination unless an abuse of discretion has occurred."

689 So.2d at 41. Thus, we must determine whether the trial court abused its discretion by curtailing defense counsel's cross-examination as to matters involving Dr. Conboy's probation imposed by his governing professional association.

[8] Hathcock argues in his brief that the evidence of Dr. Conboy's probation was relevant to show bias on the part of Dr. Conboy. The record, however, reveals that during a hearing on pretrial motions defense counsel repeatedly urged the trial court to allow this evidence on the basis that it was germane to the question of Dr. Conboy's veracity. [FN2] The record also shows 508 during the trial defense counsel made a similar argument during her offer of proof: "This is a serious case, and the defendant ought to be able, in fairness, to qualify [Dr. Conboy's] truthfulness...." This Court's consideration of this issue is limited to the grounds raised before the trial court. See Lance, Inc. v. Ramanauskas, 731 So.2d 1204, 1220 (Ala.1999) (stating that "specific objections waive all other objections").

> FN2. On one occasion, defense counsel stated during her offer of proof:
> > "[DEFENSE COUNSEL]: I think this [evidence] is huge, when as an expert-I'm not talking about some little article he wrote somewhere out in the universe. I'm talking engaged as an expert witness, testified falsely, and has admitted to testifying falsely. And I can't, according to the plaintiffs, cross-examine this expert in front of the jury about his giving false testimony in regard to his qualifications. The most basic thing that an expert does is to tell you what he can and can't do."
> We believe that this colloquy, which occurred at the end of the hearing, accurately summarized defense counsel's arguments before the trial court.

[9] The Alabama Rules of Evidence clearly allow cross-examination as to "matters affecting the credibility of the witness." Rule 611(b), Ala R.Evid . Rule 608, however, requires the trial judge to keep a watchful eye on evidence concerning the character or conduct of a witness. Rule 608(b), which governs evidence of specific conduct by a witness, states:

> "Specific instances of the conduct of a witness, for the purpose of attacking or supporting the witness's credibility, other than conviction of crime as provided in Rule 609, may be not be inquired into on cross-examination of the witness nor proved by extrinsic evidence."

The only kind of evidence that may be presented as to an expert's "character for truthfulness" is evidence regarding the expert's "general reputation in the community for untruthfulness," or opinion testimony from another competent witness. Charles W. Gamble, McElroy's Alabama Evidence § 142.01(3) (5th ed.1996). The excluded evidence in this case, however, is rather specific in that it pertains to certain events that led to Dr. Conboy's being placed on probation by his licensing board. Because specific evidence bearing on a witness's reputation for veracity is forbidden by Rule 608(b), Ala.R.Evid, we conclude that the trial court did not abuse its discretion by preventing defense counsel from exploring these matters. We further conclude that the trial court did not abuse its discretion in excluding evidence of Dr. Conboy's probation, which is inextricably intertwined with these previous acts.

[10] Next, Hathcock argues that the trial court erred by allowing Mrs. Wood to comment on the Woods' poor financial condition. He contends that her comments were unfairly prejudicial and requires a reversal of the judgment. We disagree.

[11][12] "It is well settled that it 'is highly prejudicial to a defendant for the jury to be improperly informed as to the ... poverty of the plaintiff.' " Bennett v. Brewer, 682 So.2d 448, 449 (Ala.1996) (quoting Liberty Nat'l Life Ins. Co. v. Kendrick, 282 Ala. 227, 230, 210 So.2d 701, 703 (1968)). Consequently, evidence of this character is generally inadmissible, see Miller v. Dacovich, 355 So.2d 1109, 1110 (Ala.1978); Johnson v. Harrison, 404 So.2d 337, 339-40 (Ala.1981); Mutual Sav. Life Ins. Co. v. Smith, 765 So.2d 652, 654 (Ala.Civ.App.1998); and McElroy's Alabama Evidence, supra, § 189.05(1). Nevertheless, we have recognized that evidence of this character "may be relevant and admissible when it goes to a material issue in the case." Johnson v. Harrison, 404 So.2d 337, 339 (Ala.1981).

Mrs. Wood's testimony as to the loss of the family business was admissible for purposes of proving the damages claimed, because it supported an inference that the Woods lost the business because injuries he sustained in the March 19, 1994, accident caused Mr. Wood to be unable to work. Therefore, Mrs. Wood's comments concerning the Woods' poverty tended directly to prove Mr. Wood's diminished earning capacity; thus, they were relevant to a material issue in the case. See generally Carnival Cruise Lines, Inc. v. Snoddy, 457 So.2d 379, 381 (Ala.1984) ("In a 509 personal injury action, a plaintiff is entitled to recover both the value of the work time lost prior to trial ('lost earnings') and the value of the reduction in his ability to earn a living ('impairment of earning capacity').").

[13][14] Evidence regarding a party's financial condition may also be admissible when the party's opponent has "opened the door by commenting upon or asking questions concerning [the] party's financial standing." McElroy's Alabama Evidence, supra, § 189.05(2)(c). Rebuttal evidence, however, must not be "substantially unconnected with the [previously admitted] illegal evidence." Cook v. Latimer, 274 Ala. 283, 288, 147 So.2d 831, 835 (1962).

Counsel for Hathcock suggested in her opening statement that the temporal gaps in Mr. Wood's medical treatment called into question his claim that his injuries were caused by the automobile accident or called into question whether his injuries were as severe as he maintained they were. In Alabama Power Co. v. Bruce, 209 Ala. 423, 96 So. 346 (1923), this Court addressed similar facts with respect to a plaintiff who underwent a surgical procedure that he alleged had been made necessary by an accident he alleged had been caused by the defendant 10 months earlier. In that case, defense counsel commented during closing arguments that the plaintiff's delay in seeking treatment suggested that his injuries either were not caused by the accident or were not as serious as he had claimed. Plaintiff's counsel responded in his closing argument by stating that the plaintiff had not sought medical treatment because of the poverty of the plaintiff's family. The defendant argued on appeal that the statements of the plaintiff's counsel were improper and warranted an order granting a new trial. This Court disagreed, holding that the poverty argument by the plaintiff's counsel was not improper, given the prior suggestion by defense counsel regarding the plaintiff's failure to obtain immediate medical treatment. Alabama Power, 209 Ala. at 427, 96 So. at 349. In that case, defense counsel's remarks made the plaintiff's poverty evidence relevant for an admissible purpose.

We conclude that the principle applied in Alabama Power Co. v. Bruce also applies in the present case. Defense counsel's opening statements suggested to the jury that the evidence would show that Mr. Wood did not see a physician concerning his injuries for almost 10 months after visiting the doctor on April 7, 1994. The thrust of this statement was to suggest either that Mr. Wood was exaggerating the extent of his original injuries or that, given the nearly 10-month lapse in treatment, his current physical condition could not be found to have been proximately caused by the automobile accident. In response to these remarks and in anticipation of defense counsel's theory of the case, Mrs. Wood testified that she and her husband had been unable to afford consistent medical care and that they had been forced to sell their home to pay for his treatment once they could no longer ignore the necessity for it. Mrs. Wood's testimony as to the Woods' inability to afford medical care, therefore, provided the jury with a concise explanation for why her husband let almost 10 months pass without seeking treatment for his maladies. Further, her testimony regarding the sale of the family home explained why they could later afford adequate treatment. Consequently, given the facts of this case, we conclude that the trial court did not err by allowing this evidence.

[15][16] Finally, Hathcock argues that the $800,000 award of compensatory damages was excessive. Specifically, he contends that the evidence did not support the individual awards to Mr. and Mrs. Wood 510 totalling $600,000 and $200,000 respectively.

[17][18] We have consistently held that jury verdicts carry a presumption of correctness and that that presumption is strengthened when the trial court denies a motion for a new trial. Northeast Alabama Reg'l Med. Ctr. v. Owens, 584 So.2d 1360, 1366 (Ala.1991). The appellate courts of this state do not favor setting aside a jury verdict if doing so can be avoided. Id. When we review a jury verdict on the ground of excessiveness, our review focuses on the plaintiff, and we must ask what the evidence supports in terms of the loss or harm suffered by the plaintiff. Daniels v. East Alabama Paving, Inc., 740 So.2d 1033, 1044 (Ala.1999). In the absence of a flawed verdict, no statute allows us to invade the jury's province to award compensatory damages. Id.

The evidence suggests that Mrs. Wood incurred medical expenses totalling $1,068.50. The evidence as to the total medical expenses incurred by Mr. Wood is unclear. Although evidence indicated that Mr. Wood had incurred medical expenses totalling $4,358.25, that amount was payable only to a single physician. The record indicates that Mr. Wood saw numerous other medical and psychological professionals, but we are unable to determine the cost of those services from the record before us. Whatever the value or the cost of those services may have been, it is apparent that the bulk of Mr. Wood's award, like the bulk of Mrs. Wood's award, was intended to compensate for more than medical costs. While Mrs. Wood's damages award was apparently intended largely to compensate her for the loss of her husband's consortium, Mr. Wood's award entailed elements of lost earnings (based on his testimony that he had projected the year 2013 as his year of retirement) and, importantly, mental anguish.

Regarding the award to Mrs. Wood, we note that the jury heard a substantial amount of evidence regarding Mr. Wood's mental condition after the accident. Dr. Conboy, testifying for the Woods, concluded that the head injury Mr. Wood had suffered in the accident had altered his personality and had caused him to become emotionally fragile. The evidence suggests that Mr. Wood's condition left him permanently unable to support, comfort, and care for Mrs. Wood. Consequently, we are reluctant to disturb the jury's award to her.

MuchofMr.Wood's$600,000compensatory-damages award was apparently attributable to his claim for damages for mental anguish. With respect to awards to compensate for mental anguish, we have stated:

> "A physical injury or physical symptom is not a prerequisite for a finding of mental anguish. Kmart Corp. v. Kyles, 723 So.2d 572, 578 (Ala.1998). A plaintiff is required only to present some evidence of mental anguish, and once the plaintiff has done so the question whether the plaintiff has suffered mental anguish and, if so, the question of how much compensation the plaintiff is entitled to for the mental anguish are questions for the jury, Kyles, 723 So.2d at 578."

Wal-Mart Stores, Inc. v. Goodman, 789 So.2d 166, 178 (Ala.2000).

The record contains ample evidence regarding Mr. Wood's mental condition following the accident. The evidence suggests that he frequently experienced intense emotional outbursts and generally suffered from depression because of his chronic pain and his inability to work. Mr. Wood's expert testimony suggested that his head injury had caused a change in his cognitive ability, 511 his memory, and his emotional capacity to handle elements of daily life. The evidence also suggests that Mr. Woods attempted suicide in 1998; a suicide attempt is another acute indicator of his mental condition. Considering the totality of this evidence, we are reluctant to disturb a judgment based on the jury's verdict.

III. Conclusion

We conclude that the trial court properly denied the defendant's motion for a remittitur or a new trial. The judgment is affirmed.

AFFIRMED.

Patient brought action against physician for alleged medical malpractice arising from physician's failure to diagnose and treat her heart attack. The Circuit Court, Calhoun County, James C. Kingsley, J., entered judgment in favor of physician, and patient appealed. The Court of Appeals, Michael J. Kelly, P.J., held that: (1) evidence supported finding that physician was not negligent, and (2) error arising when expert witness was cross-examined by evidence that prior medical malpractice action had been brought against him was harmless.

Affirmed.

Plaintiff Eva Heshelman appeals from a jury verdict of no cause of action in favor of defendants Kenneth Lombardi, M.D., and Battle Creek Medical Associates, P.C. Plaintiff sued defendants for alleged medical malpractice arising from Dr. Lombardi's failure to diagnose and treat her heart attack. Following a four-day trial, the jury found that Dr. Lombardi had not been negligent in his diagnosis or treatment of plaintiff and rendered a verdict for defendants.

Plaintiff testified that on February 26, 1985, at around 11:00 a.m. she felt sudden chest pains and pain in her left arm. Plaintiff was fifty-nine years old and had a prior history of atherosclerotic artery disease. Plaintiff had undergone an operation in 1982 to remove atherosclerotic obstructions. Plaintiff's family had a history of heart disease. Plaintiff also smoked and had been smoking for the past thirty-five years.

After feeling chest pains, plaintiff went to see Dr. Lombardi. She testified that when she arrived at Lombardi's office she was perspiring and had almost fainted. When Lombardi examined her, she told him that she was suffering pain in her chest and in her left arm. According to plaintiff, Lombardi did not question her in detail about her symptoms. Plaintiff testified that Lombardi told her that the causes of her complaints were that she was working too hard, was overweight, and was smoking too much. Dr. Lombardi did not give plaintiff an electrocardiogram.

75 When plaintiff returned home, her pain did not subside. At around 7:00 p.m. that evening, plaintiff went to a hospital emergency*605 room, where she was diagnosed as suffering from a myocardial infarction. Plaintiff's heart was damaged as a result of this infarction. A cardiac catheterization indicated that her right coronary artery was totally occluded. An angiogram performed in April of 1987 indicated that the artery was still occluded but that her other blood vessels were normal and her overall heart function was good.

At trial, plaintiff's expert, Dr. Crane, testified that a physician confronted with a patient complaining of chest pains should first check the patient's medical history. Crane faulted Dr. Lombardi's failure to obtain adequate information on plaintiff's history. Crane testified that Lombardi's failure to adequately check plaintiff's history led to inadequate treatment and diagnosis. In Dr. Crane's opinion, an electrocardiogram performed at the time of Lombardi's examination would have demonstrated a cardiac abnormality.

Dr. Lombardi testified that when he examined plaintiff she complained only of mild tightness in her chest and did not mention pain in her arms. Lombardi testified that he had taken a proper history from plaintiff and that his method of charting was common practice. Lombardi said he examined plaintiff and listened to her heart and that she was not sweating or exhibiting other symptoms of a heart attack. Lombardi diagnosed plaintiff as having a respiratory infection. Lombardi testified that he was familiar with the standard of care applicable to specialists in internal medicine and that he had not violated that standard of care.

Defendants also presented an expert witness, Dr. Dykman, who testified regarding plaintiff's damages. Dr. Dykman specifically stated that he was *76 not testifying regarding the standard of care or any breach thereof.

Following the jury verdict in favor of defendants, plaintiff moved for a new trial based upon alleged instructional error and the verdict being against the great weight of the evidence. The court denied plaintiff a new trial. Plaintiff appeals as of right, raising four issues.

I

The first issue we address is whether the jury's verdict was against the great weight of the evidence. Plaintiff claims that the trial court erred in not granting her a new trial on this basis. We find no error.

[1][2][3] Whether to grant a motion for a new trial is within the trial court's discretion. Termaat v. Bohn Aluminum & Brass Co., 362 Mich. 598, 602, 107 N.W.2d 783 (1961). The standard of review is whether the verdict was against the overwhelming weight of the evidence. Troyanowski v. Village of Kent City, 175 Mich.App. 217, 223, 437 N.W.2d 266 (1988). In determining whether the evidence was overwhelming, this Court should give deference to the trial court's unique ability to judge the weight and credibility of the testimony and should not substitute its judgment for that of the jury unless the record reveals a miscarriage of justice. Id.

[4] Review of the record does not indicate that the verdict was contrary to the overwhelming evidence. The trial presented a credibility contest between plaintiff Eva Heshelman and defendant Dr. Lombardi. Plaintiff testified as to one set of facts, which indicated that she suffered from severe symptoms and that Lombardi gave her only a cursory examination. Lombardi testified that plaintiff complained only of mild tightness in her *77 chest and, after a complete examination, she exhibited no symptoms of heart problems. Plaintiff's expert testified that, based upon plaintiff's testimony, Dr. Lombardi violated the necessary standard of care by not obtaining an adequate history from plaintiff and that an electrocardiogram would have revealed plaintiff's condition. Lombardi testified that he did not violate the standard of care and that his examination of plaintiff did not indicate that an electrocardiogram was necessary. The jury evidently found Dr. Lombardi's testimony more credible and found that he had not been negligent in his treatment of plaintiff. We are bound by the assessment of the witnesses' credibility made by the jury and the trial court.

Plaintiff argues that the trial court erred in instructing the jury, claiming several instructional errors. We find no error requiring reversal.

[5] The court gave the following instruction regarding the testimony of expert witnesses.

> In this case, a number of doctors have given their opinions as experts in the field of internal medicine. Experts are permitted to give their opinions as to matters on which they are experts. You should consider each expert opinion received in evidence, but you are not bound to follow the opinion of an expert. You may give each opinion whatever weight you believe it deserves.
> In determining whether or not to believe the opinion of an expert or which opinion to believe, you should consider the reasons and facts upon which the expert bases his or her opinion and whether those facts are true. You should also consider the qualifications and believability of the expert in light of all the evidence in the case.

*78 This instruction is essentially the same as CJI 5:2:12, now CJI2d 5.10.

Plaintiff argues that this instruction was erroneous under MCR 2.516(D)(3), which provides:

> (3) Whenever the SJI committee recommends that no instruction be given on a particular matter, the court shall not give an instruction on the matter unless it specifically finds for reasons stated on the record that
> (a) the instruction is necessary to state the applicable law accurately, and
> (b) the matter is not adequately covered by other pertinent standard jury instructions.

Plaintiff points out that the comments to SJI2d 4.10 recommend that no instruction on "weighing expert testimony" be given. Plaintiff reasons that the court erred by giving this instruction regarding expert testimony without stating reasons on the record for this particular instruction.

We note that CJI 5:2:12, upon which the complained-of instruction was patterned, is followed by commentary also recommending that no instruction be given regarding "weighing expert testimony." From this, it is evident that the committee did not consider CJI 5:2:12 to be such a "weighing" instruction and one not to be recommended. Thus, the instruction given by the trial judge, which tracked CJI 5:2:12, was not a disfavored weighing instruction, and the court did not need to comply with MCR 2.516(D)(3) in order to read it to the jury.

[6] Plaintiff claims that the court erred in giving SJI2d 30.04, which provides:

> There are risks inherent in medical treatment that are not within a doctor's control. A doctor is not liable merely because of an adverse result. *79 However, a doctor is liable if the doctor is negligent and that negligence is a proximate cause of an adverse result.

Plaintiff argues that this instruction was inappropriate because plaintiff never argued that the mere fact of her injuries was proof of malpractice. In Jones v. Porretta, 428 Mich. 132, 146, 405 N.W.2d 863 (1987), our Supreme Court noted that where a plaintiff makes such an argument a similar instruction could be given.

> Where proofs put the significance of an adverse result in issue, it may be more appropriate to explain the physician's duty of care by advising the jury that there are inherent risks in medical treatment which are beyond the physician's control.

Despite the fact that this instruction may not have been entirely appropriate for this fact situation, we find that any error which resulted was minimal and had no effect on the verdict. At worst, this instruction was "nothing more than an innocuous recitation of what a reasonable juror already understands." Jones, supra, at p. 144, 405 N.W.2d 863. This instruction did not have any significant effect on the verdict.

[7] Plaintiff also argues that the trial court improperly refused to give SJI2d 607 6.01, regarding failure to produce evidence or a witness. SJI2d 6.01a provides:

> The [plaintiff/defendant] in this case has not offered [the testimony of _____/_____]. As this evidence was under the control of the [plaintiff/defendant] and could have been produced by [him/her], and no reasonable excuse for the [plaintiff's/defendant's] failure to produce the evidence was given, you may infer *80 that the evidence would have been adverse to the [plaintiff/defendant].

Plaintiff argues that, because defendants had their expert witness, Dr. Dykman, review plaintiff's medical records to form an opinion regarding whether Dr. Lombardi breached the standard of care and then did not present Dykman's testimony regarding malpractice, plaintiff was entitled to the inference that his testimony would have been damaging to defendants.

Review of the record reveals that the parties deposed Dr. Dykman in March of 1988 and that at that time he had not formed an opinion as to whether malpractice had occurred. Due to this lack of information regarding Dykman's opinion, plaintiff's counsel asserted that he would object to the admission of testimony by Dykman regarding the breach of the standard of care unless he was given this information prior to trial. The day before trial, Dykman testified by way of a video deposition regarding Dr. Lombardi's treatment of plaintiff and whether it breached the standard of care. Because plaintiff's counsel did not have adequate time to conduct further discovery regarding Dykman's opinion as to malpractice, defense counsel offered Dykman's testimony only with regard to plaintiff's damages, and not in regard to the standard of care or its breach. In his cross-examination of Dykman, plaintiff's counsel emphasized that his testimony did not go to the standard of care or its breach, and did not question Dykman as to whether any malpractice occurred.

There is no indication that defendants concealed the evidence of Dykman's opinion from plaintiff because it was damaging to defendants. This case is not analogous to the situation where a witness is unavailable due to the actions of a party. Plaintiff81 had the opportunity to question Dr. Dykman regarding his opinion as to breaches of the standard of care, but chose not to do so. Plaintiff was not entitled to the inference that Dykman's testimony regarding whether malpractice occurred would have favored plaintiff. The trial court properly refused to give SJI2d 6.01a.

III

[8] Plaintiff argues that this case must be remanded for an evidentiary hearing because of newly discovered evidence which had been concealed by the misconduct of defense counsel. Plaintiff argues that this evidence is favorable and that its absence entitles her to a new trial. The newly discovered evidence in question is the previously mentioned opinion of Dr. Dykman regarding malpractice. Plaintiff argues that Dykman had concluded that malpractice occurred; defendants claim that Dykman had concluded that no malpractice occurred. The available record does not reveal the nature of Dykman's opinion in this matter.

Plaintiff did not object to this alleged concealment at trial, despite the fact that plaintiff's counsel was evidently aware of any concealment. Nor did plaintiff object to this claimed concealment of evidence in his motion for a new trial. Since plaintiff made no objection below, the issue was not addressed by the trial court and there is no record from which to review the issue. Thus, plaintiff has not properly preserved this issue for appeal. Janda v. Detroit, 175 Mich.App. 120, 129, 437 N.W.2d 326 (1989).

Additionally, we note that MCR 2.611(A)(1)(f) provides:

> A new trial may be granted to all or some of the 82 parties, on all or some of the issues, whenever their substantial rights are materially affected, for any of the following reasons:
>
> (f) Material evidence, newly discovered, which could not with reasonable *608 diligence have been discovered and produced at trial.

The evidence in question was not newly discovered. As previously noted, plaintiff could have questioned Dr. Dykman regarding this matter, but chose not to. With any degree of reasonable diligence, plaintiff could have discovered this evidence and produced it or obtained a ruling at trial.

IV

Plaintiff argues that reversal is required because the trial court permitted defense counsel to cross-examine plaintiff's expert, Dr. Crane, regarding an unrelated malpractice suit brought against Crane. We agree that this was erroneous, but find that reversal is not required.

We first address defendants' contention that, by failing to raise the issue in her motion for a new trial, plaintiff did not properly preserve it for review. We disagree. Defendants rely on Palmiter v. Monroe Co. Bd. of Road Comm'rs, 149 Mich.App. 678, 692, n. 2, 387 N.W.2d 388 (1986), and Krzysiak v. Hinton, 104 Mich.App. 134, 139, 304 N.W.2d 823 (1981), for the proposition that an issue is waived unless raised in a motion for a new trial.

In Krzysiak, supra, at p. 139, 304 N.W.2d 823, the Court stated that, where the plaintiffs challenged, for the first time on appeal, the trial court's refusal to give certain voir dire questions, the plaintiffs were obligated to raise this issue in their motion for a new trial in order to preserve it for appeal.

> 83 Plaintiffs were obligated to raise this issue in their motion for new trial and failure to do so constitutes waiver of the question on appeal. Failure to raise the issue in the motion for new trial deprives us on appeal of the benefit of the trial court's view regarding its reason for denial.

Our interpretation of the Krzysiak Court's language indicates that the panel did not find the issue unpreserved solely due to the failure to raise it in the new trial motion, but because the challenging party did nothing below to create a record regarding the issue raised on appeal, either by objection or motion on the record.

[9][10] Certain motions, such as challenges to verdicts on the ground that they are against the great weight of the evidence, must be raised in a motion for a new trial in order to preserve them for appeal. People v. Cage, 83 Mich.App. 534, 538, 269 N.W.2d 213 (1978); People v. Mattison, 26 Mich.App. 453, 459, 182 N.W.2d 604 (1970). The purpose behind this rule is clear: if these issues were not previously raised in this manner, there would be no record regarding them to review on appeal. However, issues regarding the admission or exclusion of evidence are properly preserved by a timely objection on the record. MRE 103 provides in relevant part:

> (a) Effect of Erroneous Ruling. Error may not be predicated upon a ruling which admits or excludes evidence unless a substantial right of the party is affected, and
> (1) Objection. In case the ruling is one admitting evidence, a timely objection or motion to strike appears of record, stating the specific ground of objection, if the specific ground was not apparent from the context; or
>
> (2) Offer of Proof. In case the ruling is one excluding evidence, the substance of the evidence 84 was made known to the court by offer or was apparent from the context within which questions were asked.
> (b) Record of Offer and Ruling. The court may add any other or further statement which shows the character of the evidence, the form in which it was offered, the objection made, and the ruling thereon. It may direct the making of an offer in question and answer form.

[11] A timely objection on the record, with a response by opposing counsel and a ruling by the trial judge, should create an adequate record from which to review the admission or exclusion of evidence. There is no additional requirement that a party restate his evidentiary objections anew in his motion for a new trial. We reject the contrary assertions from Palmiter and Krzysiak.

*609 [12] The scope of cross-examination, like the admission of evidence, is a matter within the trial court's discretion, and the court's determination should not be reversed absent an abuse of that discretion. Wilson v. Stilwill, 411 Mich. 587, 599, 309 N.W.2d 898 (1981). During his cross-examination of Dr. Crane, defense counsel questioned him regarding a medical malpractice case in which he had been sued. The trial court permitted this line of questioning over plaintiff's objection, ruling that it was admissible as it went to the weight and credibility of Dr. Crane's testimony.

[13][14] We find that the trial judge abused his discretion by permitting this line of questioning. Evidence of prior malfeasance by a witness is admissible only under very specific circumstances and for very specific reasons. MRE 608(b); MRE 404(b). Under MRE 608(b), specific instances of a witness' conduct may be inquired into on cross-examination only where they are probative of truthfulness or 85 untruthfulness, and only to inquire into that witness' or another witness' truthful character. The fact that Dr. Crane was named a defendant in a malpractice suit is in no way probative of his truthfulness. Nor was this fact probative of Dr. Crane's competency or knowledge. Highly competent and knowledgeable physicians have been sued for malpractice. Mere unproven accusations of malpractice stated in a complaint cannot be used as a basis for attacking a physician's knowledge and credibility. Such allegations of malpractice are analogous to unproven charges of criminal activity. Arrests and charges not resulting in conviction may not be used for impeachment. People v. Falkner, 389 Mich. 682, 695, 209 N.W.2d 193 (1973). Similarly, the mere fact that someone has been named as a defendant in a malpractice lawsuit may not be used to impeach his credibility as an expert witness. See Ecco, Ltd. v. Balimoy Mfg. Co., Inc., 179 Mich.App. 748, 752, 446 N.W.2d 546 (1989).

[15][16] Despite this error, we find that reversal is not required. To determine whether an error is harmless, two inquiries must be made: (1) whether the error is so offensive to the maintenance of a sound judicial process that it can never be regarded as harmless; and (2) whether this Court can declare a belief that the error was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt. People v. Robinson, 386 Mich. 551, 563, 194 N.W.2d 709 (1972). The admission of this improper impeachment question and Dr. Crane's answers was not so offensive to the maintenance of a sound judicial process that we could never regard it as harmless. See People v. Allen, 429 Mich. 558, 612, 420 N.W.2d 499 (1988). We also conclude that, in light of the testimony presented at trial, the suppression of this question and Dr. Crane's answer would have had no effect on the jury's verdict. Any error did not prejudice plaintiff's case 86 and, therefore, was harmless beyond a reasonable doubt.

Affirmed.

SULLIVAN, J., concurred.

GLENN S. ALLEN, Judge (concurring).

While I concur with the majority's opinion, I write separately to express my disagreement with defendants' interpretation of Krzysiak v. Hinton, 104 Mich.App. 134, 304 N.W.2d 823 (1981), and Palmiter v. Monroe Co. Bd. of Road Comm'rs, 149 Mich.App. 678, 692, n. 2, 387 N.W.2d 388 (1986). I do not construe Krzysiak or Palmiter, supra, as authority for the proposition that the failure to raise in a motion for a new trial the propriety of a trial court's ruling on requested jury instructions or the admissibility of evidence in itself renders the question unpreserved for appellate review. In Krzysiak, counsel did not object on the record when the trial court declined to ask certain voir dire jury questions. Thus, in the absence of something in the record by way of an objection, a motion, or a subsequent motion for a new trial, the issue of the propriety of the court's ruling is unpreserved.

The Palmiter panel's reliance on Krzysiak was made only by way of a footnote. Because the reference was fleeting and thereafter the Court discussed the issue on *610 its merits, I consider Palmiter enfeebled authority for the rule stated.

No. 97-1384.
Clarification, Certification and Stay of Mandate Denied Sept. 11, 1998.

Mother whose son was brain damaged during birth brought medical malpractice action against doctor. The Circuit Court, St. Lucie County, Rupert Jasen Smith, Senior Judge, entered judgment on jury verdict for mother. Doctor appealed. The District Court of Appeal, Warner, J., held that: (1) record supported trial court's finding that reason for seeking to exercise peremptory challenge against black veniremember was pretextual, and (2) defense counsel opened door to attacks on his ethics by seeking to impeach experts with details regarding cases in which he had represented them.

ON MOTION FOR REHEARING

WARNER, Judge.

We deny the appellant's motion for rehearing, grant appellee's motion, grant the motion for clarification and withdraw our previously issued opinion and substitute the following in its place.

After a heated trial in this medical malpractice case, the jury awarded appellee/Priscilla Byrd $7,633,000 as compensation for brain damage to her son which occurred during his birth. Appellant, Dr. William King, contends that the trial was flawed because the trial court: (1) refused to permit the exercise of a peremptory challenge as to one juror, (2) permitted counsel to attack defense counsel's ethics during the examination of two witnesses, (3) permitted improper closing argument, and (4) erred in the application of its ruling on the statute of limitations. We affirm on all issues.

[1] In voir dire, the defense sought to exercise a peremptory challenge on the first juror, Tisha Williams. Upon initial questioning, Ms. Byrd's attorney asked for Ms. Williams's background, and she revealed that she worked for the sheriff's department, had twin five-year-old girls, and was single. Defense counsel's voir dire was very short. In fact, he individually questioned only Ms. Williams and one other juror. He prefaced 833 his questioning with a statement to the jury regarding the case and specifically questioned whether the jurors could lay aside sympathy for Ms. Byrd's six-year-old brain damaged son. As to Ms. Williams, he asked her whether, after having seen Ms. Byrd's little son, she could determine that Ms. Byrd was not entitled to any money if the evidence showed that the doctor didn't do anything wrong. Ms. Williams responded that she could do that. He asked her how she generally felt about medical malpractice, to which she replied that she had never dealt with anything like it. Finally, he asked her whether she could listen to complicated medical testimony in a week and one-half long case and render a verdict. Ms. Williams stated that she could.

During the jury selection process, defense counsel exercised a peremptory challenge as to Ms. Williams. Plaintiff's counsel objected, stating that Ms. Williams was a black woman who had said she could be fair. In response, defense counsel stated that:

> I'm entitled to strike anybody, if I don't like the way they cut their hair. But this is a single mother, virtually the same age, with two young children. She's going to identify, whether she's black, white or anything else. She's a single mother with young children, that's the last person I would want on the jury, regardless of their color.

The court responded that:

Well, the computer picks these jurors and you've got to give me a better reason to excuse her than she's a single mother with two children.

MR. GARY (plaintiff's counsel): If I may, your Honor, she's the one that said, when he asked her, gave her the microphone, she was one of the few, could you walk out of here and find for the defendant against this lady. She said, yes, I could do it.

MR. SPICER (defense counsel): I don't believe it, Your Honor. And I've given you my reasons. If you took twenty lawyers and you didn't say what color she was, they would tell you they don't want a single mother with two young children on this jury. There would not be a defense attorney that would want this juror on their trial.

Defense counsel renewed his request to exercise a peremptory strike as to Ms. Williams at the end of jury selection, but the court again denied the motion.

Melbourne v. State, 679 So.2d 759, 764 (Fla.1996), clarified the process for challenging peremptory strikes of jurors on the grounds of racial bias:

A party objecting to the other side's use of a peremptory challenge on racial grounds must: a) make a timely objection on that basis, b) show that the venireperson is a member of a distinct racial group, and c) request that the court ask the striking party its reason for the strike. If these initial requirements are met (step 1), the court must ask the proponent of the strike to explain the reason for the strike.

At this point, the burden of production shifts to the proponent of the strike to come forward with a race-neutral explanation (step 2). If the explanation is facially race-neutral and the court believes that, given all the circumstances surrounding the strike, the explanation is not a pretext, the strike will be sustained (step 3). The court's focus in step 3 is not on the reasonableness of the explanation but rather its genuineness.

(footnotes omitted). The supreme court pointedly limited the review of appellate courts in such determinations on challenges to peremptory strikes:

Accordingly, reviewing courts should keep in mind two principles when enforcing the above guidelines. First, peremptories are presumed to be exercised in a nondiscriminatory manner. Second, the trial court's decision turns primarily on an assessment of credibility and will be affirmed on appeal unless clearly erroneous. The right to an impartial jury guaranteed by article I, section 16, is best safeguarded not by an arcane maze of reversible error traps, but by reason and common sense.

Id. at 764-65 (footnotes omitted)(emphasis added). Applying the principles of Melbourne to this case, we find that plaintiff's attorney adequately complied with step one 834 by objecting that Ms. Williams was an African-American woman. Without really waiting for the court to request an explanation, in accordance with step two, the defense offered that its reason for striking Ms. Williams was because she was a single mother with two small children who might identify with the plaintiff. That is a race-neutral reason for the challenge (even though it is not gender-neutral). See Smith v. State, 662 So.2d 1336, 1338 (Fla. 2d DCA 1995). The court responded by stating that the reason was insufficient to justify excusing her. We interpret this as a determination that the reason was not genuine and was a pretext, thereby fulfilling step three of the analysis.

Having reviewed the record, we cannot conclude that the decision was clearly erroneous. Defense counsel began his explanation of the reason for striking by stating that he could strike anyone even if he didn't like the cut of their hair. This may have evinced to the court a lack of credibility of any of the following explanations. In addition, the defense questioned Ms. Williams regarding her ability to put aside sympathy, to which she responded that she could. In questioning, the defense seemed more interested in Ms. Williams's ability to understand the trial proceedings than her sympathy for Ms. Byrd.

As appellate judges, we were not at the trial. We did not see the expressions, hear the tones of voices, or observe the general dynamics of the courtroom. That is why Melbourne left decisions with respect to peremptory challenges to the trial court. Because those decisions turn on credibility determinations which encompass the assessment of all the circumstances and dynamics of the trial setting, appellate review is very narrow indeed. We must respect that discretion. Since we cannot find that the decision is clearly erroneous, we affirm.

[2] The next point raised is more troubling to us from the standpoint of attorney conduct. Appellant complains of attacks on defense counsel's ethics during the trial. Defense counsel opened the door to such attacks because of what we perceive to be highly questionable conduct at trial. Two of plaintiff's experts were former clients of defense counsel and he sought to impeach these experts with details regarding the cases in which he had represented them. When plaintiff's counsel objected, particularly with respect to the ethics of such an attack, defense counsel informed the court that he had been in contact with the Florida Bar and had received an opinion over the phone that this type of questioning was not unethical as long as privileged information was not brought up.[FN1] The court allowed general questions as to the first doctor.

> FN1. We are unaware of any rule that allows admissibility of evidence to be determined by a telephone call to the Florida Bar.

Later, another medical expert for the plaintiff, a neuropsychologist, testified to the injuries sustained by Ms. Byrd's son. During cross-examination, defense counsel went into questions about his background, ability and competence:

> Q. Doctor, is there anything about your background that Mr. Lucas did not talk about that reflects upon your credibility and your ability?
>
> A. Maybe you need to refresh my memory.
> Q. I'll be glad to do so if you can't think of anything.

Plaintiff's counsel objected, and during a bench conference, it became known that defense counsel had represented this doctor in a grievance proceeding filed by a patient. The doctor had been put on probation, was not allowed to see female patients without supervision, and was charged with incompetence. He was on probation at the time of the examination conducted on Ms. Byrd's son. At the bench conference, plaintiff's counsel objected to this line of questioning and maintained that it was conduct unbecoming of a lawyer. Defense counsel replied that the grievance was "public record," and that any lawyer in the state could use any public record. Plaintiff's counsel objected that the grievance was irrelevant and immaterial. Nevertheless, the court decided to let it in.

835 Defense counsel then questioned the doctor extensively about the charges filed by the State Board of Psychological Examiners, alleging that he was incompetent and had committed an act constituting sexual battery on a patient. The doctor admitted that he was charged but stated that he was acquitted or put on probation. When pressed, he said "I was put on probation. They didn't find me guilty. There's no proof of it. Your firm represented me, you should know." Defense counsel persisted in going through the entire grievance, including the fact that, as part of his probation, the doctor had to put letters in female patients' files regarding the charges. The doctor protested that what was done was pursuant to defense counsel's firm's advice. The doctor questioned what this had to do with the diagnosis he offered in connection with this case, which is a question we also ask.

On redirect, plaintiff's counsel asked the doctor for the name of the law firm which had represented him in the grievance proceeding, to which the doctor replied, "I will be in contact with them today; Bobo Spicer." At that point, defense counsel objected and maintained that the doctor had no right to accuse him of anything since the Bar had said that the questioning was permissible. The court allowed plaintiff's counsel to ask a few additional questions to clarify that the doctor acted on the advice of his lawyers in the grievance proceeding. On recross, defense counsel showed the doctor a copy of the State of Florida file on his license and asked whether anything he questioned him on was not contained in this public document. To that, the doctor replied, "I don't know. I would have to sit here for an hour and read this public record. I think it's highly unethical you bring these things up to harm a child and discredit me." After a few more questions and similar answers, the questioning concluded. Despite this highly extraordinary cross-examination with matters involving the doctor's handling of female patients, the defense never put on any evidence of its own to impeach his opinions with respect to the condition of Ms. Byrd's son. That testimony went unchallenged.

[3] We agree with the appellee that the court should never have allowed such cross-examination in the first place. It was entirely irrelevant as it was not a proper attack on the witness's credibility. See §§ 90.608 - .610, Fla. Stat. (1997); Farinas v. State, 569 So.2d 425, 429 (Fla.1990); Miles v. Allstate Ins. Co., 564 So.2d 583, 584 (Fla. 4th DCA 1990). But having let it in, defense counsel's cross-examination of the doctor on the incident opened the door to the doctor's claims of unethical conduct. [FN2] We ourselves have substantial concerns as to the ethics of defense counsel's attacks on his former client. See R.Regulating Fla.Bar 4-1.6, 4-1.9. While defense counsel claimed that anything in a public document can be revealed, even against a former client, the rule states that an attorney may not use information relating to the representation of a former client to the disadvantage of that client except as rule 4-1.6 would permit with respect to a client or "when the information has become generally known." R.Regulating Fla.Bar 4-1.9(b). We are not prepared to state that all information contained in any public document is "generally known" within the meaning of the rule. It seems to us highly questionable that an attorney could attack, embarrass, and malign a former client with matters on which he represented and counseled that client, where such matters have no relevance to the proceeding in which the client is a witness and are not proper impeachment. We are aware that on the criminal side of the bench, public defenders frequently withdraw from representation of a current client when a former client may be required to be impeached on matters involving the public defender's representation of that client. We do not think the standards of ethics on the civil side should be any less. However, it is not our responsibility to interpret the rule of professional conduct in this case. Suffice it to say that, given this extraordinary and uncalled for attack on a former client, defense counsel opened the door about as wide as he could to 836 the counter charge of ethical violations. We find no error.

> FN2. The charges of unethical behavior made in front of the jury were made by the doctor-witness, not the lawyers for the plaintiff.

[4] Appellant also challenges comments by the plaintiff's attorney in closing argument. Since defense counsel made no objections, the issue is not preserved. See Murphy v. International Robotics Sys., Inc., 710 So.2d 587, 587-88 (Fla. 4th DCA 1998). Although some of counsel's remarks in closing argument were improper,[FN3] we do not deem the unobjected comments to rise to the level of fundamental error. Id.

> FN3. We specifically condemn counsel's use of the term "hired gun" to refer to a defense expert. See Budget Rent A Car v. Jana, 600 So.2d 466, 468 (Fla. 4th DCA 1992).

Finally, we find no error in the trial court's order determining the date when Ms. Byrd became aware of the possibility of medical negligence. Based on Dr. King's own argument at the summary judgment hearing, the court determined that she did not have knowledge of any actual medical malpractice prior to 1992. While the appellant argues on appeal that the court erred because there was evidence that she could have discovered it at an earlier time, this was not the argument presented to the trial court and appears to us to be made for the first time on appeal.

For these reasons, we affirm the final judgment of the trial court.

COVINGTON, Judge.

The appellant, Erin Manhardt, individually and as next friend and parent of Christopher Manhardt, a minor, brought this medical malpractice action against the appellees, Shameem Tamton, M.D., Christopher's pediatrician; Susan W. Short Pediatrics, P.A., Dr. Tamton's employer; Naples Community Hospital, Inc., the employer of the nurses who cared for Christopher immediately following his birth; and Florida Department of Health and Rehabilitative Services and the Collier County Public Health Unit, the employers of Dr. Auditori, the obstetrician who delivered Christopher. The lawsuit initially arose from physical injuries Christopher suffered upon contracting meningitis at birth. The suit continued, however, subsequent to Christopher's death. After a jury trial, a verdict was rendered in favor of the appellees. Ms. Manhardt now contends that numerous errors vitiated the fairness of the proceedings in the trial court. We agree and reverse.

At 4:30 a.m. on September 15, 1991, Ms. Manhardt presented at Naples Community Hospital for labor and delivery. At that time, she had a history of vaginal Group B strep infection. The infection, however, caused no overt disease in Ms. Manhardt.

Ms. Manhardt's son, Christopher, was born at 11:19 a.m. on the aforementioned date. According to hospital records, Christopher's initial newborn assessment revealed that, for all intents and purposes, he was a normal, healthy, full-term baby. At 3:45 a.m. on September 16, 1991, however, a nurse reported that Christopher was having trouble breathing and that he was beginning to run a fever. The results of a blood culture revealed that Christopher had contracted meningitis caused by Group B streptococci. Antibiotics were thereafter administered to the infant. At 12:50 p.m., he was transferred to another hospital for treatment.

For a time, Christopher survived the meningitis , but he was rendered severely handicapped as a result. Thus, in December 1993, the instant lawsuit was filed for compensatory damages. The complaint alleged that the appellees were negligent in failing to render proper medical care and treatment to Ms. Manhardt and Christopher at the time of Christopher's birth. It was averred that, but for the appellees' negligent care and treatment, Christopher's meningitis and resulting injuries could have been prevented.

Christopher died on November 5, 1996, at age five. In September 1997, Ms. Manhardt filed a third-amended complaint. It essentially alleged, among other things, that but for the negligence of the appellees, Christopher would not have suffered the severe and permanent injuries that culminated in his death.

In November 1999, a ten-day jury trial proceeded on Ms. Manhardt's third-amended complaint. After the jury rendered its verdict for the appellees, Ms. Manhardt filed a motion for new trial. She claimed that various trial errors prejudiced 131 the jury and that the verdict was otherwise against the manifest weight of the evidence. In December 1999, the trial court entered a final judgment upon the jury's defense verdict. In March 2000, a hearing was held on Ms. Manhardt's new trial motion. In April 2000, the trial court denied the motion for new trial, and this timely appeal ensued.

On appeal, Ms. Manhardt contends she is entitled to a new trial on the basis of myriad trial errors. We address two of Ms. Manhardt's claims, in particular. It is our conclusion, however, that a combination of errors and improprieties casts doubt on the integrity of the proceedings in the trial court.

A trial court's ruling on a motion for new trial should not be disturbed on appeal, absent a showing of an abuse of discretion. Brown v. Estate of Stuckey, 749 So.2d 490, 495-96 (Fla.1999); Allstate Ins. Co. v. Manasse, 707 So.2d 1110, 1111 (Fla.1998); Cloud v. Fallis, 110 So.2d 669, 672-73 (Fla.1959). The showing necessary to overturn the denial of a motion for new trial is not as great as that necessary to overturn an order granting such a motion. Castlewood Int'l Corp. v. LaFleur, 322 So.2d 520, 522 (Fla.1975) (citing Cloud, 110 So.2d at 673). " '[D]iscretion is abused only where no reasonable [person] would take the view adopted by the trial court.' " Manasse, 707 So.2d at 1111 (quoting Huff v. State, 569 So.2d 1247, 1249 (Fla.1990)); see also Ramey v. Winn Dixie Montgomery, Inc., 710 So.2d 191, 192 (Fla. 1st DCA 1998) (quoting DeLong v. Wickes Co., 545 So.2d 362, 366 (Fla. 2d DCA 1989)). Nonetheless, a "trial judge should always grant a motion for a new trial when 'the jury has been deceived as to the force and credibility of the evidence or has been influenced by considerations outside the record.' " Brown, 749 So.2d at 497 (quoting Cloud, 110 So.2d at 673); see also McCloud v. Sherman Mobile Concrete Co., 579 So.2d 773, 774 (Fla. 2d DCA 1991); Surety Mortgage Inc. v. Equitable Mortgage Res., Inc., 534 So.2d 780, 782 (Fla. 2d DCA 1988). Under those circumstances, "[t]he trial judge's discretion permits the grant of a new trial although it is not clear, obvious, and indisputable that the jury was wrong." Brown, 749 So.2d at 497.

In this case, counsel for Dr. Tamton asked one of Ms. Manhardt's experts, Dr. Noel, if he had ever been sued. Dr. Noel gave an inaudible response, and counsel for Ms. Manhardt objected. The trial court overruled the objection, and the following exchange ensued:

> [Dr. Tamton's Counsel]: Did you think you did anything wrong when you were sued?
>
> [Dr. Noel]: I didn't.
>
> [Dr. Tamton's Counsel]: Did you defend your- self?
> [Dr. Noel]: Yes.

At that point, Ms. Manhardt's counsel unsuccessfully moved for a mistrial. Counsel argued that the foregoing line of questioning was irrelevant and prejudicial. The trial court denied the motion. Sometime later, however, the issue was revisited. The trial court then instructed counsel for both parties to refrain from asking any party or expert about prior lawsuits.

[1] The questions propounded to Dr. Noel were irrelevant to Dr. Noel's expertise and otherwise constituted an improper attack on his credibility. See Tormey v. Trout, 748 So.2d 303, 306 (Fla. 4th DCA 1999) (citing Farinas v. State, 569 So.2d 425, 429 (Fla.1990), and holding that, in a personal injury case, cross-examination of medical expert about prior administrative discipline was improper credibility attack); see also Liberty Mut. Ins. Co. v. Wolfson, 773 So.2d 1272, 1273 (Fla. 4th DCA 2000) (stating that credibility of medical expert 132 was improperly attacked when she was asked about peer review that caused suspension of her surgery privileges at certain hospitals). The impropriety was exacerbated by the fact that Dr. Noel, of all the medical experts who testified, was the only witness whom the trial court allowed to be questioned about prior lawsuits. We therefore conclude the jury was likely deceived as to the force and credibility of the medical evidence in this cause and that such deception likely prejudiced Ms. Manhardt's case.

[2] This court also concludes that the prejudice arising from the improper credibility attack on Dr. Noel was compounded by inappropriate commentary from Dr. Tamton's counsel during closing argument. At that time, counsel gratuitously announced and otherwise emphasized that this was Dr. Tamton's first lawsuit. Defense commentary of that nature is usually intended to prejudice a plaintiff's case in the eyes of the jury. See Ridarsick v. Amirkanian, 147 So.2d 580, 581 (Fla. 3d DCA 1962) (involving counsel's misconduct in repeatedly offering evidence that the trial court had already excluded). That is especially true here, given the trial court's instruction prohibiting the mention of prior lawsuits. Untoward practices of the kind at issue can be very effective in medical malpractice cases, which always involve "a battle of expert witnesses." Cenatus v. Naples Cmty. Hosp., Inc., 689 So.2d 302, 304 (Fla. 2d DCA 1997) (citing Lake v. Clark, 533 So.2d 797, 799 (Fla. 5th DCA 1988)).

We take this opportunity to note further concern regarding a comment from Dr. Tamton's counsel as to the "Miami Beach" accent of one of Ms. Manhardt's attorneys. At one point during trial, Ms. Manhardt's counsel, Mr. Weinstein, attempted to impeach Dr. Tamton based on various aspects of her pretrial deposition. In doing so, Mr. Weinstein had some difficulty communicating with Dr. Tamton, who is from India. Because of that difficulty, Mr. Weinstein repeated many of his questions. Thereafter, Dr. Tamton's counsel, Mr. Stevens, began his examination of Dr. Tamton by stating, "Dr. Tamton, I promise you three things: I won't repeat myself, I won't use your deposition, and I won't speak with an accent from Miami Beach ...." Mr. Weinstein immediately objected. He argued, among other things, that the remark constituted an improper reference to his religion. Mr. Stevens insisted that he did not intend to cast religious aspersions but only made the comment in jest.

[3][4] In Ridarsick, the Third District observed that "a question asked during a trial may convey prejudicial information even though the answer is excluded." 147 So.2d at 580 (citing Blanton v. Butler, 81 So.2d 745 (Fla.1955)). We note that, during a trial, prejudicial information can likewise be conveyed by a comment from trial counsel purportedly made in jest. We thus remind counsel, as we have reminded others in the past, that trial conduct " 'must always be so guarded that it will not impair or thwart the orderly processes of a fair consideration and determination of the cause by the jury.' " Murphy v. Murphy, 622 So.2d 99, 102 (Fla. 2d DCA 1993) (quoting Seaboard Air Line R.R. Co. v. Strickland, 88 So.2d 519, 523 (Fla.1956)); see also Anderson v. Watson, 559 So.2d 654 (Fla. 2d DCA 1990).

[5] Therefore, based on the foregoing, we conclude the trial court abused its discretion in failing to grant Ms. Manhardt a new trial. The totality of all errors and improprieties, including those not discussed herein, was pervasive enough to raise doubts as to the overall fairness of the trial court proceedings. Collectively, the errors here were also pervasive enough to prejudice Ms. Manhardt's case 133 as to all of the appellees. See Mitchell v. Bonnell, 770 So.2d 1292, 1294 (Fla. 3d DCA 2000); see also Klose v. Coastal Emergency Servs. of Ft. Lauderdale, Inc., 673 So.2d 81, 83 n. 1 (Fla. 4th DCA 1996).

Accordingly, this cause is reversed and remanded for a new trial. Points on appeal not otherwise discussed are either without merit or are moot because of our holding. See, e.g., Murphy, 622 So.2d at 100.

Physician appealed from judgment of the Circuit Court, Fayette County, George E. Barker, J., entered on verdict in medical malpractice action. The Court of Appeals, Dyche, J., held that: (1) depositions of patient's experts who were not called to testify and whose depositions came into possession of defendant physician through inadvertence were properly excluded; (2) fact that one expert's license had been suspended for five years because he had passed hepatitis to patients was a collateral matter which could not be the subject of cross-examination; and (3) award of damages was not excessive.

425 Leslie Rosenbaum, Rosenbaum & Rosenbaum, P.S.C., Lexington, for appellants.

William J. Gallion, Barbara Ann Kriz, Gallion, Baker & Bray, P.S.C., Lexington, for appellee.

Before DYCHE, HAYES and STUMBO, JJ.

DYCHE, Judge.

In this malpractice case, the appellant, Dr. Len W. Morrow, an oral surgeon, appeals a judgment of the Fayette Circuit Court in which a patient was awarded damages for Dr. Morrow's misdiagnosis and negligent treatment of facial pain.

The appellee, Robert R. Stivers, is fifty-eight and has worked for Lexington Building Supply for the last twenty-six years. Stivers developed a severe pain in the left facial area on or about April 10, 1983. Stivers was examined by Dr. Richard F. Hench, who had treated him for high blood pressure and seen him for regular checkups. Dr. Hench performed tests on Stivers and diagnosed his condition as "atypical facial pain" for which he prescribed medication.

In June of 1983, Stivers continued to suffer pain and was examined by Dr. Minyard, a dentist. Dr. Minyard recommended that Stivers be seen by the appellant, Dr. Len W. Morrow, and his partner, Dr. Daniel.

426 Dr. Morrow examined Stivers and diagnosed the pain as " trigeminal neuralgia " and recommended the removal of his infra-orbital nerve. On August 18, 1983, Dr. Morrow performed a peripheral neurectomy on Stivers, removing the nerve.

On August 16, 1984, Stivers brought an action against Dr. Morrow and his practice group, Daniel and Morrow, P.S.C. Stivers alleged that Dr. Morrow was negligent in the diagnosis and treatment of his facial condition, resulting in painful and permanent injuries. Stivers also alleged that he was not informed by Dr. Morrow of the risks of the infra-orbital neurectomy and alcohol application and thus he did not give his informed consent.

Stivers's theory was that the alcohol administered by Dr. Morrow leaked back into the orbit of the eye, damaging nerves which control eye and pupil movement. Further, Stivers alleged that he suffered from atypical facial pain, for which a peripheral neurectomy is not a proper treatment. Dr. Morrow denied that the alcohol was responsible for this damage and maintained that diplopia and the other symptoms were due to a stroke suffered by Stivers during the operation.

At the conclusion of a trial held from March 19, 1990, to March 27, 1990, the jury found for Stivers in the total amount of $187,227.00.

The disputed issues on appeal largely revolve around the trial court's rulings involving the admissibility of certain evidence.

While taking the deposition of Dr. Dennis Sprague, a psychologist who testified at trial for Stivers, Dr. Morrow's counsel came into possession of a report from a neurologist, Dr. David B. Clark, a report by Dr. C. Lee, a radiologist, and a magnetic resonance imaging (MRI) scan.

Dr. Clark's report, dated March 5, 1986, was issued pursuant to an examination of Stivers, at his request. Based on that examination, Dr. Clark questioned whether the diplopia and the temporary dilation of the pupil were caused by the alcohol applied by Dr. Morrow. Dr. Clark suggested that Stivers might have suffered a vascular accident (stroke) in the upper part of the brainstem because such an injury would account for these symptoms. Dr. Clark recommended that the MRI scan be performed on Stivers to see if there were any evidence of stroke.

The MRI scan was performed on April 11, 1986. Dr. Lee examined the images which revealed an abnormality in the right side of the brainstem. Dr. Lee stated in his report that the abnormality "raises the question of a brainstem infarct."

A deposition taken of Dr. Adrienne Millett, an opthalmologist, on March 21, 1990, was placed into evidence. Dr. Millett testified that the cause of Stivers's condition was very likely the operation and the alcohol placed on the infra-orbital nerve, resulting in damaged nerve fiber controlling his eye movement and his pupil.

Dr. Millett was asked on cross-examination about the reports of Drs. Clark and Lee and the MRI scan which had been supplied to her after she reached her opinion regarding causation. The questions basically centered around whether a stroke in the brainstem could cause Stivers's condition. Dr. Millett stated that it was unlikely that a stroke in the brainstem would damage the specific areas injured without any wider effects. Dr. Millett added, however, that she would not rule out that possibility and would defer to the opinion of a neurologist.

On September 15, 1989, a hearing was held on the use and admissibility of the MRI scan and the reports of Drs. Lee and Clark. The trial court ruled that the MRI scan was admissible. Dr. Lee's report and Dr. Clark's report were ruled to be inadmissible *427 based on CR 26.02(4). The trial court also would not allow admission of depositions of Dr. Clark or Dr. Lee.

The trial court reasoned that if the rules prohibit the discovery of the evidence, such evidence would not be properly admissible. As a result, the trial court would not allow Dr. Morrow's experts to rely on the reports of Dr. Clark or Dr. Lee.

During the trial, Stivers planned to introduce the videotaped deposition of Dr. Millett. Prior to playing the videotape to the jury, Stivers sought to have all references to the reports from Drs. Clark and Lee deleted. The trial court ruled that, because Stivers supplied the reports to Dr. Millett, the reports had lost their privileged status. Dr. Morrow was then entitled to cross-examine her about these reports, concluded the trial court. The reports themselves were not admitted.

The trial court prohibited the use of the reports with other witnesses. Consequently, the reports of Drs. Clark and Lee or their opinions were not admissible despite Dr. Morrow's attempts in connection with the testimony of Dr. Roger J. Harris, Stivers's liability expert, Dr. John M. Gregg, an oral surgeon testifying on behalf of Dr. Morrow, and Dr. Jerry Anderson, also a defense witness.

[1] Dr. Morrow first contends that the trial court erred in refusing the admission of evidence from Drs. Clark and Lee which had been obtained outside the discovery procedures outlined in Kentucky Rules of Civil Procedure.

CR 26.02(4)(b) provides that:

> A party may discover facts known or opinions held by an expert who has been retained or spe> cially employed by another party in anticipation of litigation or preparation for trial and who is not expected to be called as a witness at trial, only as provided in Rule 35.02 or upon a showing of exceptional circumstances under which it is impracticable for the party seeking discovery to obtain facts or opinions on the same subject by other means.

Dr. Morrow notes that CR 26.01 describes discovery methods as, inter alia, depositions, interrogatories, requests for admission. He argues that CR 26.02(4)(b) applies only to discovery and not to a situation, such as in the instant case, where the expert's facts and opinions became known outside the discovery process.

In Crenna v. Ford Motor Company, 12 Wash.App. 824, 532 P.2d 290 (1975), an expert who was consulted by the plaintiffs was named by them in their answers to interrogatories approximately nine months before trial. However, the plaintiffs indicated that they did not know whether the expert would be called at trial. The defendant sought, five days before trial, to find out whether the expert would be testifying at trial and was told a decision had still not been made. The defendant then sought to subpoena the expert. The plaintiffs responded with a motion to quash the subpoena and to bar the expert's testimony which was granted. At trial, the defendant attempted to call the expert as a rebuttal witness. The trial court ruled that the defendant could not call the expert.

The trial court's rulings were based on CR 26(b)(4)(B) which is practically identical to Kentucky CR 26.02(4)(b). The Washington rule does not contain the language in CR 26.02(4)(b) referring to facts and opinions of an expert "who has been retained or specially employed...." Washington's rule for discovery of experts is more restrictive than is Kentucky's because the former renders the expert nondiscoverable if he is expected to testify at trial, but Kentucky adds the requirement that he also be retained or specially employed in anticipation of litigation or preparation for trial. We do not perceive this difference to be significant in the instant case.

The Court in Crenna, supra, 532 P.2d at 295, stated:

> We read CR 26(b)(4)(B) as a recognition that a trial is still an adversary proceeding and that, so conceived, fundamental fairness requires that 'discovery' not be used to defeat a litigant by probing for real or apparent weaknesses in his case 428 which may have been revealed in his trial preparation.

The Court concluded that the rulings by the trial court had been proper.

We agree with the holding in Crenna, supra. To allow Dr. Morrow to use the reports of Drs. Clark and Lee, or to admit their depositions, would undermine the purpose of CR 26.02(4)(b), which in part is to encourage prelitigation consultative evaluations. This Court in Newsome v. Lowe, Ky.App., 699 S.W.2d 748, 752 (1985), stated that consultive expert evaluations and the reports rendered under CR 26.02(4)(b) were "privileged." We reasoned that "if there is no confidentiality in them, the procedure will not be utilized." Id.

A factual difference between the instant case and Crenna, supra, is that Dr. Morrow came into possession of the reports inadvertently, while the defendants in Crenna, supra, were supplied with the information through answers to interrogatories. We do not believe that the reports of Drs. Clark and Lee should be given special status, and thus rendered admissible, simply because they were not obtained by a discovery method. Such a result would encourage litigants to bypass the discovery process.

Dr. Morrow cites Heitmann v. Concrete Pipe Machinery, 98 F.R.D. 740 (E.D.Mo.1983), in which the Court ruled that the report of a nontestifying expert was out of the coverage of Fed.R.Civ.P. 26(b)(4)(B) when the report was supplied to and relied upon by a testifying expert. The Court in Heitmann, supra, reasoned that the report was needed for effective cross-examination of the testifying witness.

Dr. Sprague testified in his deposition that he did not rely on any medical records in forming his opinions. Dr. Millett also did not rely on these reports. Thus, Heitmann, supra, is not applicable.

CR 35.02 is also cited as support for Dr. Morrow's position. CR 35.02 concerns reports of examining physicians upon the request of the examined party. In this case, there is nothing in the record to show a request and delivery of any reports which would require Stivers, under CR 35.02, to supply the reports of Drs. Clark and Lee.

Dr. Morrow next contends that the trial court erred in limiting the cross-examination of all but one witness in regard to the reports of Drs. Clark and Lee.

The trial court's reason for this difference was that, though undiscoverable under CR 26.02, the reports were supplied to Dr. Millett. The other witnesses, except Sprague, were not at any time supplied with the reports.

[2] It is a general rule that the scope and duration of cross-examination rests in the sound discretion of the trial court in both civil and criminal cases. Moore v. Commonwealth, Ky., 771 S.W.2d 34 (1988), cert. denied, 494 U.S. 1060, 110 S.Ct. 1536, 108 L.Ed.2d 774 reh. denied, 495 U.S. 941, 110 S.Ct. 2196, 109 L.Ed.2d 524 (1990); Perry v. Ernest R. Hamilton Associates, Inc., Ky., 485 S.W.2d 505 (1972); Commonwealth, Department of Highways v. Smith, Ky., 390 S.W.2d 194 (1965).

The trial court in the case at bar prohibited the cross-examination for the purposes of furthering the ends of CR 26.02(4). We do not view such action as an abuse of discretion.

Dr. Morrow next contends that the trial court erred in admonishing the jury during the cross-examination of a defense expert to disregard any reference to Dr. Lee's interpretation of the 1986 MRI.

[3] Dr. Jerry Anderson testified as a witness for Dr. Morrow. Dr. Anderson had examined the 1986 MRI, and under cross-examination he made references to Dr. Lee's interpretation. A bench conference ensued and Stivers sought an admonition. The trial court subsequently admonished the jury to disregard any references to Dr. Lee's report because it had been ruled inadmissible.

In Seaton v. Rosenberg, Ky., 573 S.W.2d 333 (1978), relied upon by Dr. Morrow, an expert gave opinion testimony concerning a person's cause of death. The trial court made remarks about this opinion to the jury which the Supreme Court found were prejudicial. Its reasoning was that "the 429 trial court's remarks at least diluted the effect of this evidence and at most effectively removed this evidence from consideration by the jury." Id. at 337.

The admonition in the case at bar did not have the same effect as the trial court's remarks in Seaton, supra. The jury heard Dr. Anderson's full opinion. We do not believe that the admonition detracted from Dr. Anderson's opinion simply because he and Dr. Lee had reached the same conclusion. The trial court directed the jury to disregard references to Dr. Lee's interpretation only because it had previously been ruled inadmissible. In Seaton, supra, the trial court made statements directly questioning the accuracy of the expert's opinion. We find no error here.

Dr. Morrow next contends that the trial court improperly limited his cross-examination of Stivers's liability expert, Dr. Roger J. Harris.

Dr. Morrow wanted to show that Dr. Harris had had his license suspended for five years because he had passed hepatitis to several patients. That Dr. Harris did not practice for a time due to the infection received from an institutionalized patient was admitted, but he maintained that he voluntarily relinquished his license. Dr. Morrow also wanted to introduce testimony that Dr. Harris could only have transmitted hepatitis through dirty instruments, sexual intercourse, or other exchange of body fluids. The trial court would not admit Dr. Morrow's claims.

[4] The general rule is that a witness cannot be cross-examined on a collateral matter which is irrelevant to the issue at hand. Shirley v. Commonwealth, Ky., 378 S.W.2d 816 (1964); Commonwealth v. Jackson, Ky., 281 S.W.2d 891 (1955).

In Elswick v. Commonwealth, Ky.App., 574 S.W.2d 916 (1978), this Court held that it was not abuse of discretion to exclude testimony on cross-examination when its inflammatory nature outweighed its probative value.

[5] The crucial question then is whether the evidence excluded in this case is collateral. We think it is. The matter of having hepatitis and thus not practicing for a time does not reflect on his knowledge or ability to testify on the matters at hand, i.e., the causation of Stivers's condition and any deviation by Dr. Morrow from the standard of care. Further, the inflammatory effect, if the jury heard testimony such as that Dr. Harris may have had sex with his patients, although unproven, would outweigh any probative value it might have. There was no abuse of discretion in excluding this evidence.

[6] Dr. Morrow also complains that he was improperly kept from using a deposition to show Dr. Harris's lack of knowledge about the possibility that Stivers had a stroke.

Dr. Morrow maintains that the reason the trial court prohibited the use of the deposition was that it was only a discovery deposition as opposed to an evidentiary deposition. That statement is somewhat of an oversimplification and is misleading.

Dr. Morrow wanted to read a portion of a discovery deposition to the jury prior to the playing of a videotaped evidentiary deposition which was made months after the discovery deposition. Dr. Morrow wanted to show inconsistencies between the two depositions for impeachment purposes. The trial court stated that Dr. Morrow could have used the portions of the discovery deposition he wanted to read during the videotaped deposition. The trial court reasoned that if Dr. Harris was impeached, Stivers would have no way of rehabilitating him by asking Dr. Harris further questions. We think the ruling was sound.

Dr. Morrow next contends that incompetent evidence was received from Dr. Sprague. This alleged incompetent evidence consisted of the use of medical history as related directly to Dr. Sprague by Stivers and the diagnosis that Stivers had suffered a psychological injury as a result.

In Drumm v. Commonwealth, Ky., 783 S.W.2d 380, 384 (1990), the only case cited by Dr. Morrow in regard to this issue, the Court adopted Rule 803(4) of the Federal Rules of Evidence which "blurs but does not abolish the distinction between testifying*430 and treating physicians." Under Fed.R.Evid. 803(4), a statement made to an expert is not inadmissible hearsay if the statement is "the kind of information which the expert customarily relies upon in the practice of his profession." Drumm, supra. The rule specifically includes statements of medical history pertinent to diagnosis.

[7] Dr. Morrow's argument appears to be that Sprague's testimony is not admissible under Fed.R.Evid. 803(4) because the rule applies to medical purposes but not psychological ones. When its application is justified, Fed.R.Evid. 803(4) is broad enough to encompass the statements made to psychologists. See Morgan v. Foretich, 846 F.2d 941 (4th Cir.1988). The medical history supplied to Dr. Sprague was the kind of information customarily relied on by psychologists in the practice of their profession.

Dr. Morrow next contends that the rebuttal testimony of Dr. William O. Witt should not have been allowed.

[8] Dr. Witt, an anesthesiologist, testified that, based on the blood pressure readings in the anesthesia records for Stivers's surgery, he did not suffer a stroke during the surgery. Dr. Witt was called as a rebuttal witness by Stivers to address a question which had been raised by one of Dr. Morrow's witnesses, Dr. Joseph Zerga, i.e., that Stivers suffered a stroke during surgery when his blood pressure dropped too low. The trial court ruled that Dr. Witt could testify in rebuttal because there was a new element as to causation, i.e., low blood pressure, which was not, and could not have been, addressed on direct. We see no abuse of the trial court's discretion on this point.

Dr. Morrow next contends that, even if the alleged errors were harmless individually, the cumulative effect of the errors requires a reversal.

Most, if not all, of the errors alleged were not simply harmless but were not errors. Moreover, because of the complexities of the case, particularly the inadvertent disclosure by Stivers, the trial court did a remarkable job in balancing the competing rights and interests of the parties. Stivers had a full opportunity to prosecute his case and Dr. Morrow had a full opportunity to defend himself. Dr. Morrow was allowed to use the MRI scan by showing it to his experts who then gave testimony concerning their findings to the jury. The reports of Drs. Clark and Lee were far less conclusive that Stivers had suffered a stroke than Dr. Morrow would have us believe. There was no cumulative effect of errors in this case.

Lastly, Dr. Morrow argues that the damages awarded were excessive.

The jury awarded Stivers a total of $187,227.00 in damages. This award consisted of $2,227.00 for current medical expenses, $20,000.00 for future medical expenses, $108,000.00 for physical pain and suffering, and $57,000.00 for lost earning capacity.

[9] We note initially that appellant's motion for a new trial alleged excessiveness only as to the awards for future medical expenses and lost earning capacity; we may not consider the amount awarded for current medical expenses and physical pain and suffering, as the trial court was not given an opportunity to rule thereon. Skaggs v. Assad By and Through Assad, Ky., 712 S.W.2d 947, 950 (1986).

[10] Dr. Morrow claims that the award is excessive under the "first blush" rule. That rule provides that a damage award is excessive if the mind is immediately shocked and surprised at the great disproportion of the size of the verdict in relation to the amount authorized by the evidence, such that it must have been the result of passion and prejudice. Wilson v. Redken Laboratories, Inc., Ky., 562 S.W.2d 633 (1978); Townsend v. Stamper, Ky., 398 S.W.2d 45 (1965).

> The "first blush" rule is a mechanism to assist the trial court in performing its responsibility when called upon to decide whether the award is so excessive as to appear "to have been given under the influence of passion or prejudice." CR 59.01(d). In its entirety it is that "a verdict may be set aside as excessive 431 only if 'it is (so) to such an extent as to cause the mind at first blush to conclude that it was returned under the influence of passion or prejudice on the part of the jury.' " Wilson v. Redken Laboratories, Inc., supra, 562 S.W.2d at 636.
> On the other hand, the appellate function is properly described in Prater v. Arnett, Ky.App., 648 S.W.2d 82 (1983):
> > "Upon reviewing the action of a trial judge in (granting or denying a new trial for excessiveness), the appellate court no longer steps into the shoes of the trial court to inspect the actions of the jury from his perspective. Now, the appellate court reviews only the actions of the trial judge ... to determine if his actions constituted an error of law. There is no error of law unless the trial judge is said to have abused his discretion and thereby rendered his decision clearly erroneous. Further, the action of the trial judge is presumptively correct ..." 648 S.W.2d at 86.

Our earlier opinion discussing review of the question of excessive damages in City of Louisville v. Allen, Ky., 385 S.W.2d 179 (1964) expresses essentially the same analysis as Prater v. Arnett of the different functions of trial and appellate courts. The basic guideline for appellate review is set out in the Allen case as follows:

"It serves to emphasize the initial and primary role of the trial judge in determining these issues; that his decision shall be prima facie correct and final; and that only in rare instance when it can be said that he has clearly erred, i.e., abused his discretion, will he be reversed." (Emphasis original.) 385 S.W.2d at 183–184.

Once the issue is squarely presented to the trial judge, who heard and considered the evidence, neither we, nor will the Court of Appeals substitute our judgment on excessiveness for his unless clearly erroneous.

In short, the rules governing appellate practice do not direct the appellate judge to decide if the verdict shocks his conscience or causes him to blush. Those rules charge us with the responsibility to review the record and decide whether, when viewed from a standpoint "most favorable" to the prevailing party, there is evidence to support the verdict and judgment. Rogers v. Kasdan, Ky., 612 S.W.2d 133 (1981).

Davis v. Graviss, Ky., 672 S.W.2d 928, 932–933 (1984) (emphasis original).

[11] There is evidence in the record of Stivers's substantial present and future medical expenses due to the injury. There is also evidence of the decrease in his ability to earn money in the future of $97,780.53 as well as testimony about his difficulty performing his present occupation. Stivers testified about the pain resulting from this injury and the difficulties in life due to the pain and double vision. We find no clear error nor abuse of discretion in the trial court's action.

The judgment of the Fayette Circuit Court is affirmed.

All concur.

No. 51459.
June 16, 1987.
Motion for Rehearing and/or Transfer Denied July 21, 1987.
Application to Transfer Denied Sept. 15, 1987.

Patient brought medical malpractice action against physician who had performed surgery for bilateral bunions and hammertoes on patient's feet. The Circuit Court, County of St. Louis, Phillip J. Sweeney, J., entered judgment for physician, and appeal was taken. The Court of Appeals, Carl R. Gaertner, J., held that: (1) evidence that medical malpractice plaintiff's expert witness, a physician, had voluntarily surrendered his license to dispense certain narcotic drugs was inadmissible to impeach witness, and (2) erroneous admission of testimony concerning witness' surrender of license to dispense narcotics was not harmless.

Reversed and remanded for new trial.

Erroneous admission of evidence that expert for medical malpractice plaintiff had voluntarily surrendered his license to dispense certain controlled narcotics was not harmless; forced disclosure of past drug abuse affected neither expert's qualifications nor his credibility, but rather, served only to besmirch his character, and expert's testimony was crucial to plaintiff's case.

CARL R. GAERTNER, Judge.

Plaintiff Martha J. Noble appeals from a judgment for defendants W. Edward Lansche, M.D., and Orthopedic Associates, Inc. in this medical malpractice action. She claims trial court error (1) in allowing defense counsel (a) to engage in improper cross-examination of her expert witness and (b) to go outside the evidence in the case in closing argument, (2) by refusing to admit certain photographs into evidence and (3) in overruling plaintiff's motion to strike for cause a particular member of the venire. We reverse and remand.

Defendant Lansche performed surgery for bilateral bunions and hammertoes on plaintiff's feet in May, 1981. Plaintiff alleges an inappropriate procedure was used with regard to the bilateral bunions and the operation was negligently performed as to the hammertoes. As a result she claims damages because her feet were severely *64 disfigured and she was unable to participate in her normal activities. Further surgery, to alleviate the problems allegedly caused by defendants, was performed by Dr. Anthony Halinsky. Halinsky was the only expert witness to testify at trial for plaintiff.

Prior to trial, plaintiff filed a motion in limine seeking to exclude any evidence concerning Halinsky's surrender of his license to dispense certain controlled narcotics. The trial court overruled the motion with the provision that defendants would be permitted to establish that Halinsky had indeed surrendered this license and further that the surrender was because the doctor had diverted drugs to his own use.

Plaintiff's first point on appeal is that the trial court erred in allowing defendants to delve into Dr. Halinsky's voluntary surrender of his license to dispense narcotics on cross-examination and in closing argument, the latter including a statement that Halinsky had personally abused a particular narcotic. It is well-settled that the scope of cross-examination lies within the discretion of the trial court. On appeal, we will not reverse unless abuse of that discretion is clearly shown. Powell v. Norman Lines, Inc., 674 S.W.2d 191, 195 (Mo.App.1984). Further, with regard to cross-examination of an expert witness, "wide latitude is allowed to test his qualifications, credibility, skill or knowledge and the value and accuracy of his opinion." Id. at 196 (citations omitted).

[1] The evidence in dispute here concerns Halinsky's surrender of his license to dispense certain narcotics. On cross-examination of Halinsky the defendants established that Halinsky voluntarily surrendered the license because he had a medical problem with narcotics which was resolved. The effect of this surrender upon his medical practice, however, was merely to prevent him from personally dispensing narcotics to his patients. Instead, he would give his patients a prescription to be filled at a pharmacy. We reject defendants' argument that a license to dispense narcotics is so integral to a physician's practice that the jury must be made aware of its voluntary surrender. The ability to prescribe appropriate narcotics may well be essential to the care and treatment of a physician's patient, but the right to personally dispense the narcotics is of little significance. Moreover, evidence concerning Halinsky's former problem with drug abuse is unrelated to his skill, knowledge and qualification to express an opinion upon the propriety of the surgical procedure selected by defendant Lansche and the quality of Lansche's surgical performance.

It is important to emphasize that Halinsky lost his license to dispense through voluntary surrender and not a criminal conviction, as the latter would be a proper mode of impeachment on cross-examination. § 491.050, RSMo.1986, Eichelberger v. Barnes Hosp., 655 S.W.2d 699, 704 (Mo.App.1983). This voluntary action has no more impact upon his credibility than an unprosecuted arrest on a criminal charge. We have consistently held that evidence of an arrest not resulting in conviction is improper impeachment. State v. Lockhart, 507 S.W.2d 395, 396 (Mo.1974); Kehr v. Garrett, 512 S.W.2d 186, 193 (Mo.App.1974). Specifically, we have held that evidence of drug abuse is not admissible as impeachment of a witness's testimonial credibility and, in the absence of some showing of relevance to the witness's testimony, evidence of prior drug use is properly excluded. Ransom v. Adams Dairy Co., 684 S.W.2d 915, 919 (Mo.App.1985). In State v. Thompson, 697 S.W.2d 575, 579 (Mo.App.1985), cross-examination concerning a prior history of alcohol abuse was held improper, although not warranting reversal under the circumstances.

[2] The prejudice to plaintiff from this improper cross-examination was amplified in closing argument when defense counsel stated Halinsky had testified that "he got into personal trouble from using Demerol." No such evidence was in the record, and no such specificity may reasonably be inferred from Halinsky's statement "I had a medical problem with narcotics which was resolved." Counsel is allowed wide latitude in arguing legitimate inferences from the evidence of record, *65*State ex rel. Missouri State Hy. Comm'n v. Hensel Phelps Constr. Co.,* 634 S.W.2d 168, 176 (Mo. banc 1982). However, it is "axiomatic counsel should neither argue nor draw inferences from matters not in evidence and that a trial court errs in permitting such a discourse." Bergel v. Kassebaum, 577 S.W.2d 863, 872 (Mo.App.1978) (citing Hodges v. Johnson, 417 S.W.2d 685, 689 (Mo.App.1967)). Further compounding the prejudicial effect of the improper impeachment were other aspects of the jury argument made by defendants' attorney, opening with "let's look at the substance of this guy" whose license to dispense narcotic drugs had been "surrendered to those guys in Jefferson City that watch doctors...." After the overruling of plaintiff's objection, defendants' attorney concluded with a sarcastic reference to the hospital through which Dr. Halinsky dispensed drugs. This argument does not even purport to suggest how the surrender of his drug dispensing license affected his skill, knowledge or qualifications as an expert medical witness. Rather, its calculated effect was to cast a pall of disparagement over the doctor's testimony by reason of irrelevant misconduct. We cannot conclude that this argument, impliedly approved by the trial court's overruling of the objection and request for an instruction to disregard, did not influence the jury to discount the testimony of plaintiff's only expert witness.

Usually the injection of irrelevant evidence does not engender the level of prejudice which "materially affect[s] the merits of the action," thus requiring reversal. Rule 84.13(b). However, this is not such an instance. Halinsky's testimony was crucial to plaintiff's case.

The forced disclosure of Dr. Halinsky's past drug abuse affected neither his qualification as an expert witness nor his credibility. It served only to besmirch his character. To conclude that such evidence, pertaining to the one witness whose testimony was essential to plaintiff's case, did not materially affect the merits of the case would be to ignore the poison inherent in the public perception of drug abuse.

The judgment is reversed and the cause is remanded for a new trial.

Supreme Court of Kansas.
Charles R. STICKNEY, Appellant,
v.
The WESLEY MEDICAL CENTER, A Corporation, and Ron Morford, M.D., Appellees.

No. 60773.
Jan. 20, 1989.

Automobile accident victim brought medical malpractice action against hospital and emergency room physician. The District Court, Sedgwick County, Kenneth C. Kimmel, J., entered judgment in favor of the defendants, and the plaintiff appealed. The Court of Appeals, 758 P.2d 755 (unpublished opinion), reversed, and defendants petitioned for review. The Supreme Court, Holmes, J., held that: (1) erroneous admission of collateral source evidence in medical malpractice action pursuant to statute held to be unconstitutional was harmless where jury found in favor of physician and hospital, and (2) plaintiff was not entitled to impeach defendant physician's expert witness by use of extrinsic evidence dealing with a collateral matter, the negligence of hospital in an unrelated lawsuit.

Reversed.

Allegrucci, J., filed an opinion concurring in part and dissenting in part.

253 147 Syllabus by the Court

In an appeal by the plaintiff in a medical malpractice action, the record is examined and it is held that the trial court did not commit reversible error in: (1) ruling that impeachment evidence would be admissible if plaintiff introduced the discovery deposition of a deceased witness; (2) its rulings upon the admissibility of evidence; (3) its rulings upon objections to certain areas of cross-examination of various witnesses; and (4) the admission of collateral source benefits evidence.

William L. Fry of Fry, Reynolds & Reeves, P.A., Wichita, argued the cause and was on the brief for appellant.

*254 Carl L. Wagner of Boyer, Donaldson & Stewart, Wichita, argued the cause and was on the brief for appellee Wesley Medical Center.

Timothy B. Mustaine of Foulston, Siefkin, Powers & Eberhardt, Wichita, argued the cause and was on the brief for appellee Ron Morford, M.D.

HOLMES, Justice:

Charles R. Stickney, the plaintiff in a medical malpractice action, appeals from a jury verdict finding that neither of the defendants committed medical malpractice nor was negligent in the treatment of the plaintiff. The Court of Appeals, in an unpublished opinion filed July 15, 1988, 758 P.2d 755, reversed the judgment and ordered a new trial on the basis that the admission of collateral source benefits evidence was inherently prejudicial. The Court of Appeals did not address the other issues asserted by Mr. Stickney in his appeal. We granted petitions for review filed by The Wesley Medical Center (Wesley) and Ron Morford, M.D., the two original defendants.

On September 30, 1983, at about 3:30 a.m.,

Charles R. Stickney was involved in an auto accident in Wichita while en route to work. He was transported by ambulance to Wesley. Ambulance personnel had placed Stickney on a spine board and had protected his neck against movement with a cervical collar and foam 148 wedges. These precautions were standard procedure routinely undertaken with victims of automobile accidents. Stickney and the spine board were transferred from the ambulance to a hospital gurney at Wesley and wheeled to its emergency room.

Upon Stickney's arrival at the emergency room, Jeanmarie Epperly, a nurse assistant, and Dr. Ron Morford, the emergency room physician, attended to the plaintiff. Stickney did not report any neck pain or tenderness, and neither Epperly nor Morford, during their initial examinations of Stickney, observed any other signs normally associated with neck injuries.

Dr. Morford sent Stickney to the x-ray lab for the purpose of obtaining x-rays of his chest and left elbow. Stickney was still confined to the spine board with his neck protected by the cervical collar and foam restraints. During this period Stickney's wife and daughter arrived at Wesley. Upon his return from x-ray, Stickney was asked to sit up or stand up so the spine board could be removed from the gurney and returned to the ambulance personnel. He sat up and put his legs over the side of the gurney. Epperly testified that after 10 to 15 seconds Stickney insisted on standing up, even though she had told him to wait two to three minutes before he stood up. His daughter testified that Stickney slid off the side of the gurney toward the floor, his head slumping forward, and that her mother blocked his fall with her arm. Stickney broke out in a sweat, appeared to be short of breath, and complained of dizziness, chest pain, and neck pain. Epperly testified that she held Stickney's arm while calling for help, that he was laid back down on the gurney, and that he did not fall to the floor.

After Stickney's condition stabilized, Dr. Morford ordered an x-ray of his cervical spine, which revealed a fracture of the second cervical vertebra. Stickney subsequently developed a number of complications, necessitating a prolonged hospital stay.

Stickney filed this lawsuit on September 26, 1985, seeking damages for injuries and other losses sustained because of the alleged malpractice of Wesley and Dr. Morford. After a lengthy trial, the jury returned a verdict finding none of the parties to be at fault.

At the trial, collateral source benefits evidence was admitted pursuant to K.S.A. 1987 Supp. 60-3403 (subsequently held unconstitutional149 in Farley v. Engelken, 241 Kan. 663, 740 P.2d 1058 [1987], and since repealed). The Court of Appeals reversed the judgment in this case in reliance upon Farley and our recent decision in Harrier v. Gendel, 242 Kan. 798, 751 P.2d 1038 (1988). Additional facts will be set forth as they become relevant to the various issues on appeal.

*255 [1] The first issue is whether the trial court erred in ruling that, if plaintiff introduced Dr. Charles Girod's deposition into evidence, the defendants would be permitted to admit certain evidence for impeachment purposes. In the pretrial conference order filed January 27, 1987, Charles Girod, M.D., deceased, was identified by the plaintiff as a witness by deposition. Dr. Girod had been deposed during discovery proceedings by attorneys for the defendants. Dr. Girod died after the deposition was taken but before trial. Defendant Wesley had filed a motion in limine to prohibit introduction of Dr. Girod's deposition, arguing that the deposition allowed inadequate opportunity for cross-examination of Dr. Girod as plaintiff's expert witness. The motion was denied.

On February 13, 1987, Wesley filed a motion seeking permission to introduce evidence that Dr. Girod's staff privileges at El Dorado Hospital had been terminated. Following a hearing on the motion, the court ordered production of the documents alleged to be pertinent to the matter and ordered that they be made available to all counsel. The judge specifically reserved until trial the issue of whether the documents or related testimony would be admissible. Although no record was made of the February 20 hearing on the motion, a journal entry reflecting the proceedings and the trial court's orders was filed February 27, 1987. The journal entry was approved by plaintiff's counsel.

On March 6, 1987, plaintiff filed a motion in limine, in part asking the court to prohibit defendants from presenting any evidence maligning the reputation of Dr. Girod. At trial, counsel for Wesley again requested that the court disallow Dr. Girod's discovery deposition. The trial court declined to reverse the earlier ruling allowing admission of the deposition. Wesley then renewed its motion to admit impeachment evidence. Specifically, Wesley sought to introduce evidence that Dr. Girod had falsified hospital records pertinent to a medical malpractice case in which he was involved while on the medical staff of El 150 Dorado Hospital and that following peer review proceedings his privileges at the hospital were terminated. Dr. Girod's deposition testimony had been to the contrary in that he asserted he had not been the subject of any disciplinary proceedings, had not been subjected to peer review proceedings by the hospital, had been cleared of everything, and had voluntarily resigned because of politics and disagreement with the hospital administrator. The trial court held that the defendants would be permitted to impeach Dr. Girod's deposition testimony. Plaintiff's counsel then moved for a mistrial, arguing that the court's ruling was unfair and a complete surprise. The court denied the motion. Plaintiff proceeded with the trial but elected not to introduce Dr. Girod's deposition.

The plaintiff argues that the trial court reversed its earlier ruling prohibiting defendants from introducing the impeachment evidence. He contends that the ruling was a complete surprise and was a gross abuse of discretion and that the hospital documents proposed by the defense for introduction were inadmissible hearsay evidence under K.S.A. 1987 Supp. 60-460. He also argues that the impeachment evidence would have been so highly prejudicial as to render Dr. Girod's deposition worthless. Plaintiff's arguments that he was surprised and that the court's ruling was a reversal of a prior ruling are totally without merit. In a journal entry filed over three months prior to trial, which was approved by plaintiff's counsel, the court stated: "The Court specifically reserves until the time of trial any and all rulings upon the admissibility into evidence of any of the above documents [the hospital records relating to Dr. Girod's hospital privileges] or testimony relating to said documents." Plaintiff's counsel should not have been surprised by the position asserted by Wesley or by the court's ruling on this matter.

On cross-examination of an expert witness, great latitude is necessarily indulged in order that the intelligence of the witness, his powers of discernment, and his capacity to form a correct judgment may be submitted to the jury so it may have an opportunity for determining the value of the testimony. 256Bourgeois v. State Highway Commission, 179 Kan. 30, 34, 292 P.2d 683 (1956). In Bott v. Wendler, 203 Kan. 212, 228, 453 P.2d 100 (1969), this court stated:

> "The latitude permitted in the cross-examination of an expert witness is even 151 wider than in the case of an ordinary opinion witness. No rule can be laid down that would determine the extent and limitation of cross-examination allowable in every case. Generally speaking, the matter must rest in the sound discretion of the judge trying the case."

It is true that the evidence the defendants proposed to use to impeach Dr. Girod's testimony would have been extremely prejudicial and damaging. However, it is also clear that, if it had not been for the untimely death of Dr. Girod, the evidence could have been used in cross-examination of his live testimony. We think it was equally admissible when plaintiff desired to use the discovery deposition taken by defendants to his own advantage.

Plaintiff's brief on appeal, although not entirely clear, seems to assert that the impeaching documents would amount to inadmissible hearsay evidence pursuant to K.S.A. 1987 Supp. 60-460. The hearsay argument was not specifically raised before the trial court, but even if the issue is properly before this court, the documents would appear to be admissible as business records pursuant to the exception in K.S.A. 1987 Supp. 60-460(m). We find no abuse of discretion by the trial court on this issue.

The second issue is whether the trial court erred in permitting Jeanmarie Epperly to testify as an expert and to relate a personal experience as a victim of an automobile accident. Plaintiff also argues that the trial court should have permitted plaintiff's counsel to question Epperly concerning whether, in her experience, paralysis had ever resulted from movement of a patient's head.

[2] Jeanmarie Epperly was called by the plaintiff as an adverse witness. On direct examination, plaintiff's counsel asked Epperly about her scholastic training and brought out that she was not a registered nurse. On cross-examination, counsel for Wesley presented evidence as to her educational and employment history. There is no support in the record for plaintiff's contention that Epperly testified as an expert witness for the defendants. All of her testimony was directed to her observations and treatment of the plaintiff and to one personal instance when she had been involved in an auto accident. She was allowed to testify that in her own case she had been transported to the hospital on a spine board with her neck in restraints and was not given a cervical spine x-ray after her arrival. One of plaintiff's theories was that a cervical spine x-ray should have been performed immediately, since he was transported to Wesley on a spine board, immobilized152 by a cervical collar and foam wedges. We find no abuse of discretion in the allowance of the testimony, which had some relevance to one of the claims asserted by the plaintiff.

[3] On redirect examination, plaintiff's counsel asked Epperly the following question: "Have you ever had an occasion where a patient in the Emergency Room at Wesley, whose head had been permitted to be moved and as a result of that movement the patient was paralyzed?" Counsel for Wesley immediately objected, arguing the question was too vague and general. The court sustained the objection.

Generally, the relevance of testimony elicited by a party from any witness, and the scope of both direct and cross-examination of a witness, is subject to reasonable control by the trial court. Exercise of reasonable control will not constitute reversible error absent a showing of abuse of discretion resulting in prejudice. Manley v. Rings, 222 Kan. 258, 261, 564 P.2d 482 (1977).

Plaintiff did not allege that he suffered paralysis following his treatment in the Wesley emergency room. The question posed to Epperly was irrelevant to this case. Whether or not head movement had ever caused a patient paralysis in Epperly's experience at Wesley had no bearing on any material issue in this case. No error or abuse of discretion has been shown.

*257 [4] The next issue involves the admission of collateral source benefits evidence pursuant to K.S.A. 1987 Supp. 60-3403. At trial, evidence was admitted indicating that plaintiff had Teamster's Union insurance and that nearly all his medical expenses had been reimbursed.

Subsequent to the trial of this case a majority of this court held K.S.A. 1987 Supp. 60-3403 unconstitutional in Farley v. Engelken, 241 Kan. 663, 740 P.2d 1058 (1987). In Harrier v. Gendel, 242 Kan. 798, 751 P.2d 1038 (1988), the jury in a medical malpractice action found the defendant doctor had not been negligent in any degree, the same as in the present case. In Harrier the defendant doctor argued that the evidence of collateral source benefits related solely to the issue of damages and that the erroneous introduction of the evidence was harmless, since the jury returned a verdict of no negligence on the doctor's part. The plaintiff argued that the introduction of the collateral source benefits evidence was prejudicial, since it might have improperly influenced the jury on the issues of liability and negligence. This court stated:

> 153 "It is impossible to say that the jury's verdict was free from the prejudicial impact of the collateral source benefit evidence. To allow the introduction of evidence that the plaintiff received collateral source benefits is inherently prejudicial and requires reversal." 242 Kan. at 802, 751 P.2d 1038.

Justice Lockett, in a well-reasoned short dissent stated:

> "I agree with the majority's statement that evidence that a party received collateral source benefits is not admissible in a trial. Farley v. Engelken, 241 Kan. 663, 740 P.2d 1058 (1987). Under the instructions, however, the jury was not required to determine the collateral source issue. First, the jury was instructed to determine whether the defendant, Dr. Gendel, was negligent in his treatment of the plaintiff. If the jury found that the defendant was negligent, only then could it consider the fact that the plaintiff received collateral benefits while determining the compensation due the plaintiff.
> "The burden is upon the plaintiff to show that jurors disregarded their oath, not as a matter of speculation, but as a demonstrable reality. There must be more than speculation that it was reasonably certain defendant did not receive a fair trial. State v. Ruebke, 240 Kan. 493, 498-99, 731 P.2d 842 (1987). Where a party claims error in the admission of certain evidence, there is no presumption of prejudice from the introduction of evidence alone; in addition, the party claiming error must also prove that the error prejudiced the party. Walters v. Hitchcock, 237 Kan. 31, 35, 697 P.2d 847 (1985).
> "Unlike the majority, I cannot find that as a matter of law the improper introduction of evidence of collateral source benefits into the trial was so inherently prejudicial that it caused the jurors to disregard their oath and the judge's instructions and to decide the case on an improper ground. It is true the plaintiff did not receive a perfect trial, but he did receive a fair trial. I would affirm the judgment." 242 Kan. at 802, 751 P.2d 1038.

In view of our holding in Harrier, the Court of Appeals reversed the present case and ordered the case remanded for a new trial. Our holding in Harrier that the admission of collateral source benefits evidence was "inherently prejudicial and requires reversal" was controlling at the time of the Court of Appeals' opinion in this case.

However, in the very recent case of Wisker v. Hart, 244 Kan. 36, Syl. ¶ 4, 766 P.2d 168 (1988), we overruled Harrier and held:

> "The erroneous admission of collateral source evidence pursuant to K.S.A. 1987 Supp. 60-3403 (held unconstitutional in Farley v. Engelken, 241 Kan. 663, 740 P.2d 1058 [1987], and since repealed) is held to be harmless error where the jury found the plaintiff's decedent to be 60 percent at fault and, accordingly, did not determine damages. Our holding in Harrier v. Gendel, 242 Kan. 798, 751 P.2d 1038 (1988), to the contrary is overruled."

*258 Wisker controls this issue now before the court and requires that 154 we reverse the Court of Appeals' opinion herein. In view of the very recent opinion in Wisker, we see no need to dwell upon this issue further.

[5] The fourth issue is whether the trial court committed reversible error in refusing to permit plaintiff's counsel to cross-examine Dr. Greg Snyder regarding Snyder's alleged claim against Wesley in a prior malpractice action. Plaintiff alleges that this line of questioning was designed to challenge Dr. Snyder's credibility.

Dr. Snyder, a neurosurgeon, was called as an expert witness on behalf of Dr. Morford. Dr. Snyder had examined and treated Stickney soon after his arrival at Wesley. He testified that in his opinion Stickney's spinal cord injury occurred during the auto accident. He also testified that in his opinion nothing done in the emergency room in any way caused or contributed to Stickney's prolonged hospital stay.

On cross-examination, plaintiff's counsel inquired about a previous malpractice action naming Dr. Snyder, Wesley, and others as defendants. The witness was asked whether he had claimed in that suit that the plaintiff's injuries were caused by Wesley and the defendant radiologists. He responded, "I didn't make any claim that was true." The court sustained the objection by Wesley's counsel on the ground that the question was immaterial. Out of the hearing of the jury, plaintiff's counsel proffered that in the prior lawsuit Dr. Snyder was found not at fault and 100 percent of the fault was attributed to Wesley and the other defendants. Under the doctrine of comparative fault, certain pleadings filed on behalf of Dr. Snyder had alleged that if there was any negligence it was that of Wesley and the other defendants and not Dr. Snyder. Counsel argued he was entitled to show that Dr. Snyder's statement that he had made no claim against Wesley was incorrect.

Although the witness had answered the question before the court had an opportunity to rule on the objection, the ruling sustaining the objection was correct. When read in the context of a cold record the answer, at best, is ambiguous. In any event, the entire line of questioning which related to an unconnected case was not material or relevant to the issues in this case. Extrinsic evidence of a prior inconsistent statement may be admitted for impeachment purposes only if the subject matter of the inconsistency155 is material to the instant case. Lilly, An Introduction to the Law of Evidence § 84 (1978). In this case, the plaintiff sought to impeach the witness using extrinsic evidence dealing with a collateral matter-the negligence of Wesley in an unrelated lawsuit. The evidence was therefore properly excluded by the trial court. See State v. Carter, 148 Kan. 472, 473, 83 P.2d 689 (1938); State v. Ray, 54 Kan. 160, 161, 37 Pac. 996 (1894). In State v. Alexander, 89 Kan. 422, Syl. ¶ 3, 131 Pac. 139 (1913), this court held: "Evidence should not be admitted to contradict a statement of a witness elicited upon cross-examination upon a purely collateral matter which does not tend to prove or disprove an issue in the case, the contradictory evidence being offered by the party eliciting the statement."

The scope and extent of cross-examination for impeachment purposes rests largely in the trial court's discretion. State v. Nixon, 223 Kan. 788, 794, 576 P.2d 691 (1978); State v. Nix, 215 Kan. 880, 884, 529 P.2d 147 (1974). We find no abuse of discretion in the court's ruling.

Plaintiff also apparently complains that the trial court erred in sustaining objections to other questions propounded to Dr. Snyder on cross-examination. This line of questioning pertained to whether a cervical spine x-ray should have been taken prior to the time Stickney was permitted to sit up without wearing a cervical collar, and whether a cervical spine x-ray was indeed taken prior to that incident. Since plaintiff has not specifically briefed his arguments pertaining to this issue, it is waived or abandoned. Feldt v. Union Ins. Co., 240 Kan. 108, 112, 726 P.2d 1341 (1986); Steele v. Harrison, 220 Kan. 422, 429, 552 P.2d 957 (1976).

*259 [6] The fifth issue is whether the trial court erroneously denied plaintiff his right to cross-examine Dr. Philip Mills by sustaining various objections lodged by the defendants.

Dr. Mills testified for defendant Wesley. He is a physician whose specialty is physical medicine and rehabilitation. He was initially consulted in the Stickney case on December 9, 1983, and was responsible for directing Stickney's rehabilitation therapy from that date until after his discharge from the hospital.

The record does not support plaintiff's argument that he was denied his right to cross-examine Dr. Mills. Although the court did sustain several objections to particular questions raised on 156 cross-examination, none of the rulings constitute reversible error. The scope of cross-examination lies within the sound discretion of the trial court. Kearney v. Kansas Public Service Co., 233 Kan. 492, 501, 665 P.2d 757 (1983). The evidence plaintiff sought to elicit concerned events which took place when Stickney was first brought to the emergency room. The questions not only exceeded the scope of direct examination, but Dr. Mills repeatedly testified he had no knowledge or expertise regarding emergency room procedures. No abuse of discretion has been shown.

The last issue is whether the jury's verdict must be set aside and a new trial granted because the jury was permitted to read and examine certain depositions that were not admitted in evidence. This issue was never raised before the trial court and is not properly before this court for review. Kansas Dept. of Revenue v. Coca Cola Co., 240 Kan. 548, 552, 731 P.2d 273 (1987). In addition, the record is not sufficient to afford meaningful review.

The decision of the Court of Appeals is reversed and the judgment of the trial court is affirmed.

ALLEGRUCCI, Justice, concurring in part and dissenting in part:

I concur with the majority in all but section (4) of the syllabus and the corresponding portion of the opinion. This court's decision in Harrier v. Gendel, 242 Kan. 798, 751 P.2d 1038 (1988), was correct and I would reverse and remand the case for a new trial.

Case No. CV OC 1204792

MEMORANDUM IN SUPPORT OF DEFENDANTS' MOTIONS IN LIMINE

This is a medical malpractice case set for trial before this court on November 5, 2013. Pending before the court are the defense motions in limine. While most of the six defense motions in limine are self-explanatory, below is additional authority for consideration by the court in support of the defense motions.

1. Plaintiff Should Be Prohibited From Any Mention Of Liability Insurance.

Defendants move to prohibit Plaintiff Charles Ballard, his counsel, or any of his witnesses from in any way, directly or indirectly, mentioning to the jury, during either voir dire, Plaintiff's case in chief, cross-examination or rebuttal, or opening or closing statements, introducing evidence, submitting jury instructions, mentioning, or offering testimony or reports relating to the issue of Defendants' liability insurance.

Rule 402 of the Idaho Rules of Evidence (I.R.E.) prohibits a party from introducing any evidence that is not relevant. According to I.R.E. 401, relevant evidence "means evidence having any tendency to make the existence of any fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action more probably or less probable than it would be without the evidence." The disputed facts and issues in this matter relate to Plaintiff's allegations of medical malpractice. The Defendants' possession of liability insurance is not likely to make the existence of any fact needed for the determination of this claim more or less probable. Therefore, evidence of Defendants' insurance is not relevant to this case and Plaintiff should be barred from introducing it at trial.

In the alternative, if this Court finds that information regarding liability insurance is relevant, under I.R.E. 403, relevant evidence may be excluded if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice. In this case, any potential probative value of evidence regarding the Defendants' insurance coverage is substantially outweighed by the risk of unfair prejudice. Plaintiff can prove his claim for malpractice without a necessary reference to the Defendants' liability insurance. The prejudicial effect of an unnecessary reference to liability insurance, however, is substantial. Evidence of a party's insurance coverage is likely to be misused by the jury.

Under I.R.E. 411, "[e]vidence that a person was or was not insured against liability is not admissible upon the issue whether the person acted negligently or otherwise wrongfully." The Advisory Committee on the Federal Rules of Evidence explained that Rule 411 is based on "the feeling that knowledge of the presence or absence of liability insurance would induce juries to decide cases on improper grounds." Fed. R. Evid. 411 advisory committee's note (1972). Although evidence of liability insurance may be admissible for a limited purpose, none of the limited applications are appropriate for the case at bar. See I.R.E. 411. The mention of liability insurance will only put in the minds of the jury that Defendants are insured. See Lehmkuhl v. Bowland, 114 Idaho 503, 508; 757 P.2d 1222, 1227 (Ct. App. 1998) (review denied) (Idaho Rule of Evidence 411 may be utilized to assure that issues of liability based upon insurance are not introduced). Such an inference will unfairly and unnecessarily prejudice the jury to conclude that it will not be the Defendants' own personal money that would pay any potential verdict.

The decision whether to allow inquiries relating to insurance during voir dire is a matter within the trial court's discretion. See Harris v. Alessi, 141 Idaho 901, 907, 120 P.3d 289, 295 (Ct. App. 2005). However, "[t]he fact that this practice is not forbidden by Idaho law does not mean that a trial court must allow it. " Id. (citing Kozlowski v. Rush, 121 Idaho 825, 831, 828 P.2d 854, 860 (1992)). Here, there is no indication that allowing Plaintiff's counsel to make statements regarding liability insurance during voir dire will contribute to a purported aim of ferreting out juror bias. Any reference to liability insurance during voir dire will be highly prejudicial in that it will signal to the jury that the Defendants are insured.

For the foregoing reasons, the Court should enter an order prohibiting Plaintiff from discussing, in any way, the issue of Defendants' liability insurance.

2. Plaintiff Should Be Prohibited From Discussing The Issue Of Whether Any Defendant or Defense Expert Has Been Sued For Malpractice Or Has Any Prior Board Or Licensing Matters.

Defendants move to prohibit Plaintiff Charles Ballard, his counsel, or any of his witnesses from in any way, directly or indirectly, mentioning to the jury, during either voir dire, Plaintiff's case in chief, cross-examination or rebuttal, or opening or closing statements, introducing evidence, submitting jury instructions, mentioning, or offering testimony or reports relating to whether any Defendant or defense expert has been sued for malpractice or has been the subject of any prior administrative licensing matter. Information regarding any such issue is irrelevant and would be unfairly prejudicial to the Defendants.

Per I.R.E. 401, information regarding an expert's previous lawsuit history would be irrelevant and therefore under I.R.E. 402, inadmissible. The disputed facts and issues in this matter relate to Plaintiff's allegations of medical malpractice. Whether any of the defendants or defense experts have ever been sued for medical malpractice or have been involved in any board proceeding has no tendency to make the existence of facts related to Plaintiff's allegations of malpractice more or less probable. Therefore, information regarding previous lawsuits of any defense expert is irrelevant and is not admissible.

Even if this Court were to find information regarding any of the defense expert's medical malpractice lawsuits or prior board proceedings to somehow be relevant, its probative value is grossly outweighed by the risk of unfair prejudice to the Defendants and should be excluded under I.R.E 403. "It is well established that a trial court has considerable discretion to exclude evidence for reasons ... that the evidence is confusing, and could [be] interpreted in many different ways." Burgess v. Salmon River Canal Co., Ltd., 127 Idaho 565 574, 903 P.3d 730, 739 (1994). Any mention that a Defendant or defense expert has been sued or has been the subject of a prior board matter is unfairly prejudicial because such information could be interpreted by the jury in myriad ways which are not applicable to the case at bar. The raising of such a collateral issue by Plaintiffs' counsel will result in a protracted mini-trial on such issues which will only serve to confuse and distract the jury from the actual limited malpractice issues before them.

Attached to the affidavit of counsel in support of the Defendants' motions in Limine are the reported decisions from a number of other jurisdictions wherein the issue of using prior disciplinary matters and/or prior malpractice claims for impeachment purposes was held improper, see Noble v. Lansche, 735 S.W. 2d (Mo. Ct. App. 1987) (holding evidence that medical malpractice Plaintiff's expert witness physician had voluntarily surrendered his license to dispense narcotics was inadmissible impeachment); King v. Byrd, 716 So.2d 831, 835 (Fla. 4th DCA 1998) (error for trial court to allow defense counsel to cross examine plaintiff's expert witness with questions concerning past disciplinary proceedings since such questions are an improper attack on the witness' credibility); Heshelman v. Lombardi, 454 N.W. 2d 603 (Mich. Ct. App. 1990) (trial court abused discretion in allowing cross examination of medical expert regarding prior claims of malpractice as it is not probative of his truthfulness or competency and knowledge – such allegations of malpractice are analogous to unproven charges of criminal activity); Stickney v. Wesley Medical Center, 768 P.2d 253 (Kan. 1989) (affirming in part on grounds that plaintiff sought to improperly impeach defense medical expert with extrinsic evidence involving an unrelated lawsuit); Manhardt v. Tamton, 832 So.2d 129 (Fla. 2nd DCA 2002) (Plaintiff entitled to new trial, in part, after defense counsel improperly questioned plaintiff expert about prior lawsuits); Morrow v. Stivers, 836 S.W.2d 464 (Kent. Ct. App. (1992) (trial court properly precluded counsel from asking plaintiff medical expert on cross examination whether he had his license to practice medicine suspended for five years due to passing hepatitis to several patients, citing general rule that a witness cannot be cross examined on a collateral matter which is irrelevant to the issue at hand); Hathcock v. Wood, 815 So.2d 502 (Ala. 2001)(affirming district court's refusal to allow counsel from asking plaintiff medical expert on cross examination as to the probationary status of his professional license, citing that under Rule 608(b), the only kind of evidence that may be presented as to an expert's character for truthfulness is evidence regarding the expert's general reputation in the community for untruthfulness or opinion testimony from another competent witness).

Although no such reported decisions exist on this narrow topic in Idaho, the majority of these case authorities have adopted rules of evidence which are identical or nearly identical to those in Idaho. These decisions aptly demonstrate the improper nature of cross examination questions which seek to delve into an experts past lawsuits and board matters. Such allegations are analogous to unproven accusations which may not be used for impeachment purposes. The attempt at impeachment using such evidence does not address the expert's skill, knowledge, or qualifications as an expert medical witness; instead, its calculated effect is to simply cast a pall of disparagement over the doctor's testimony by reason of irrelevant misconduct. For these reasons, such evidence should be excluded at the trial.

In Idaho, medical malpractice actions are governed by Idaho Code § 6-1012. In this case, Plaintiff's claim against Dr. Kerr is judged relative to his compliance with the standard of health care practice applicable to a physician engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise, Idaho in 2010. Any discussions of any other suits involving any other case or expert, would involve injecting into the trial collateral issues, a different standard of health care practice and a different time for which no expert testimony has been disclosed. For the foregoing reasons, the Court should enter an order prohibiting Plaintiff from presenting evidence or testimony regarding any Defendant or defense expert's prior medical malpractice lawsuits, claims and/or licensing matters of any kind.

3. Plaintiff Should Be Prohibited From Presenting Evidence, Or Discussing In Any Way, Defense Expert Gregory Laurence, M.D.'S Yet To Be Resolved Indictment By A Federal Grand Jury.

Defendants move to prohibit Plaintiff Charles Ballard, his counsel, or any of his witnesses from in any way, directly or indirectly, mentioning to the jury, during either voir dire, Plaintiff's case in chief, cross-examination or rebuttal, or opening or closing statements, introducing evidence, submitting jury instructions, mentioning, or offering testimony or documents of any kind relating to the issue of Dr. Gregory Laurence's federal grand jury indictment.

Dr. Gregory Laurence is a defense standard of practice expert from Tennessee. At his October 2013 deposition, Dr. Laurence was questioned by Plaintiff's counsel regarding a federal grand jury indictment filed against him and others which was filed in Colorado for alleged violation of 26 U.S.C. § 7212(a) and 18 U.S.C. § 2 – Corrupt Endeavor to Obstruct or Impede Due Administration of the Internal Revenue Laws and Aiding and Abetting) and for alleged violation of 18 U.S.C. § 1503 – Obstruction of Justice). The indictment was handed down in May 2013 and this matter is still simply at the indictment phase. No trial date, plea or conviction of any kind has been entered against Dr. Laurence. The defense contends that to allow any reference to Dr. Laurence's indictment at the trial would be unfairly prejudicial, irrelevant and arguably raise an appeal issue.

Under I.R.E. 401, information regarding a defense expert's grand jury indictment is irrelevant and under I.R.E 402, is not admissible. The disputed facts and issues in this matter relate to Plaintiff's allegations of medical malpractice involving the death of Krystal Ballard. Whether Dr. Laurence, who is acting as a defense expert, has been indicted by a federal grand jury on an unrelated contested tax issue is an entirely collateral issue which has absolutely no tendency to make the existence of facts related to Plaintiff's allegations of medical malpractice more or less probable. Therefore, information regarding his indictment is irrelevant and not admissible.

Even if this Court were to conclude that information regarding Dr. Laurence's grand jury indictment to be somehow relevant, its probative value is grossly outweighed by the risk of unfair prejudice to the Defendants. As a result, it should be excluded under I.R.E 403. More to the point, I.R.E. 608(b) prohibits the admission of extrinsic evidence of a witness's prior misconduct to impeach a witness's credibility. While there is an exception under I.R.E. 609 for impeachment by evidence of conviction of a crime, that exception does not apply to Dr. Laurence's indictment which is not a conviction of any kind. Rule 609(a) states:

> For the purpose of attacking the credibility of a witness,, evidence of the fact that the witness has been convicted of a felony and the nature of the felony shall be admitted if elicited from the witness or established by public record, but only if the court determines in a hearing outside the presence of the jury that the fact of the prior conviction or the nature of the prior conviction, or both, are relevant to the credibility of the witness and that the probative value of admitting this evidence outweighs its prejudicial effect to the party offering the witness.

(Emphasis added). Furthermore, under Federal Rule of Evidence 609, which I.R.E. 609 was modeled after, "the following do not qualify as convictions, i.e., are inadmissible [under Rule 609]: an indictment, an arrest, acts that may be criminal but have not been prosecuted ...." Frazier v. IMED Corp., 2003 WL 1984366, *3 (Del. Super. Ct. April 25, 2003) (citing 4 Jack B. Weinstein & Margaret A. Berger, Weinstein's Federal Evidence § 609.03, at 609-13 to 609-14 (citations omitted) (Joseph M. McClaughlin ed., 2d ed. 2002) (internal quotations omitted). In the instant case, extrinsic evidence regarding Dr. Laurence's grand jury indictment is inadmissible because not been convicted of a felony.

If allowed into evidence, Dr. Laurence would be unfairly impeached by the jury without him ever being able to defend himself. It would open up an entirely irrelevant issue which would consume court time and force the defense to interrupt the trial in order to present a mini-trial on the collateral issue of why Dr. Laurence is not guilty of tax evasion. Finally, use of the indictment would not even be relevant for impeachment purposes because Dr. Laurence did not deny its existence, but rather he truthfully admitted in his deposition all about the indictment before opposing counsel elected to produce the indictment.

For the foregoing reasons, the Court should enter an order prohibiting Plaintiff from presenting any evidence or testimony regarding defense expert Dr. Laurence's grand jury indictment.

DEFENDANTS' REQUESTED

These instructions define your duties as members of the jury and the law that applies to this case. Your duties are to determine the facts, to apply the law set forth in these instructions to those facts, and in this way to decide the case. In so doing, you must follow these instructions. You must consider them as a whole, not picking out one or disregarding others. Neither sympathy nor prejudice should influence you in your deliberations. Faithful performance by you of these duties is vital to the administration of justice.

In determining the facts, you may consider only the evidence admitted in this trial. This evidence consists of the testimony of the witnesses, the exhibits offered and received, and any stipulated or admitted facts. The production of evidence in court is governed by rule of law. At times during the trial, I may sustain an objection to a question without permitting the witness to answer it or to an offered exhibit without receiving it into evidence. I will do this when the question called for testimony that was not admissible or when the exhibit itself was inadmissible. In reaching your decision, you may not consider such a question or exhibit or speculate as to what the answer or exhibit would have shown. In addition, where an answer is given or an exhibit received, I may instruct that it be stricken from the record, that you disregard it and that you dismiss it from your minds. I will do this when it becomes apparent that the evidence was inadmissible only after it had been presented to you. In reaching your decision, you may not consider this testimony or exhibit. Except as explained in this instruction, none of my rulings are intended by me to indicate any opinion concerning the evidence in this case.

The arguments and remarks of the attorneys involved in this case are intended to help you in understanding the evidence and applying the instructions, but they are not themselves evidence. If any argument or remark has no basis in the evidence, then you should disregard it. However, there are two exceptions to this rule: (1) An admission of fact by one attorney is binding on his party; and (2) stipulations of fact by all attorneys are binding on all parties.

The law does not require you to believe all of the evidence admitted in the course of the trial. As the sole judges of the facts, you must determine what evidence you believe and what weight you attach to it. In so doing, you bring with you to this courtroom all of the experience and background of your lives. In your everyday affairs, you determine for yourselves whom you believe, what you believe and how much weight you attach to what you are told. The same considerations that you use in your everyday dealings in making these decisions are the considerations which you should apply in your deliberations.

In evaluating the testimony, you should consider such items as: the interest, bias or prejudice of any witness in the outcome of this case; the age and appearance of the witness and the manner in which he gives his testimony; the opportunity that the witness had to observe the facts about which he testified; the contradiction, if any, of a witness's testimony by other evidence; any statements made by the witness at other times that are inconsistent with his present testimony; any evidence regarding a witness's general reputation for truth, honesty or integrity; and any felony conviction of a witness.

In evaluating the exhibits, you should consider such items as: the circumstances under which the exhibit was prepared; and the probability that the exhibit accurately reflects what it is intended to show in light of the other evidence of the case.

When I use the expression "proximate cause," I mean a cause which, in natural or probable sequence, produced the injury, loss or damage, and but for that cause the damage would not have occurred. It need not be the only cause. It is sufficient if it is a substantial factor in bringing about the injury, loss or damage. It is not a proximate cause if the injury, loss or damage likely would have occurred anyway.

I have outlined for you the rules of law applicable to this case and have told you of some of the matters which you may consider in weighing the evidence to determine the facts. In a few minutes counsel will present their closing remarks to you; and then you will retire to the jury room for deliberations.

The attitude and conduct of jurors at the beginning of their deliberations are important. It is rarely productive for a juror, at the outset, to make an emphatic expression of his opinion on the case or to state how he intends to vote. When one does that at the beginning, his sense of pride may be aroused; and he may hesitate to change his position, even if shown that it is wrong. Remember that you are not partisans or advocates, but are judges. For you, as for me, there can be no triumph except in the ascertainment and declaration of the truth.

Consult with one another. Consider each other's views and deliberate with the objective of reaching an agreement, if you can do so without disturbing your individual judgment. Each of you must decide this case for yourself; but you should do so only after a discussion and consideration of the case with your fellow jurors.

Members of the Jury: In order to return a verdict, it is necessary that at least three-fourths of the jury agree. Your verdict must represent the considered judgment of each juror agreeing to it.

It is your duty, as jurors, to consult with one another and to deliberate with a view to reaching an agreement, if you can do so without violence to individual judgment. Each of you must decide the case for yourself, but do so only after an impartial consideration of the evidence with your fellow jurors. In the course of your deliberations, do not hesitate to reexamine your own views and change your opinion if convinced it is erroneous. But do not surrender your honest conviction as to the weight or effect of evidence solely because of the opinion of your fellow jurors, or for the mere purpose of returning a verdict.

INSTRUCTION NO. _____

These instructions define your duties as members of the jury and the law that applies to this case. Your duties are to determine the facts, to apply the law set forth in these instructions to those facts, and in this way to decide the case. In so doing, you must follow these instructions. You must consider them as a whole, not picking out one or disregarding others. Neither sympathy nor prejudice should influence you in your deliberations. Faithful performance by you of these duties is vital to the administration of justice.

In determining the facts, you may consider only the evidence admitted in this trial. This evidence consists of the testimony of the witnesses, the exhibits offered and received, and any stipulated or admitted facts. The production of evidence in court is governed by rule of law. At times during the trial, I may sustain an objection to a question without permitting the witness to answer it or to an offered exhibit without receiving it into evidence. I will do this when the question called for testimony that was not admissible or when the exhibit itself was inadmissible. In reaching your decision, you may not consider such a question or exhibit or speculate as to what the answer or exhibit would have shown. In addition, where an answer is given or an exhibit received, I may instruct that it be stricken from the record, that you disregard it and that you dismiss it from your minds. I will do this when it becomes apparent that the evidence was inadmissible only after it had been presented to you. In reaching your decision, you may not consider this testimony or exhibit. Except as explained in this instruction, none of my rulings are intended by me to indicate any opinion concerning the evidence

The arguments and remarks of the attorneys involved in this case are intended to help you in understanding the evidence and applying the instructions, but they are not themselves evidence. If any argument or remark has no basis in the evidence, then you should disregard it. However, there are two exceptions to this rule: (1) An admission of fact by one attorney is binding on his party; and (2) stipulations of fact by all attorneys are binding on all parties.

The law does not require you to believe all of the evidence admitted in the course of the trial. As the sole judges of the facts, you must determine what evidence you believe and what weight you attach to it. In so doing, you bring with you to this courtroom all of the experience and background of your lives. In your everyday affairs, you determine for yourselves whom you believe, what you believe and how much weight you attach to what you are told. The same considerations that you use in your everyday dealings in making these decisions are the considerations which you should apply in your deliberations.

In evaluating the testimony, you should consider such items as: the interest, bias or prejudice of any witness in the outcome of this case; the age and appearance of the witness and the manner in which he gives his testimony; the opportunity that the witness had to observe the facts about which he testified; the contradiction, if any, of a witness's testimony by other evidence; any statements made by the witness at other times that are inconsistent with his present testimony; any evidence regarding a witness's general reputation for truth, honesty or integrity; and any felony conviction of a witness.

In evaluating the exhibits, you should consider such items as: the circumstances under which the exhibit was prepared; and the probability that the exhibit accurately reflects what it is intended to show in light of the other evidence of the case.

DEFENDANTS' REQUESTED

INSTRUCTION NO. _____

As you can well surmise, this case is important to both sides, and each party to the suit is entitled to your full and fair consideration. You are not to associate in any way with the parties, their attorneys, agents or witnesses. You are likewise not to discuss the case with anyone, or permit anyone to discuss the case with you, whether within or without the courthouse, during the course of the trial; and you are not yourself to contact anyone in an attempt to discuss or gain a greater understanding of the case. In the event that anyone attempts to discuss the case with you or to influence your decision, you will report it to me promptly. You are not even to discuss the case among yourselves until you retire to the jury room to deliberate at the close of the entire case, and you are not to form or express any opinion on the case until you have heard all of the testimony and have had the benefit of my instructions as to the law which applies to the case. You should not go to the place where any alleged event occurred unless the Court orders a supervised jury visit to that place.

When I say that a party has the burden of proof on any proposition, or use the expression "if you find," or "if you decide," I mean you must be persuaded, considering all the evidence in the case, that the proposition on which he has the burden of proof is more probably true than not true.

DEFENDANTS' REQUESTED

INSTRUCTION NO. _____

Evidence may be either direct or circumstantial. Direct evidence is evidence that directly proves one of the facts on which a party has the burden of proof in the case, without resorting to inference. Circumstantial evidence is evidence that indirectly proves one of the facts on which a party has the burden of proof in the case, by means of proving one or more facts from which the fact at issue may be inferred.

The law makes no distinction between direct and circumstantial evidence as to the degree of proof required; each is accepted as a reasonable method of proof and each is respected for such convincing force as it may carry.

Case No. CV OC 1204792

PLAINTIFF'S CONSOLIDATED MOTIONS IN LIMINE

COMES NOW the Plaintiff, Charles Ballard, by and through his attorneys, pursuant to Idaho Code § 9-102, Idaho Rule of Evidence 103(c), and the Court's Amended Scheduling Order of September 9, 2013, and moves for an order in limine regarding the following matters:

I. The Possibility that Charles Ballard Might Remarry or Enter Into Another Relationship;

II. Krystal Ballard's Purported Noncompliance;

III. The Absence of Infection in Other Silk Touch Patients to Prove Compliance with the Standard of Care as to Krystal Ballard;

IV. Life Insurance and Other Collateral Sources;

V. Dr. Charles Garrison's Untimely Opinion Regarding Fat Embolism and All Undisclosed Expert Opinions;

VI. Defense Experts Who Failed to Properly Familiarize Themselves as to the Applicable Standard of Practice;

VII. Dr. Kerr's Communication with Krystal Ballard's Aunt;

VIII. Dr. Lundeby's Testimony as to Krystal Ballard's Cause of Death;

IX. Evidence, Argument, and Special Verdict Pertaining to Third Party Liability;

X. Testimony of Dr. Kerr Regarding a Medical Malpractice Action Involving Plaintiff's Expert, Dr. Sorensen;

XI. Speaking Objections, Unsworn Testimony of Counsel, and References to the Parties' Motion Practice While in the Jury's Presence;

XII. Ad Hominem Arguments and Remarks;

XIII. Settlement Negotiations;

XIV. Expert Testimony That Invades the Province of the Jury; and

XV. Cumulative Expert Testimony.

The order in limine should forbid Defendants and Defendants' counsel at trial from causing or permitting the jury to hear, read, or otherwise become aware of the foregoing matters in any way, whether through the testimony of its witnesses, in cross-examination of Plaintiff's witnesses, in colloquy or argument, or in any other manner, and whether in the case-in-chief, rebuttal, or surrebuttal.

A memorandum in support of these motions follows. An Affidavit of Counsel, to which all exhibits referenced herein are attached, is filed contemporaneously with these motions.

MEMORANDUM

I. THE POSSIBILITY THAT CHARLES BALLARD MIGHT REMARRY OR ENTER INTO ANOTHER RELATIONSHIP

By his Complaint, Charles Ballard asserts a claim for wrongful death and alleges that his wife, Krystal Ballard, died as a direct and proximate result of Defendants' negligence and other wrongful conduct in connection with a cosmetic surgical procedure performed on July 21, 2010. (See Compl., March 16, 2012.) Plaintiff specifically alleges, among other things, that the sterilization procedures and techniques implemented, used, and performed . . . while providing cosmetic surgery services to Krystal Ballard . . . fell below the standards of care owed to the patient . . . ." (Id. at ¶16.)

During his deposition in this matter, Mr. Ballard testified that he has not remarried since his wife's passing. (Exhibit A, Ballard Dep. 169:13-15, Feb. 1, 2013.) Plaintiff now moves the Court, in limine, to preclude evidence and argument pertaining to the possibility that Charles Ballard might remarry or become involved in another relationship because such evidence and argument is wholly irrelevant and because such evidence and argument necessitates impermissible speculation.

Idaho's wrongful death statute provides, "When the death of a person is caused by the wrongful act or neglect of another, his or her heirs . . . may maintain an action for damages against the person causing the death . . . ." Idaho Code § 5-311(1). "In every action under this section, such damages may be given as under all the circumstances of the case as may be just." Id. Notably, however, the remarriage of a decedent's spouse is entirely irrelevant in wrongful death actions. Westfall v. Caterpillar, Inc., 120 Idaho 918, 922-924, 821 P.2d 973, 977-979 (1991).

In Westfall, the appellant, Caterpillar, Inc., argued "that the [trial] court improperly granted plaintiffs' motion in limine which . . . excluded all evidence of Karla Westfall's remarriage subsequent to the loss of her husband." Westfall, 120 Idaho at 922, 821 P.2d at 977. "According to Caterpillar, evidence of remarriage should [have been] considered by the jury, because under I.C. § 5-311, 'all the circumstances' should be taken into account to determine an award for wrongful death." Id. In rejecting Caterpillar's argument, the Westfall Court held that "there are a number of soundly based reasons for not admitting evidence of [Ms. Westfall's] remarriage, and we are made aware of no good reason for allowing any defendant to inversely profit by a court ruling which would be other than that reached by [the trial court]." Id.

First, the Court looked to Idaho Code § 5-311 and noted that "[w]rongful death actions are designed to reimburse heirs for their expectations of parental beneficence they would have received had the decedent lived."[1] The Court continued, "This regime does not allow for consideration of financial and other circumstances that arise subsequent to the death of a parent who is survived by heirs." Id.

The Court also considered the origins of the Idaho wrongful death statute, as well as its conformity with "[t]he American doctrine," which "has its foundation in the refusal of [courts] to allow the defendant to benefit by his own wrong . . . ." Westfall, 120 Idaho at 923, 821 P.2d at 978. In so doing, the Court observed that "[t]he true question is: What had these plaintiffs the right to expect to receive from the parent during his life? And for the loss of this they are to be compensated. What they got after his death does not enter into the case." Id. (quoting Stahler v. Philadelphia & Reading Ry. Co., 199 Pa. 383, 49 A. 273 (1901)). For these reasons, the Court ruled that "Caterpillar was not entitled to benefit from the fact that decedent's spouse had remarried." Westfall, 120 Idaho at 924, 821 P.2d at 979.

Unlike Westfall, in which the decedent's wife had remarried, this case involves a plaintiff who has not yet remarried, and who may never remarry. Likewise, Mr. Ballard may or may not become involved in another relationship. Therefore, the prejudice caused by the information's irrelevance is compounded by the speculation necessitated by its introduction. Evidence and argument centering on Charles Ballard's potential to remarry or potential to become involved in a romantic relationship would invite the jury to not only assign weight to completely irrelevant evidence, but it would simultaneously encourage the jury to hazard a guess as to the likelihood and mitigating value of any such potential remarriage or relationship. For these reasons, it would be improper for Defendants to benefit at trial by suggesting that Plaintiff may suffer diminished damages on account of a hypothetical remarriage or relationship, which would serve no probative value even if Mr. Ballard had remarried or entered into a relationship. Accordingly, at the trial of this matter, evidence and argument pertaining to same should be precluded.

II. KRYSTAL BALLARD'S PURPORTED NONCOMPLIANCE

By their Answer in this matter, Defendants state as their Third Defense that "Plaintiff and Krystal Ballard were guilty of negligence and careless misconduct at the time of and in connection with the manners [sic] and damages alleged, which proximately caused and contributed to said events and resultant damages, if any." (Ans. 2, April 16, 2012.) Defendants intend to pursue a comparative negligence theory by attempting to establish that Krystal Ballard engaged in a "pattern of noncompliance," though these purportedly noncompliant acts were not, in fact, noncompliance, and more importantly, though these purportedly noncompliant acts have no causal relationship to Krystal Ballard's death. Accordingly, and because Defendants' "noncompliance" arguments rely upon speculation, as opposed to facts contained within the record of this case, evidence and argument pertaining to same should be precluded.

Dr. Kerr testified at deposition[2] that "[o]ne of the aspects of Krystal's post-operative care was her pattern of not doing the things that we had asked her to do." (Exhibit B, B. Kerr Dep. 86:19-21, Jan. 30, 2013.)

> It became apparent that she was non-compliant with a number of the things that we had . . . advised her to do because, in fact, she was trying to hide the procedure from both her husband, Charles, and, in our opinion, from the military, and it's my opinion that this compromised her ability to properly take care of herself.

(Id. at 86:22 – 87:4.) Dr. Kerr continued, "[M]y experience with patients is that when they are trying to hide the procedure, they don't -- they can't change their bandages appropriately, they will oftentimes overexert . . . [and they] may not take their medications as prescribed." (Id. at 87:6-14.)

Dr. Kerr admits that he did not observe Krystal Ballard "around-the-clock" postoperatively. (Id. at 87:5-6.) He relies only upon a comment made by Mrs. Ballard days after the subject procedures whereby she stated that she may have been too active, as well as a "suspicion" that Mrs. Ballard may have been planning to take an Air Force physical training exam subsequent to her liposuction and fat transfer procedures. (Id. at 127:8-14, 129:5-10, [2] Dr. Kerr testified in two separate depositions in this matter: once on his own behalf, and once as a designee of the corporate defendant. The instant reference is to Dr. Kerr's testimony on his own behalf.

130:6-11.) Dr. Kerr does not recall ever asking Krystal Ballard to elaborate on her postsurgical activity, and he conceded, "I have no basis in fact that she [participated in a physical training exam]." (Id. at 133:14-20.) As a result, Dr. Kerr can opine only that "[Krystal Ballard] may have done activities, leave the wound sites open to drainage, and that certainly can be a pathway to introduce bacteria." (Id. at 87:20-23 (emphasis added).)

Dr. Kerr saw Krystal Ballard on July 23, 2010, two days after her liposuction and fat transfer procedures, and noted no evidence or suspicion that Krystal Ballard had failed to properly attend to her postsurgical wounds. (Exhibit C, Postoperative Examination Record, July 23, 2010.) Moreover, Donna Berg, an employee of Silk Touch, acknowledged that Krystal Ballard stayed home from work on July 23, 2010, and therefore, did not participate in any workplace testing that day. (Exhibit D, Email from D. Berg to S. Kerr, July 28, 2010.)

Defendants also intend to advance a noncompliance theory based upon Krystal Ballard's arrival for surgery without anyone to drive her home. (B. Kerr Dep. 136:9-15.) According to Dr. Kerr, patients are instructed to have someone else drive them home after cosmetic surgery to avoid driving while under the influence of sedatives and for any "other conditions secondary to the procedure that would preclude [a patient] from driving home." (Id. at 141:6-15.) Dr. Kerr eliminated both of these concerns by not administering a sedative during Krystal Ballard's procedure, and by conducting postoperative observation of Mrs. Ballard for a sufficient amount of time to assure himself that Mrs. Ballard could drive home safely. (Id. at 141:16-21.) He performed the scheduled procedures despite his knowledge that Krystal Ballard had no one to drive her home.

According to Dr. Geoffrey Stiller, Defendants' general and cosmetic surgery expert, it was Dr. Kerr's choice to proceed, or to not proceed, with Mrs. Ballard's liposuction and fat transfer on account of there being no person to drive Mrs. Ballard home, and it was appropriate for Dr. Kerr to proceed with the subject surgery in the absence of a third party driver for Krystal Ballard's post-operative transportation. (Exhibit E, Stiller Dep. 118:12-19, 120:19-20, 121:22-23, July 19, 2013.) Even so, Dr. Stiller remains critical of Krystal Ballard "[b]ecause she didn't listen to [Dr. Kerr] in the first place." (Id. at 121:3-4.)

Defendants also intend to demonstrate noncompliance by the fact that Krystal Ballard failed to take postoperative, narcotic pain medication. (B. Kerr Dep. 117:6-7.) There is no dispute that Dr. Kerr prescribed Norco, a drug containing hydrocodone, to manage Krystal Ballard's post-operative pain. (B. Kerr Dep. 117:6-11; Exhibit F, Lundeby Dep. 95:19-22, July 26, 2013.) It is also uncontested that Norco does nothing to stop or fight infection. (B. Kerr Dep. 118:6-8.)

Dr. Kerr's order called for Mrs. Ballard to take a pill by mouth every four hours as needed for pain. (B. Kerr Dep. 118:15 – 119:2; Lundeby Dep. 96:1-6.) Krystal Ballard voiced a preference for Motrin, as opposed to a narcotic pain medication, out of concern for drug testing at her place of employment, the Mountain Home Air Force Base. (B. Kerr Dep. 122:21 – 123:2.)

During his deposition, defense expert, Dr. Lundeby, acknowledged that Norco had been prescribed on an as needed basis, and furthermore, that a patient should not be considered noncompliant by preferring Motrin over a narcotic pain medication. (Lundeby Dep. 96:1-6, 96:19-23.) Furthermore, when asked whether Krystal Ballard's decision to avoid Norco led to bacteria entering her body, Dr. Kerr himself admitted that it did not. (B. Kerr Dep. 119:23 – 120:2.)

For his part, Dr. Stiller also concedes that Krystal Ballard should not be faulted for preferring Motrin over a narcotic pain medication:

Q. Okay. Well, let me ask you this. You don't know one way or the other. I mean, you know she got a prescription for Norco?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. That's the day she came in two days postop?
A. She got it actually the day of the operation as well.
Q. True. Well, did she take it?
A. She said she didn't.
Q. Okay. Is there anything wrong if she decides to manage it with non-narcotics?
A. There isn't anything wrong with that, you're correct.

(Stiller Dep. 125:17 – 126:5.)

Defendants' infectious disease expert, Dr. Thomas Coffman, testified that the only significance that can be attributed to Krystal Ballard's election to avoid narcotic pain medication is that Krystal Ballard's pain must not have been significant enough to justify its usage. (Exhibit G, Coffman Dep. 48:16-21, Aug. 20, 2013.) Nevertheless, Dr. Kerr remains steadfast that "[p]ain can . . . alter a person's behavior." (B. Kerr Dep. 120:11-12 (emphasis added).) "[I]f she was not getting adequate pain control . . . then she would not have followed the instructions on how to care for herself . . . ." (Id. at 123:6-10 (emphasis added).)

Lastly, Defendants intend to establish noncompliance by the fact that Krystal Ballard failed to inform the Air Force of her cosmetic medical procedures. (Stiller Dep. 140:5-8.) And while Dr. Stiller admitted that any such failure had no relationship to Krystal Ballard's cause of death, it is Dr. Stiller's belief that any deviation from military protocol "shows a pattern of noncompliance." (Id. at 140:5-17.)

Defendants' evidence of purported noncompliance should be precluded because the cited acts have no causal connection to Krystal Ballard's death, because Defendants' opinions are grounded in speculation rather than factual evidence, and lastly, because some of the purportedly noncompliant acts are admitted by Defendants and their experts to be appropriate patient conduct. The Idaho Code provides as follows with regard to contributory negligence:

> Contributory negligence or comparative responsibility shall not bar recovery in an action by any person or his legal representative to recover damages for negligence, gross negligence or comparative responsibility resulting in death or in injury to person or property, if such negligence or comparative responsibility was not as great as the negligence, gross negligence or comparative responsibility of the person against whom recovery is sought, but any damages allowed shall be diminished in the proportion to the amount of negligence or comparative responsibility attributable to the person recovering. Nothing contained herein shall create any new legal theory, cause of action, or legal defense.

Idaho Code § 6-801.

"The burden of proof of the affirmative defense of contributory negligence is upon the party pleading such defense, unless it appears from the evidence introduced by plaintiff." Riley v. Larson, 91 Idaho 831, 834, 432 P.2d 775, 778 (1967) (citations omitted). And in the absence of any such evidence introduced by the Plaintiff, Defendants must prove, by a preponderance of the evidence, "[t]he elements of a cause of action based upon negligence[, which] can be summarized as (1) a duty, recognized by law, requiring [Krystal Ballard] to conform to a certain standard of conduct; (2) a breach of that duty; (3) a causal connection between [Krystal Ballard's] conduct and the resulting injuries; and (4) actual loss or damage." Brizendine v. Nampa Meridian Irrigation Dist., 97 Idaho 580, 583, 548 P.2d 80, 83 (1976) (citing Prosser, Law of Torts 30 (4th ed. 1971)).

Not one of these elements can be satisfied by exclusive reliance upon unreasonable inferences, which would "permit a jury to base its verdict [as to comparative negligence] on mere speculation and conjecture." Owen v. Burcham, 100 Idaho 441, 448, 599 P.2d 1012, 1019 (1979) (citation omitted). In fact, "[a]n expert's opinion which is unsubstantiated by facts in the record, but which is speculative or conclusory, has little or no probative value, and therefore may be excluded because its probative value is 'substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, confusion of the issues, or misleading the jury.'" Ryan v. Beisner, 123 Idaho 42, 47, 844 P.2d 24, 29 (Ct. App. 1992) (quoting Idaho R. Evid. 403).

Defendants' noncompliance theory rests upon irrelevant, highly prejudicial, factually unsupported, speculative, and causally disconnected information. Defendants hope to tell the jury that a patient is noncompliant with doctor's orders when she fails to take narcotic pain medication, which the doctor prescribed on an as needed basis. And apart from the fact that the "as needed" element of this prescription renders Defendants' position completely nonsensical, Defendants' experts openly admit that a patient cannot be faulted for taking Motrin in an effort to avoid narcotics.

Furthermore, Defendants offer no plausible reason to believe that Krystal Ballard's avoidance of a narcotic pain medication had any causal relationship to the infection that ultimately killed her. Dr. Kerr offers only speculation: "[I]f she was not getting adequate pain control . . . then she would not have followed the instructions on how to care for herself . . . ." Meanwhile, Defendants' infectious disease expert, Dr. Thomas Coffman, testified that the only significance that can be attributed to Krystal Ballard's election to avoid narcotic pain medication is that Krystal Ballard's pain must not have been significant enough to justify its usage.

Defendants also hope to demonstrate a purported pattern of noncompliance by the fact that Krystal Ballard arrived for surgery without someone to drive her home. Again, the record in this matter provides absolutely no indication of a causal relationship between Krystal Ballard's purported noncompliance and her death.

The same is true with regard to Krystal Ballard's failure to inform her husband, or the Air Force, of her liposuction and fat transfer procedures. In essence, Defendants intend to suggest that Krystal Ballard may have compromised her postoperative recovery by placing secrecy above recovery. This is true even though Defendants' own expert, Dr. Stiller, testified that there is no causal relationship between Krystal Ballard's failure to inform the Air Force and her death. In fact, none of Defendants' experts can testify within a reasonable degree of medical certainty that Krystal Ballard's purported noncompliance had any causal relationship with her death. To the contrary, Defendants' experts admit that no such causal relationship exists. Therefore, in the absence of any relevant, probative purpose speaking to Krystal Ballard's purported negligence, the true purpose of this evidence becomes clear: to encourage the jury to come to highly prejudicial conclusions about Krystal Ballard as a person.

Because there is no record evidence linking Krystal Ballard's septic death with a lack of postoperative care on her part, Defendants intend to showcase irrelevant information that relies upon, and demands, impermissible speculation and conjecture. Defendants hope to offer a suspicion that Krystal Ballard intended take a physical training exam, though there is no record evidence to suggest that she, in fact, took the exam, and though there is evidence directly contradicting that suspicion. They hope to interject irrelevant evidence pertaining to Krystal's reluctance to take a narcotic medication as needed, for pain. They aim to paint Krystal Ballard as noncompliant for failing to arrive for surgery with a designated driver. And Defendants intend to state that Krystal Ballard may have compromised her recovery by failing to communicate fully with her husband.

Because Defendants' noncompliance theory rests upon irrelevant, highly prejudicial, factually unsupported, speculative, and causally disconnected information, evidence and argument pertaining to Krystal Ballard's purported noncompliance should be precluded.

III. THE ABSENCE OF INFECTION IN OTHER SILK TOUCH PATIENTS TO PROVE COMPLIANCE WITH THE STANDARD OF CARE AS TO KRYSTAL BALLARD

On June 6, 2012, Plaintiff served his first set of discovery upon Defendants. (See Exhibit H, Pl.'s First Set of Interrogatories, Requests for Production, and Requests for Admissions.) Interrogatory No. 20 requests as follows:

> Identify each witness known to you to have information and relevant materials to the claims presented in this action or to any defense asserted thereto, and for each such person please give a brief summary of each such witness's expected trial testimony.

(Id. at 11.) Request for Production of Documents No. 1 requests "[a]ll documents identified or referred to in answering any of the foregoing interrogatories." (Id. at 14.)

During his deposition in this matter, Dr. Kerr was asked to explain the basis or bases for his opinion that bacteria had been introduced into Krystal Ballard's body after she left Silk Touch. (Exhibit B, B. Kerr Dep. 82:11-23, Jan. 30, 2013.) Dr. Kerr responded, "Because I've never had another infection of that nature." (Id. at 82:24-25.) Dr. Kerr clarified that a limited number of his post-lipolysis patients had experienced infections, and he admitted that he never formally tracked the number of post-surgical patients who experienced infections. (Id. at 83:1-13.)

Seven months later, at the deposition of defense expert, Dr. Thomas J. Coffman, Defendants, for the first time, provided Plaintiff's counsel with a document, which purportedly sets forth the first names of Silk Touch patients, their dates of treatment, and a brief description of the procedures performed for each such patient. (Exhibit G, Coffman Dep. 40:19 – 41:4, Aug. 20, 2013; Exhibit I, Untitled Spreadsheet.) Dr. Coffman reviewed no other information pertaining to these patients. (Coffman Dep. at 41:11-16.)

On August 27th, defense counsel sent a letter to defense expert, Dr. Gregory N. Laurence, which stated, "The staff of Dr. Kerr and his wife have gone through every patient chart for operative procedures of every type performed starting in December of 2007." (Exhibit J, Laurence Dep. 165:1-13, Oct. 2, 2013.) Dr. Laurence reviewed the spreadsheet, but never reviewed any charts associated with the patients or procedures listed on the spreadsheet. (Id. at 167:1-3.)

On September 16, 2013, less than two months prior to trial, over a month after written discovery had closed, and ten days after the discovery deposition deadline had passed, Defendants served a supplemental response to Plaintiff's Interrogatory No. 20. (See Exhibit K, Defs.' Supp. Ans. to Pl.'s Interrogatory No. 20; Am. Scheduling Order 1-2, Sept. 9, 2013.) By that response, Defendants disclosed that Susan Kerr's "expected testimony will relate to records of Silk Touch, records and data she compiled of Silk Touch for infections, patients, drawings of Krystal Ballard, photos of Krystal Ballard and experience in training and cosmetic procedures." (Defs.' Supp. Ans. to Pl.'s Interrogatory No. 20 at 3.)

By letter to defense counsel dated September 20, 2013, Plaintiff's counsel noted the vagueness of Defendants' supplemental answer to Interrogatory No. 20, requested immediate production of the records and data compiled by Ms. Kerr, and sought a date upon which Ms. Kerr could be re-deposed in light of the newly disclosed information. (Exhibit L, Letter from P. Gregory Haddad to Jeremiah A. Quane.) Defense counsel responded by letter on September 26, 2013, and stated that "[t]he records and data under discussion was prepared shortly before August 20, 2013 for the purpose of being a trial exhibit and it did not exist before and therefore it was not available for production . . . ." (Exhibit M, Letter from J. Quane to P. Gregory Haddad 1.) Defense counsel continued, "In fact, since it will be used only as a trial exhibit, the court Order governing further proceedings does not require its identification and disclosure until either 14 or 7 days before trial." (Id.) Additionally, defense counsel characterized Plaintiff's request to re-depose Susan Kerr as untimely. (Id.)

On September 27, 2013, Plaintiff noticed the reconvened deposition of Susan Kerr. (Exhibit N, Notice to Take Video Conference Deposition Duces Tecum of Susan Kerr.) The Notice requested that Ms. Kerr bring all records and data underlying her testimony, as disclosed by Defendants' supplemental response to Plaintiff's Interrogatory No. 20. (Id.) Defendants refused to produce Ms. Kerr to be re-deposed, and to date, Defendants have failed to further supplement their discovery responses to include any data or documentary support for the proposed trial exhibit or any additional detail regarding Ms. Kerr's anticipated testimony.

Evidence pertaining to unrelated patients, or Defendants' postsurgical infection rate, is irrelevant, unfairly prejudicial to Plaintiff, and lacks any indicia of reliability to serve as the basis for expert opinion. Moreover, Defendants should not be allowed to benefit by failing to seasonably supplement their discovery responses, by subsequently obstructing Plaintiff's access to clearly discoverable information, or by advancing a trial by ambush strategy.

As an initial matter, "[t]he purpose of our discovery rules is to facilitate fair and expedient pretrial fact gathering. It follows, therefore, that discovery rules are not intended to encourage or reward those whose conduct is inconsistent with that purpose." Edmunds v. Kraner, 142 Idaho 867, 873, 136 P.3d 338, 344 (2006). "Parties may obtain discovery regarding any matter, not privileged, which is relevant to the subject matter involved in the pending action . . . including the existence, description, nature, custody, condition and location of any books, documents, or other tangible things and the identity and location of persons having knowledge of any discoverable matter." Idaho R. Civ. P. 26(b)(1). "[A]n important inquiry in determining whether a response was given 'seasonably' is: was the opposing party given an opportunity for full cross examination?" Edmunds, 142 Idaho at 875, 136 P.3d at 346 (citing Hopkins v. Duo-Fast Corp., 123 Idaho 205, 213, 846 P.2d 207, 215 (1993) (Bakes, C.J. concurring)).

In terms of trial evidence, "'Relevant Evidence' means evidence having any tendency to make the existence of any fact that is of consequence to the determination of the action more probable or less probable than it would be without the evidence." Idaho R. Evid. 401. And

"[a]lthough relevant, evidence may be excluded if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, confusion of the issues, or misleading the jury, or by considerations of undue delay, waste of time, or needless presentation of cumulative evidence." Idaho R. Evid. 403.

Moreover, "[o]nce qualified as an expert, a witness may testify in the form of an opinion if the expert's specialized knowledge will assist the trier of fact to understand the evidence or determine a fact in issue." State v. Konechny, 134 Idaho 410, 417, 3 P.3d 535, 542 (Ct. App. 2000) (citing Idaho R. Evid. 702). "The information, theory or methodology upon which the expert's opinion is based need not be commonly agreed upon by experts in the field, but it must have sufficient indicia of reliability to meet I.R.E. 702 requirements." State v. Konechny, 134 Idaho 410, 417, 3 P.3d 535, 542 (Ct. App. 2000) (citing State v. Merwin, 131 Idaho 642, 646, 962 P.2d 1026, 1030 (Ct. App. 1998)).

In the instant case, other patients' alleged lack of infections is irrelevant in establishing whether Defendants satisfied the standard of practice as to Krystal Ballard, or whether any such deviation from the applicable standard of practice caused or contributed to Krystal Ballard's death. Additionally, all evidence and argument pertaining to a lack of infections in Defendants' patients should be precluded because Defendants, by their untimely, vague, and incomplete supplementation of discovery responses, as well as their refusal to produce Susan Kerr for a deposition duces tecum, ensured that meaningful cross-examination on the topic would be impossible.

To the degree any relevance can be attributed to the subject evidence, the probative value of that evidence is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice, confusion of the issues, or misleading the jury. The admission of evidence pertaining to the lack of infections in unrelated patients creates an implicit invitation for the jury to draw extraordinarily prejudicial inferences from that information. Specifically, the jury would be enticed to adopt the idea that, because Defendants postsurgical infection rate is either low or lower than average, there is a reduced likelihood that Defendants exposed Krystal Ballard to bacteria or a resulting infectious process.

What's more, both the methodology used to compile the data, and the data itself, is patently unreliable. Susan Kerr, who is not a physician or health care provider, and who is not qualified to make determinations as to the signs and symptomology of infections in patients, compiled a list of patients who, according to her review of Defendants' records, suffered no postoperative infections. And in light of Defendants' failure to recognize Krystal Ballard's infection before she died, there is more than sufficient reason to question the accuracy and reliability of data purportedly compiled to demonstrate Defendants' low, postsurgical infection rate. This unreliability, in combination with the information's irrelevance and its misleading, unfairly prejudicial impact, strongly warrants preclusion of the subject evidence.

Defendants obviously provided their expert, Dr. Coffman, with the spreadsheet marked Exhibit I prior to his deposition on August 20, 2013. Almost a month later, less than two months prior to trial, a month after written discovery had closed, and ten days after the discovery deposition deadline had passed, Defendants supplemented their discovery responses to include Susan Kerr's anticipated testimony relative to infections in unrelated patients. And when Plaintiff pressed Defendants to produce the discoverable and responsive information underlying Ms. Kerr's compilation, Defendants not only claimed that Plaintiff acted in an untimely fashion in attempting to obtain it, but they suggested that they had done Plaintiff a favor by producing a trial exhibit that Defendants were under no obligation to produce until late October in any event.

Now, Plaintiff is left wholly unable to properly and fairly challenge Defendants' alleged infection rate information by cross-examination at trial. Defendants quite apparently violated discovery rules, and should not be rewarded for engaging in obstructive tactics so clearly at odds with the purpose underlying the discovery process. For these reasons, evidence and argument pertaining to Defendants' postsurgical infections should be precluded.

IV. LIFE INSURANCE AND OTHER COLLATERAL SOURCES

Krystal Ballard applied for, and was covered by, Service Group Life Insurance. (Exhibit A, Ballard Dep. 103:6 – 104:14, 105:18-22; 107:5-11, Feb. 1, 2013.) Krystal Ballard was also covered by Tri-Care health insurance, which she received automatically through her service in the Air Force. (Id. at 106:9-15.) The jury should hear nothing of these insurance-related issues.

"The collateral source rule is a common law doctrine under which an injured party's damage award may not be reduced by payments, also intended to compensate the harm caused by the tortfeasor, received from third parties. Restatement (Second) of Torts § 920A cmt. b & d (1979). Several jurisdictions, including Idaho, have enacted statutes that abrogate the common law rule, requiring collateral source payments to be deducted from damage awards. I.C. § 6–1606; see also Restatement (Second) of Torts § 920A at cmt. d." Carrillo v. Boise Tire Co., Inc., 152 Idaho 741, 753, 274 P.3d 1256, 1268 (2012).

However, because Idaho Code § 6-1606 expressly renders death benefits paid under life insurance contracts completely irrelevant at the trial of this matter, evidence and argument pertaining to same should be precluded. And to the degree evidence of Krystal Ballard's health or life insurance can offer any probative value, that evidence would be relevant only after the finder of fact renders an award. Accordingly, the jury should be offered no evidence pertaining to Krystal Ballard's life or health insurance coverage.

V. DR. GARRISON'S UNTIMELY OPINION REGARDING FAT EMBOLSIM AND ALL UNDISCLOSED EXPERT OPINIONS

On June 3, 2013, Defendants served a 108-page supplemental answer to Plaintiff's Interrogatory No. 3, which sets forth, in significant detail, the anticipated opinion testimony of Defendants' experts. (See Exhibit O, Defs.' First Supp. Ans. to Pl.'s First Set of Interrogatories.) During his deposition on September 23, 2013, which occurred six weeks prior to trial, defense expert, Dr. Charles Garrison, testified that fat embolism contributed to Krystal Ballard's death. (Exhibit P, Garrison Dep. 47:19-20.) According to Dr. Garrison, he arrived at his opinion prior to September 19, 2013, but failed to inform defense counsel until the day prior to his scheduled deposition. (Id. at 34:17 – 36:4.)

Defense counsel takes the position that "when you decide to depose an expert, the areas you get into constitute an automatic extension and supplementation of a prior disclosure." (Id. at 36:7-10.) Mr. Quane continued by stating, "And that's the risk you take when you depose experts in Idaho." (Id. at 36:10-11.) And while Defendants reproduced Dr. Garrison for deposition on October 17, 2013, to answer questions pertaining to his new causation opinion, Plaintiff is left to manage the implications of that new opinion fewer than three weeks prior to trial.

As stated above in reference to Defendants' unwillingness to provide responsive and discoverable information pertaining to Defendants' postoperative infection rate, "[t]he purpose of our discovery rules is to facilitate fair and expedient pretrial fact gathering. It follows, therefore, that discovery rules are not intended to encourage or reward those whose conduct is inconsistent with that purpose." Edmunds v. Kraner, 142 Idaho 867, 873, 136 P.3d 338, 344 (2006).

"[Parties are] under a duty seasonably to supplement [their discovery responses] with respect to any question directly addressed to . . . the subject matter on which [an expert] is expected to testify, and the substance of the person's testimony." Idaho R. Civ. P. 26(e)(1). "This rule unambiguously imposes a continuing duty to supplement responses to discovery with respect to the substance and subject matter of an expert's testimony where the initial responses have been rejected, modified, expanded upon, or otherwise altered in some manner." Radmer v. Ford Motor Co., 120 Idaho 86, 89, 813 P.2d 897, 900 (1991) (citing Zolber v. Winters, 109 Idaho 824, 712 P.2d 525 (1986) and Wright and Miller, Federal Practice and Procedure, Supplementation of Responses, § 2048 (1970)). "[A]n important inquiry in determining whether a response was given 'seasonably' is: was the opposing party given an opportunity for full cross examination?" Edmunds, 142 Idaho at 875, 136 P.3d at 346 (*citing Hopkins v. In this matter, Plaintiff has, once again, been placed in a position whereby he is forced to react to the untimely disclosure of discoverable information in close proximity to trial. Whether Dr. Garrison informed defense counsel of his fat embolism opinion of causation in a timely fashion is irrelevant. The prejudicial effect on Plaintiff, with trial quickly approaching, is clear, and Plaintiff is unaware of any authority suggesting that Defendants are alleviated from adhering to their well-recognized discovery obligations upon the untimely disclosure of an expert opinion via the expert's testimony at deposition. Accordingly, Dr. Garrison's opinion pertaining to fat embolism, and any undisclosed expert witness testimony, should be precluded.

VI. DEFENSE EXPERTS WHO FAILED TO PROPERLY FAMILIARIZE THEMSELVES AS TO THE APPLICABLE STANDARD OF PRACTICE

Defense experts, Dr. Geoffrey Stiller and Dr. Gregory N. Laurence, failed to adequately familiarize themselves with the applicable standard of practice in this matter. Therefore, they lack competency to offer expert testimony as to the applicable standard of practice in this case.

Dr. Stiller practiced as a general surgeon in the Boise area up until 2005. (Exhibit E, Stiller Dep. 69:5-8, July 19, 2013.) At the direction of defense counsel, Dr. Stiller conferred with a cosmetic physician, Dr. Kelly O'Neil to familiarize himself with the standard of practice for cosmetic physicians existing in Boise in 2010, the time of Krystal Ballard's liposuction and fat transfer. (Id. at 68:21 – 69:13; 69:25 – 70:2.) Dr. Stiller conferred with Dr. O'Neil for twenty to forty minutes. (Id. at 71:20-25.)

During that time, the two doctors discussed Dr. Kerr's use of Hibiclens, alcohol, and an unknown chemical to clean instruments. (Id. at 75:11 – 76:15.) According to Dr. Stiller, Dr. O'Neil "didn't see any issues with that." (Id. at 80:25 – 81:5.) When asked whether he discussed anything else with Dr. O'Neil pertaining to the cleaning of instruments, Dr. Stiller answered in the negative. (Id. at 76:12-15.) With regard to Dr. Kerr's sterilization practices, the two doctors discussed Dr. Kerr's . . . steam autoclave, and the fact that [Dr. Kerr used] a chemical marker." (Id. at 77:14-18.) There appears to have been no application of these facts to a standard of care.

Dr. Stiller does not recall asking whether Dr. O'Neil used a mixture of alcohol and Hibiclens to clean medical equipment and supplies in 2010. (Id. 81:6-10.) Dr. Stiller did not ask Dr. O'Neil whether he used spore counts or whether other area cosmetic physicians conducted spore counts in 2010. (Id. at 81:11-17.) Dr. Stiller did not inquire whether other cosmetic physicians used alcohol to clean their hands in 2010. (Id. at 86:1-5.) He made no inquiry of Dr. O'Neil to determine whether the standard of practice required instruments to be soaked in a basin after cosmetic procedures in 2010. (Id. at 88:14-17.)

Dr. Stiller has no knowledge of Dr. O'Neil's background, including whether Dr. O'Neil had any kind of surgical residency. (Id. at 70:7-16.) Dr. Stiller failed to determine what types of machines Dr. O'Neil employed during cosmetic procedures. (Id. at 70:22-25.) Dr. Stiller never inquired whether Dr. O'Neil personally performed cleaning, disinfecting, or sterilization of reusable equipment and supplies at his practice, nor did he ask Dr. O'Neil to identify the people who performed those functions at his practice. (Id. at 71:1-6; 72:16-19.) Moreover, Dr. Stiller never determined whether Dr. O'Neil employed written policies or procedures to guide members of his practice in the cleaning, disinfecting, and sterilization of equipment. (Id. at 72:20-23.) At one point in Dr. Stiller's deposition, when asked whether his conversation with Dr. O'Neil was "just kind of a general conversation," Dr. Stiller responded, "Absolutely." (Id. at 74:1-4.)

At the direction of defense counsel, Dr. Laurence also conferred with Dr. O'Neil, and only Dr. O'Neil, to familiarize himself with the applicable standard of care. (Exhibit J, Laurence Dep. 55:6-14; 56:5-15, Oct. 2, 2013.) Dr. Laurence conferred with Dr. O'Neil on two occasions, the second of which lasted thirty to forty-five minutes and serves as the basis of Dr. Laurence's familiarity with the applicable standard of care in this case. (Id. at 57:22-24; 63:7-16.)

During his communications with Dr. O'Neil, Dr. Laurence never determined that Dr. O'Neil actually performed liposuctions or fat transfers in 2010. (Id. at 70:1-6; 71:14-22.) According to Dr. Laurence, "[Dr. O'Neil] was clearly knowledgeable about fat transfer, but I don't know how much he did it." (Id. at 71:1-3.) When asked to describe how Dr. O'Neil knew of other physicians' liposuction and fat transfer practices and procedures, Dr. Laurence testified, "[H]e did not tell me how he knew other physicians did one thing or another." (Id. at 72:4-8.) According to Dr. Laurence, "I assumed that, likely, he had enough connections with staff or through other people that gave him a sense that other physicians in Boise had a similar approach." (Id. at 98:14-17.) Additionally, Dr. Laurence never determined "whether [Dr. O'Neil] operated out of . . . an office or an accredited facility." (Id. at 104:2-5.)

"An expert testifying as to the standard of care in medical malpractice actions must show that he or she is familiar with the standard of care for the particular health care professional for the relevant community and time." Dulaney v. St. Alphonsus Reg'l Med. Ctr., 137 Idaho 160, 164, 45 P.3d 816, 820 (2002) (citing Perry v. Magic Valley Reg'l Med. Ctr., 134 Idaho 46, 995 P.2d 816 (2000); Rhodehouse v. Stutts, 125 Idaho 208, 868 P.2d 1224 (1994)). "The expert must also state how he or she became familiar with that standard of care." Id. "One method for an out-of-area expert to obtain knowledge of the local standard of care is by inquiring of a local specialist." Id. (citing Perry v. Magic Valley Reg'l Med. Ctr., 134 Idaho 46, 995 P.2d 816 (2000)).

The record in this case demonstrates convincingly that neither Dr. Stiller, nor Dr. Laurence adequately familiarized themselves with the applicable standard of care. In both instances, Dr. Stiller and Dr. Laurence called a physician referred to them by defense counsel, which, on its own, comports with Idaho law. However, their failure to elicit basic foundational information pertaining to Dr. O'Neil's qualifications, and their failure to elicit basic information as to the cleaning, disinfecting, and sterilization procedures that are at the center of this case renders each of them incompetent to offer expert testimony as to the applicable standard of care.

While it is clear that Idaho law demands explanation of how a particular expert became familiar with the applicable standard of care, this requirement would be of little meaning if an expert could simply waltz into court and claim to be a standard of care expert based upon a half-hour and half-hearted conversation yielding few probative, relevant considerations. Yet Defendants will surely assert that Dr. Laurence should be considered an expert anyway. And while Dr. Stiller could certainly state that he contacted a cosmetic physician who practiced in Boise in 2010, what value can possibly be attributed to such a contact when Dr. Stiller can offer little more than that Dr. O'Neil "didn't have a problem" with Dr. Kerr's use of Hibiclens, alcohol, and an unknown chemical to clean instruments?

Dr. Stiller does not recall asking whether Dr. O'Neil used a mixture of alcohol and Hibiclens to clean medical equipment and supplies in 2010; Dr. Stiller failed to determine whether Dr. O'Neil used spore counts or whether other area cosmetic physicians conducted spore counts in 2010; Dr. Stiller did not think to ask whether other cosmetic physicians used alcohol to clean their hands in 2010; he made no inquiry of Dr. O'Neil to determine whether the standard of practice required instruments to be soaked in a basin after cosmetic procedures in 2010; Dr. Stiller failed to determine what types of machines Dr. O'Neil employed during cosmetic procedures; he never asked Dr. O'Neil to identify which personnel performed cleaning, disinfecting, or sterilization of reusable equipment and supplies at his practice; and Dr. Stiller never discerned whether Dr. O'Neil employed written policies or procedures to guide members of his practice in the cleaning, disinfecting, and sterilization of equipment. It was, absolutely, just kind of a general conversation.

And apart from the fact that Dr. Stiller so hastily addressed the many aspects of cleaning, disinfecting, and sterilization, which are so obviously implicated in this matter, both his, and Dr. Laurence's complete failure to ensure that Dr. O'Neil was qualified to provide the information in the first instance is extraordinary. Dr. Stiller made no inquiry into Dr. O'Neil's background or the setting in which Dr. O'Neil performed whatever services he performed in 2010. Dr. Laurence has no idea whether Dr. O'Neil performed any liposuctions or fat transfers in 2010. Apparently, he never thought to inquire.

Dr. O'Neil will never set foot in the courtroom during the trial of this matter, yet Defendants' experts hope to justify their competency to testify as to the applicable standard of care simply because they made brief telephone calls to a cosmetic physician who may or may not himself be qualified to shed sufficient light on the issue. And even if Dr. O'Neil was, or is, so qualified, Drs. Laurence and Stiller cannot make a satisfactory showing under Delaney in demonstrating how they gained sufficient familiarity based upon their communications with Dr. O'Neil because they couldn't have gained sufficient familiarity. Accordingly, they are not competent to offer standard of care testimony during the trial of this matter.

VII. DR. KERR'S COMMUNICATION WITH KRYSTAL BALLARD'S AUNT

Dr. Kerr testified at deposition that, after Krystal Ballard's death, he communicated telephonically with Krystal Ballard's aunt, Angela Neil, and furthermore, that he composed a three-page "written narrative of that conversation." (Exhibit B, B. Kerr. Dep. 42:22 – 45:22; 105:14-22, Jan. 30, 2013; Exhibit Q, Handwritten Notes of Dr. Kerr.) Dr. Kerr explained that his written narrative is not included within Krystal Ballard's medical records "[b]ecause it didn't have anything to do with her medical care." (B. Kerr. Dep. 46:2-7.)

Dr. Kerr recounted the following with regard to his communication with Angela Neil:

> My recollection is that she had expressed that she had been -- she had actually talked with -- or family members had talked with Krystal about that time, that Krystal had told them that she was having -- that she had fallen down the stairs and hurt her back and had not talked about having had a medical procedure.

(Id. at 45:10-16.) Dr. Kerr continued, "We discussed some of the challenges that had presented themselves with -- with her post-operative compliance, and I think I ended with sharing my condolences . . . ." (Id. at 45:17-20.)

Evidence and argument pertaining to Dr. Kerr's communication with Angela Neil should be precluded as inadmissible hearsay. The Rules of Evidence provide that "[h]earsay" is a statement, other than one made by the declarant while testifying at the trial or hearing, offered in evidence to prove the truth of the matter asserted." Idaho R. Evid. 801(c). And unless a hearsay statement comports with an exception to the general rule of hearsay exclusion, evidence and argument pertaining to such a statement should be precluded. Idaho R. Evid. 802, 803, 804.

Any statements made by Angela Neil during her conversation with Dr. Kerr would constitute inadmissible hearsay to which no exception applies. The same is true of the hearsay contained within Dr. Kerr's written narrative memorializing his conversation with Ms. Neil. Accordingly, evidence and argument pertaining to same should be precluded.

VIII. DR. LUNDEBY'S TESTIMONY AS TO KRYSTAL BALLARD'S CAUSE OF DEATH

During his deposition in this case, Dr. Lundeby testified that "when I looked at this entire record, I was very -- it was difficult to figure out exactly why this patient died." (Exhibit F, Lundeby Dep. 83:13-15, July 26, 2013.) Plaintiff's counsel then asked, "At this point in time, you don't know whether or not you have enough information to form an opinion as to the cause of this patient's death; is that fair?" (Id. at 83:21-24.) Dr. Lundeby responded, "Yeah, I think -- I think that's fair."

"[E]xpert medical opinion testimony must be based upon a "reasonable degree of medical probability" in order to be admissible. Roberts v. Kit Mfg. Co., Inc., 124 Idaho 946, 948, 866 P.2d 969, 971 (1993). Bloching v. Albertson's, Inc., 129 Idaho 844, 846, 934 P.2d 17, 19 (1997) (citing Roberts v. Kit Mfg. Co., Inc., 124 Idaho 946, 948, 866 P.2d 969, 971 (1993)). Dr. John P. Lundeby cannot offer an opinion with any degree of medical certainty as to Krystal Ballard's cause of death. Therefore, he should offer no such opinion at trial.

IX. EVIDENCE, ARGUMENT, AND SPECIAL VERDICT PERTAINING TO THIRD PARTY LIABILITY

As her health declined subsequent to the liposuction and fat transfer procedures at issue, Elmore Ambulance Service transported Krystal Ballard to Elmore Medical Center; shortly thereafter, Life Flight transported Krystal Ballard to St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, where she died. Because Defendants failed to assert third party claims against these, or any other, parties, and because the record in this matter is wholly undeveloped as to third party liability, Defendants are not entitled to present the issue of third party liability to the jury, whether by argument, by special verdict, or otherwise.

"In Idaho, I.C. § 6-802 provides that the court, at the request of any party, may direct the jury to find separate special verdicts determining the amount of damages and the percentage of negligence or comparative responsibility attributable to each party." Van Brunt v. Stoddard, 136 Idaho 681, 687, 39 P.3d 621, 627 (2001). "The decision whether the special verdict shall inquire as to the alleged negligence of a non-party raises a question of law, namely whether evidence exists which warrants submission of the matter to the jury." Id. (citing Zintek et al. v. Perchik, 163 Wis.2d 439, 471 N.W.2d 522 (1991)). "It is the general rule that before nonparties are placed on jury verdict forms, there must be a showing that the requisite elements of a cause of action against them have been presented at trial. There must have been admitted into evidence proof sufficient to make a case in negligence where applicable ... before any non-party can be included on the form." Id. (quoting Vannoy v. Uniroyal Tire Co., 111 Idaho 536, 551, 726 P.2d 648, 663 (1985) (Bistline J., concurring)).

In the instant action, Defendants should be precluded from offering evidence and argument pertaining to the culpability of absent third parties for a number of reasons. First, Defendants never asserted third party claims. If Defendants felt strongly about the culpability of third parties, they should have, and could have, pursued third party claims against those parties.

Relatedly, because Defendants asserted no third party claims in this case, the record in this matter is completely undeveloped as it pertains to third party liability. Defendants have not identified any allegedly negligent nonparties, much less offered evidence of a causal relationship between any such liability and Krystal Ballard's death. Therefore, permitting Defendants to advance a theory of third party liability would not only force Plaintiff to defend a theory that the parties never adequately discovered, but additionally, the jury would be left to speculate as to the true nature and scope of any absent parties' purported culpability. For these reasons Defendants should be precluded from advancing a theory of third party liability, whether by argument or by special verdict.

X. TESTIMONY OF DR. KERR REGARDING A MEDICAL MALPRACTICE CASE INVOLVING PLAINTIFF'S EXPERT, DR. SORENSEN

Defendants disclosed the following with regard to Dr. Kerr's anticipated trial testimony:

> Depending on the proof submitted at trial and the testimony of Dr. Sorensen and/or the tenor or implication of his testimony and opinions, Dr. Kerr may > describe the lawsuit against Dr. Sorensen in Boise that resulted in the jury rendering a verdict of malpractice against him and assessing damages of a substantial amount against him.

(Exhibit O, Defs.' First Supp. Ans. to Pl.'s First Set of Interrogatories 18.) Because Dr. Kerr has no personal knowledge of the litigation involving Dr. Sorensen, and because the information is not of the type reasonably relied upon by experts in the particular field in forming opinions or inferences upon the subjects at issue in this case, Dr. Kerr's testimony as to Dr. Sorensen's medical malpractice case should be precluded.

Rule 602 of the Idaho Rules of Evidence provides that "[a] witness may not testify to a matter unless evidence is introduced sufficient to support a finding that the witness has personal knowledge of the matter. Evidence to prove personal knowledge may, but need not, consist of the testimony of the witness. This rule is subject to the provisions of Rule 703, relating to opinion testimony by expert witnesses." Rule 703 provides as follows:

> The facts or data in the particular case upon which an expert bases an opinion or inference may be those perceived by or made known to the expert at or before the hearing. If of a type reasonably relied upon by experts in the particular field in forming opinions or inferences upon the subject, the facts or data need not be admissible in evidence in order for the opinion or inference to be admitted. Facts or data that are otherwise inadmissible shall not be disclosed to the jury by the proponent of the opinion or inference unless the court determines that their probative value in assisting the jury to evaluate the expert's opinion substantially outweighs their prejudicial effect.

Additionally, "an expert witness may provide an opinion '[i]f scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge will assist the trier of fact to understand the evidence or to determine a fact in issue.'" Hansen v. Roberts, 154 Idaho 469, 299 P.3d 781, 786 (2013) (quoting Idaho R. Evid. 702). "Therefore, after the court qualifies a witness as an expert, it "must determine whether such expert opinion testimony will assist the trier of fact in understanding the evidence." Id. (citing State v. Pearce, 146 Idaho 241, 246, 192 P.3d 1065, 1070 (2008)). "Pursuant to I.R.E. 704, an expert's testimony is not inadmissible merely because it embraces an ultimate issue to be decided in the case; however, '[e]xpert testimony that concerns conclusions or opinions that the average juror is qualified to draw from the facts utilizing the juror's common sense and normal experience is inadmissible.'" Id. (quoting State v. Ellington, 151 Idaho 53, 66, 253 P.3d 727, 740 (2011)). "[E]vidence is generally inadmissible under I.R.E. 702 if it vouches for the credibility of another witness." Id. (citing State v. Perry, 139 Idaho 520, 525, 81 P.3d 1230, 1235 (2003)).

Dr. Kerr had no role in the medical malpractice action involving Dr. Sorensen. Therefore, he has no personal knowledge upon which he can rely in offering the subject testimony. And though Rule 703 allows expert witnesses to base opinions upon otherwise inadmissible facts and data learned during the course of litigation, those facts and that data must be of a type reasonably relied upon by experts in the particular field in forming opinions or inferences upon the subject. Of course, facts pertaining to a medical malpractice action defended by an adversary expert cannot, by any stretch of the imagination, be of a type reasonably relied upon by a Defendant expert testifying as to his compliance with the applicable standard of practice in this matter.

Defendants have at their disposal other means by which to elicit testimony pertaining to Dr. Sorensen's medical malpractice action. Dr. Kerr should not be allowed to attack the credibility of Dr. Sorensen for the sole purpose of invading the province of the jury to make its own determination as to Dr. Sorensen's credibility based upon properly admitted testimonial evidence. Because Dr. Kerr possesses no personal knowledge of the medical malpractice action at issue, because information pertaining to that medical malpractice action is wholly outside the scope of information reasonably relied upon by an expert in his field, because Dr. Kerr should not be allowed to attack the credibility of an adversarial expert witness, and because Dr. Kerr's testimony is substantially outweighed by its prejudicial effect, Dr. Kerr should be precluded from offering testimony pertaining to a medical malpractice action defended by Dr. Sorensen.

XI. SPEAKING OBJECTIONS, UNSWORN TESTIMONY OF COUNSEL, AND REFERENCES TO THE PARTIES' MOTION PRACTICE WHILE IN THE JURY'S PRESENCE

At the trial of this matter, all counsel should be precluded from offering speaking objections, unsworn testimony, and references to the parties' motion practice in the jury's presence. "In jury cases, proceedings shall be conducted, to the extent practicable, so as to prevent inadmissible evidence from being suggested to the jury by any means, such as making statements or offers of proof or asking questions in the hearing of the jury." Idaho R. Evid. 103(c); see also State v. Gerardo, 147 Idaho 22, 26-27, 205 P.3d 671, 675-676 (Ct. App. 2009) (finding error in trial court's failure to strike attorney's improper, unsworn "correction" of witness's testimony).

By this motion, Plaintiff seeks not only to preclude counsel from offering the substantive bases for objections and references to the parties' motion practice, but Plaintiff seeks to also preclude counsel from offering personal observations or experiences derived from other, unrelated cases in the jury's presence. Any such statements are likely to expose the jury to precisely the type of irrelevant and prejudicial information Rule 103(c) is designed to address, and which cannot be "unheard" whether or not a motion to strike is offered. Accordingly, speaking objections, references to the parties' motion practice, and unsworn attorney testimony should be precluded.

XII. AD HOMINEM ARGUMENTS AND REMARKS

Plaintiff's lead attorneys in this case practice with Bailey & Glasser, LLP, a firm based in Charleston, West Virginia. P. Gregory Haddad practices from Bailey & Glasser's office in Morgantown, West Virginia; J.B. Perrine practices from Bailey & Glasser's office in Birmingham, Alabama.

Defendants should be precluded from arguing or suggesting that Plaintiff's attorneys, or that out-of-state-attorneys, lack credibility, or make any direct or indirect disparaging remarks concerning Plaintiff's counsel. Any such suggestion, or derivative thereof, is improper at any stage of this trial, including during opening statements and closing arguments. For this reason, Plaintiff respectfully requests that the Court preclude at the trial of this matter any and all ad hominem arguments and remarks.

XIII. SETTLEMENT NEGOTIATIONS

Evidence and argument pertaining to settlement negotiations should be strictly precluded pursuant to Rule 408 of the Idaho Rules of Evidence. Rule 408 provides as follows:

> Evidence of (1) furnishing, offering, or promising to furnish, or (2) accepting, offering, or promising to accept, a valuable consideration in compromising or attempting to compromise a claim which was disputed as to either validity or amount, is not admissible to prove liability for, invalidity of, or amount of the claim or any other claim. Evidence of conduct or statements made in compromise negotiations is likewise not admissible. This rule does not require the exclusion of any evidence otherwise discoverable merely because it is presented in the course of compromise negotiations. This rule does not require exclusion if the evidence is offered for another purpose, such as proving bias or prejudice of a witness, negativing a contention of undue delay, or proving an effort to obstruct a criminal investigation or prosecution. Compromise negotiations encompass mediation.

Idaho R. Evid. 408.

Plaintiff foresees no permissible purpose for the introduction of evidence pertaining to settlement negotiations in this case. To the degree Defendants perceive a permissible purpose, Plaintiff requests that Defendants be required to proffer the related evidence out of the jury's presence, and that the Court conduct a Rule 403 balancing analysis in determining the admissibility of the proffered evidence prior to its presentation. (See Davidson v. Beco Corp., 114 Idaho 107, 111, 753 P.2d 1253, 1257 (1987)).

XIV. EXPERT TESTIMONY THAT INVADES THE PROVINCE OF THE JURY

Defense experts in this case should be precluded from offering conclusions as to the ultimate issues to be decided in this matter when the jury is duly qualified to draw its own conclusion based upon common sense, life experience, evidence, and the law. Defense experts should also be precluded from offering testimony as to the credibility of other witnesses. Any such testimony would invade the province of the jury.

"[A]n expert witness may provide an opinion '[i]f scientific, technical, or other specialized knowledge will assist the trier of fact to understand the evidence or to determine a fact in issue.'" Hansen v. Roberts, 154 Idaho 469, 299 P.3d 781, 786 (2013) (quoting Idaho R. Evid. 702). "Therefore, after the court qualifies a witness as an expert, it "must determine whether such expert opinion testimony will assist the trier of fact in understanding the evidence." Id. (citing State v. Pearce, 146 Idaho 241, 246, 192 P.3d 1065, 1070 (2008)). "Pursuant to I.R.E. 704, an expert's testimony is not inadmissible merely because it embraces an ultimate issue to be decided in the case; however, '[e]xpert testimony that concerns conclusions or opinions that the average juror is qualified to draw from the facts utilizing the juror's common sense and normal experience is inadmissible.'" Id. (quoting State v. Ellington, 151 Idaho 53, 66, 253 P.3d 727, 740 (2011)). "Additionally, evidence is generally inadmissible under I.R.E. 702 if it vouches for the credibility of another witness." Id. (citing State v. Perry, 139 Idaho 520, 525, 81 P.3d 1230, 1235 (2003)).

In this case, Defendants' experts should not be allowed to present testimony as to the ultimate issues to be decided in this wrongful death case, nor should they be allowed to make credibility determinations pertaining to other witnesses. Jurors are typically well qualified to make these determinations without being spoon fed by either party's expert witnesses (or fact witnesses, for that matter), and such testimony is likely to unfairly prejudice Plaintiff. Accordingly, Plaintiff respectfully requests that his Motion in Limine to Preclude Expert Testimony That Invades the Province of the Jury be granted.

XV. CUMULATIVE EXPERT WITNESS TESTIMONY

The parties argued Plaintiff's Motion to Exclude Cumulative Expert Witnesses in July of this year. At that time, Defendants argued for Plaintiff's motion to be denied because of the varied backgrounds of their expert witnesses.

Since the time of that hearing, it has become clear that all of Defendants' expert witnesses relied exclusively upon the same cosmetic physician, Dr. Kelly O'Neil, to become familiar with the applicable standard of care. Therefore, no matter how varied Defendants' experts' backgrounds are purported to be, any standard of care opinions offered by Defendants' experts must be considered needlessly cumulative because those opinions are based upon the standard of care perspective of one physician. Moreover, Defendants' expert witness disclosure demonstrates that the cumulative nature of defense experts' testimony does not end at the standard of care.

On June 3, 2013, Defendants served a supplemental answer to Plaintiff's Interrogatory No. 3, which calls for expert witness information. (See Exhibit O, Defs.' First Supp. Ans. to Pl.'s First Set of Interrogatories.) By their 108-page disclosure (not including attachments), Defendants explicitly identify four experts who they intend to offer as standard of care witnesses: the Defendant, Dr. Kerr; Gregory Laurence, M.D., John Lundeby, M.D., FACS, FAACS; and Geoffrey Stiller, M.D. (Id.) Additionally, Dr. Thomas Coffman will offer a standard of care opinion to the degree he opines "that Dr. Kerr was not required to test for spores or mold . . . ." (Id. at 52.)

According to Defendants, Drs. Kerr, Laurence, Garrison, Coffman, and Lundeby will testify as to "facts of the case," causation, and damages. (Id. at 2, 22, 43, 63.) Defendants intend to offer Dr. Stiller's testimony to address "facts of the case" and causation. All of these expert witnesses are intended to offer testimony on "the care and treatment of Krystal Ballard." (Id. at 2, 22, 43, 63, 85.)

Defendant's supplemental answer to Plaintiff's third interrogatory is replete with examples of cumulative evidence. With regard to the applicable standard of care, for example, Defendants intend for "Dr. Kerr [to] explain that there was no requirement, per the standard of health care practice or otherwise, for his facility to be certified, inspected, or approved by any organization or governmental agency . . . ." (Id. at 4-5.) Defendants intend for Dr. Lundeby to provide the exact same testimony. (Id. at 25.)

Additionally, Drs. Kerr, Lundeby, Coffman, and Stiller will all testify that Defendants employed proper techniques to maintain sterility at Silk Touch. (Id. at 15, 24, 53, 64, 87.) Relatedly, Defendants intend to offer Dr. Garrison to testify that there is no evidence to establish "that there was any breach of sterility in this case." (Id. at 47; see also id. at 48 ("[S]terilization procedures were adequate to maintain a proper sterile field.").) These are but some of the examples of cumulative expert testimony contained with the subject discovery response.

In an attempt to resolve this dispute without Court involvement, counsel exchanged correspondence on this issue. (Exhibit R, Letter from J.B. Perrine to Terrence S. Jones, June 20, 2013; Exhibit S, Letter from Terrence S. Jones to J.B. Perrine, June 21, 2013.) It is Defendants' position that they will not run afoul of Rule 403 because their disclosed experts are "from different specialties of medicine." (Id. at 1.) Plaintiff maintains disagreement with Defendants' position, and the dispute remains unresolved.

Plaintiff filed a Motion to Exclude Cumulative Expert Witnesses on June 26, 2013. The parties subsequently argued their positions before the Court. (See Exhibit T, Hr'g Tr., July 10, 2013.) At that time, Defendants argued that, though their expert opinions may overlap, any such overlap is excused due to their experts' varied backgrounds. (Id. at 11-13.) What Defendants failed to mention, however, is that all of their experts consulted with one cosmetic physician for the purpose of becoming familiar with the applicable standard of practice in this case, thus rendering their backgrounds far less relevant.

It is axiomatic that "evidence may be excluded if its probative value is substantially outweighed by the danger of unfair prejudice . . . or by considerations of undue delay, waste of time, or needless presentation of cumulative evidence." Idaho R. Evid. 403; see also Burgess v. Salmon River Canal Co., Ltd., 127 Idaho 565, 574, 903 P.2d 730, 739 (1995) (cumulative expert testimony properly excluded pursuant to Idaho R. Evid. 403). In this matter, the overtly cumulative nature of Defendants' anticipated expert witness testimony is unfairly prejudicial to Plaintiff. Defendants' 108-page answer to Plaintiff's third interrogatory contains numerous examples of cumulative testimony as to multiple elements of Plaintiff's cause of action. Because Defendants' disclosed expert witness testimony is so blatantly in violation of Rule 403, Defendants should be precluded from introducing such cumulative evidence at trial.

Defendants are simply wrong to suggest that they will not run afoul of Rule 403 on account of their expert witnesses' varied medical specialties. The fact remains that those experts have been retained to offer opinions as to a single cause of action. To some degree, all experts have different backgrounds, yet that does not justify duplication of testimony on the same subject matter. This is especially true where, as in this case, all of Defendants' out-of-state experts were directed to the same cosmetic physician to become acquainted with the applicable standard of care.

Plaintiff takes no issue with the fact that Defendant may elect to offer expert testimony to supplement that of Dr. Kerr on any particular element of Plaintiff's cause of action. However, the breadth, scope, and depth of cumulative testimony demonstrated within Defendants' discovery response is wholly inappropriate, as it is clearly and unfairly prejudicial.

12:10:14 Q. Well, more than once.
12:10:15 A. Okay. About five times out of the year, maybe, 12:10:18 give or take a few.
12:10:20 Q. Okay.
12:10:21 A. It wasn't always the same destination, as well.
12:10:27 Q. Do you know if your -- if Krystal ever, during 12:10:45 the time you were married, ever filled out any written 12:10:52 applications for any kind of insurance?
12:10:57 A. It was -- sir, we have an SGLI on Base, so you 12:11:07 fill that out. You're not required to, but you're 12:11:10 encouraged to fill out an SGLI, an insurance package
12:11:15 through the Air Force.
12:11:15 THE REPORTER: Are you saying, "STLI"?
12:11:22 THE WITNESS: "SG" -- "SGLI" --
12:11:23 THE REPORTER: Thank you.
12:11:23 THE WITNESS: -- through the Air Force.
12:11:23 Q. (BY MR. QUANE) You're aware that she had 12:11:25 done that?
12:11:26 A. Yes, sir.
12:11:26 Q. What kind of insurance is that?
12:11:30 A. Life insurance.
12:11:31 Q. Okay. It's issued through the Air Force if 12:11:38 you acquire the life insurance?
12:11:41 MR. HADDAD: Hold on one second. Just -- to 12:11:43 the extent that life insurance is a collateral source, 12:11:47 I'll have a continuing objection, so go ahead and answer.

12:11:50 MR. QUANE: I'm just talking about an application.
12:11:52 MR. HADDAD: Go ahead.
12:11:53 THE WITNESS: I'm sorry. Can you say the 12:11:55 question again?
12:11:55 Q. (BY MR. QUANE) Well, what I'm getting at, 12:11:57 are you aware of Krystal ever applying -- filling out 12:12:02 papers to acquire any kind of insurance?
12:12:05 I'm interested in what she may have written 12:12:08 down on an application for insurance that might cover 12:12:12 something to do with her health. That's the -- what 12:12:17 I'm asking -- why I'm asking the question.
12:12:21 A. The insurance -- just the SGLI life insurance
12:12:26 package through the Air Force.
12:12:27 Q. Well, but did she -- 12:12:28 A. That's all I know of.
12:12:29 Q. Are you aware that she filled out any 12:12:31 applications to get the insurance through the Air Force?
12:12:38 A. Sir, I believe -- if I'm understanding you 12:12:41 correctly, that is a type of application to receive the 12:12:48 insurance.
12:12:48 Q. Yeah -- to get insured?
12:12:53 MR. HADDAD: Right.
12:12:53 THE WITNESS: Yes, sir.
12:12:54 Q. (BY MR. QUANE) You're aware of her having 12:12:56 done that?

12:12:56 A. Yes, sir.
12:12:57 Q. Okay. Do you know if -- and the type of 12:13:04 insurance she is applying for is what you've described?
12:13:07 A. Yes, sir.
12:13:08 Q. Okay. And that's life insurance of some sort?
12:13:10 A. Yes, sir.
12:13:10 Q. Okay. Do you have any memory specifically of 12:13:16 any questions asked on the applications about her health?
12:13:25 A. No, sir.
12:13:28 Q. Do you know if she ever got insured health 12:13:32 insurance-wise --
12:13:34 A. Sir --
12:13:36 Q. -- through the Air Force?
12:13:37 A. I don't understand.
12:13:41 MR. HADDAD: Are you switching from life insurance 12:13:43 to health insurance because you -- 12:13:45 Q. (BY MR. QUANE) Any kind of insurance that she 12:13:47 got through the Air Force.
12:13:49 A. Just the life insurance package.
12:13:50 Q. Okay. She got insured, though?
12:13:53 A. Yes, sir.
12:13:54 Q. Okay.
12:13:55 MR. HADDAD: It's automatic, Jerry, just to 12:13:57 let you know.

12:13:58 Q. (BY MR. QUANE) Did she get any health
12:14:00 insurance through the Air Force?
12:14:01 A. Isn't life insurance and health insurance the 12:14:06 same thing?
12:14:07 Q. Well, there's kind of a difference. Some -- 12:14:09 "life insurance" means insurance that's on you, but when 12:14:15 you die, benefits are paid.
12:14:17 A. Okay.
12:14:18 Q. And then there's health insurance that pays 12:14:20 for medical bills.
12:14:22 A. No, sir. Through the Air Force you have Tri-Care, 12:14:25 and Tri-Care pays for all medical bills.
12:14:28 Q. Okay. So that's -- she gets that automatically 12:14:30 for being in the Air Force?
12:14:31 A. Yes, sir.
12:14:32 Q. All right. But the Air Force -- but you can 12:14:36 apply for life insurance and get it -- or you don't need 12:14:39 to apply for life insurance, and you don't get it?
12:14:43 A. Correct, sir.
12:14:44 Q. Okay. All right. So the only type of 12:14:48 application for any kind of insurance that your wife 12:14:52 applied for would be life insurance?
12:14:54 A. Yes, sir, that I'm aware of.
12:14:57 Q. Okay. And I believe you named the name of the 12:15:01 insurance company --

12:15:04 A. No, sir.
12:15:04 Q. -- did you?
12:15:05 A. No. It's just called an "SGLI."
12:15:09 Q. Okay. S --
12:15:11 A. "SGLI."
12:15:12 Q. Okay. Do you know what that's -- is that 12:15:16 an acronym -- do you know what an "acronym" is?
12:15:19 A. An "acronym"?
12:15:21 Q. Letters that mean something.
12:15:23 A. Yes, sir. I believe it means "Service Group 12:15:25 Life Insurance" -- I believe.
12:15:27 Q. Okay. Did -- does your -- during the time you 12:15:37 were married, did you and Krystal own any automobiles?
12:15:40 A. "Own" as in paid off --
12:15:46 Q. No --
12:15:47 A. -- or "owned" as in -- we had automobiles with 12:15:50 loans on them, yes.
12:15:51 Q. Were you buying automobiles?
12:15:54 A. Yes, sir.
12:15:55 Q. How many?
12:15:56 A. Okay. During the time that we were married?
12:16:01 Q. Yes.
12:16:02 A. During the time we were married, we purchased 12:16:06 two automobiles.
12:16:06 Q. Okay. Was one of them dedicated to you to 02:31:25 Q. Okay. And you don't know if they're required

02:31:32 to do one when an Airman passes away --
02:31:34 A. No, sir.
02:31:34 Q. -- that's on active duty?
02:31:36 A. No, sir.
02:31:36 Q. Okay. Have you ever talked to anyone at the 02:31:41 Air Force Base about that subject -- without going into 02:31:46 any details?
02:31:47 A. About -- 02:31:48 Q. About there being an investigation by the 02:31:50 Air Force into why your wife passed away?
02:31:54 A. No, sir.
02:31:54 Q. Okay. Now, since your wife's death, you have 02:32:14 not remarried; correct?
02:32:16 A. I have not remarried.
02:32:17 Q. Okay. Have you dated a female since your 02:32:24 wife's death?
02:32:24 A. What do you classify as "date"?
02:32:27 Q. The common ordinary meaning of "dating."
02:32:35 A. Like, had a girlfriend?
02:32:37 Q. Yes, sir.
02:32:37 A. No, sir.
02:32:39 Q. Have you had a girlfriend?
02:32:40 A. No, sir.
02:32:40 Q. Have you -- have you gone out with a girl since 09:47 be understandable, but it may have -- 09:47 And it's not a big deal. We'll get a 09:47 copy of it. But it may have been responsive to 09:47 other requests that we made. But we'll get a copy

09:47 of it, and it's not a big -- big issue.
09:47 Q. (BY MR. HADDAD) Did you ever reach out 09:47 to any of the physicians at Saint Alphonsus who may 09:47 have been colleagues of yours while you were a 09:47 staff member there that you recognize may have 09:47 treated Krystal Ballard to find out their 09:47 perspective on what had happened?
09:47 A. No.
09:47 Q. How about at Elmore Medical Center? Did 09:48 you ever reach out to anybody at Elmore Medical 09:48 Center to try to find out from their perspective
09:48 what had happened?
09:48 A. No.
09:48 Q. Did you ever contact Mr. Ballard after 09:48 hearing of Krystal's death and try to find out what 09:48 had happened?
09:48 A. No.
09:48 Q. Other than making a request -- reviewing 09:48 records from Elmore and Saint Alphonsus and 09:48 requesting the autopsy report, did you do anything
09:48 else to reach out to any person or entity to find

09:48 out what had happened to have caused Krystal
09:48 Ballard to die five days after you had performed
09:48 liposuction surgery on her?
09:48 A. I had a conversation with Krystal
09:48 Ballard's aunt.
09:48 Your question was did I reach out. At 09:48 the time of the -- I didn't know who it was I was 09:48 calling, but I had a conversation with Krystal
09:49 Ballard's aunt.
09:49 Q. And I said "reach out," and that's the 09:49 way I phrased things. And that means did you make 09:49 a call or write to anybody. And just to make sure 09:49 that you didn't misunderstand my colloquialisms and 09:49 misinterpret it --
09:49 A. Yeah.
09:49 Q. -- did you contact anybody by phone,
09:49 letter, or e-mail other than Krystal Ballard's 09:49 aunt?
09:49 A. My recollection --
09:49 Not other than her aunt.
09:49 Q. Okay. Now, going back to that, was that 09:49 a phone call?
09:49 A. She called my cell phone, and then I
09:49 returned the call.
09:49 Q. As best you can recall, when was that in 09:49 proximity to learning of Krystal Ballard's death?

09:49 A. I have -- I wrote a note about that 09:49 conversation. I -- we can provide that, I assume, 09:49 to you.
09:49 Q. Okay.
09:49 A. My recollection, that it was within 09:49 about a week time period.
09:50 Q. Did you call on your -- using your cell
09:50 phone, to your recollection?
09:50 A. To my recollection, I don't remember if 09:50 it was a cell phone. I remember I made the call at 09:50 my office, so it would either be on my cell phone 09:50 or the office phone.
09:50 Q. Okay. Again, we'll get a copy of 09:50 whatever recordation you made concerning that 09:50 conversation with Krystal's aunt.
09:50 Give me your general recollection of 09:50 what that conversation involved.
09:50 A. Right. She explained that Charles had 09:50 asked her to go through messages that had -- that 09:50 were on her cell phone, and I had made several 09:50 calls to her cell phone after the last conversation
09:50 that I had with her and Charles to follow up. That 09:51 would have been on Sunday and, I believe, even 09:51 Monday morning.

09:51 And I had left a message requesting her 09:51 to return a call. And so my understanding is that 09:51 she -- as she retrieved those calls, she saw that 09:51 there were several calls from me. I don't know
09:51 that she knew who I was. I didn't -- 09:51 But she called and -- to inform me that 09:51 Krystal had passed away. And I expressed my 09:51 condolences to her and had a -- I believe it was 09:51 about a five- to ten-minute conversation with her.
09:51 My recollection is that she had 09:51 expressed that she had been -- she had actually 09:51 talked with -- or family members had talked with 09:52 Krystal about that time, that Krystal had told them 09:52 that she was having -- that she had fallen down the 09:52 stairs and had hurt her back and had not talked 09:52 about having had a medical procedure.
09:52 We discussed some of the challenges that 09:52 had presented themselves with -- with her 09:52 post-operative compliance, and I think I ended with 09:52 sharing my condolences and --
09:52 But I do have a -- a written narrative
09:52 of that conversation.
09:53 Q. Did anybody ask you or advise you to 09:53 document these calls that were coming in after 09:53 Krystal's death?

09:53 A. No one advised me to.
09:53 Q. Is there any reason, if it involved the 09:53 care and treatment of your patient in close 09:53 proximity to her death, why that would not be 09:53 included in her medical chart?
09:53 A. Because it didn't have anything to do
09:53 with her medical care.
09:53 Q. But there were issues concerning her 09:53 medical care that came up in that conversation, 09:53 weren't there?
09:53 A. I guess -- I mean, that's a judgment
09:53 call. I mean, it didn't have any direct bearing on 09:53 her care. It may have been reflections about it, 09:53 but not part of her care.
09:53 Q. Okay. So as I understand it, Krystal's 09:53 aunt had called your phone because she had seen, to 09:53 your understanding, log entries on Krystal's phone 09:53 where calls had been exchanged?
09:54 A. Correct.
09:54 Q. And she called you --
09:54 A. Voice messages; I'm assuming that she 09:54 heard the voice message requesting that she call,
09:54 recognized that there were several calls from one
09:54 individual, and then returned that call.
09:54 Q. Okay. She called you, and then you

10:43 rephrase it again or restate it again.
10:43 Q. Okay.
10:43 A. I got a little sidetracked with the 10:43 question.
10:43 Q. Fair enough. That happens when 10:43 objections are made. Sometimes people lose track, 10:43 and there's nothing wrong with asking me to 10:43 rephrase or restate the question.
10:43 In reviewing -- 10:43 Strike that.
10:43 Is it your opinion that the bacterial
10:44 rods found in the tissue of Krystal Ballard more 10:44 likely than not were introduced into her body after 10:44 she left your facility as opposed to being 10:44 introduced into her body during the procedure 10:44 itself?
10:44 A. Yes, it's my opinion.
10:44 Q. Okay. And why do you hold that opinion?
10:44 Other than saying, "It's my education, training, 10:44 and experience," what specific fact in the medical 10:44 records or your education, training, and experience
10:44 tells you that that bacteria got into her body
10:44 after she left Silk Touch?
10:44 A. Because I've never had another infection
10:44 of that nature.

10:44 Q. Have you had patients that have had post-operative -- post-procedure infections?

10:44 A. At any time?

10:44 Q. Well, anytime you've been doing lipolysis.

10:45 A. Yes.

10:45 Q. Okay. On how many -- what percentage if you've -- 10:45 Well, first of all, do you track at Silk Touch the number of infections that occur either -- in your patients in the post-operative period?

10:45 A. Not formally.

10:45 Q. Okay. Do you have a general idea of what percentage of patients undergoing lipolysis at Silk Touch experience an infection that is diagnosed post-procedure?

10:45 A. Not an exact number, but a general idea, which would be less than 1 percent.

10:45 Q. All right. How many of those patients died?

10:45 A. None.

10:45 Q. In the other patients other than Krystal Ballard, how was the post-operative infection diagnosed?

10:49 Q. Okay.
10:49 A. And those are -- 10:49 But it's limited to those surgical 10:49 sites.
10:49 Q. Right. I mean, it's -- is there any 10:49 doubt in your mind whether it occurred --
10:49 While you may dispute that it occurred
10:49 intraprocedurally, there's no doubt in your mind,
10:49 is there, Doctor, that bacteria -- gram-negative 10:49 bacteria was in Krystal Ballard at some point?
10:49 A. Correct.
10:49 Q. All right. That being the case, do you 10:49 have an opinion from the time she steps in to have 10:49 the procedure done on July 21 up until the time of 10:49 her death, when during that course that bacteria
10:49 got in her body?
10:49 A. I have an opinion.
10:49 Q. What is your opinion?
10:49 A. One of the aspects of Krystal's
10:49 post-operative care was her pattern of not doing
10:50 the things that we had asked her to do.
10:50 It became apparent that she was 10:50 non-compliant with a number of the things that we 10:50 had both written and orally advised her to do 10:50 because, in fact, she was trying to hide the 10:50 procedure both from her husband, Charles, and, in 10:50 our opinion, from the military, and it's my opinion 10:50 that this compromised her ability to properly take 10:50 care of herself.

10:50 And while I didn't have around-the-clock
10:50 observation of her, my experience with patients is 10:50 that when they are trying to hide the procedure,
10:51 they don't -- they can't change their bandages
10:51 appropriately, they will oftentimes overexert or do 10:51 activities that they shouldn't otherwise because 10:51 they're trying to not draw attention to the fact 10:51 that they've had anything done.
10:51 They may not take their medications as 10:51 prescribed because -- 10:51 In particular, in Krystal's case, on 10:51 several occasions, she wanted to know what drugs
10:51 would show up in a drug screen and would indicate 10:51 that she was taking certain medications or imply, 10:51 but when pressed would admit that she was not.
10:51 And so my opinion is is that she may 10:52 have done activities, leave the wound sites open to 10:52 drainage, and that certainly can be a pathway to 10:52 introduce bacteria.
10:52 And my opinion is that at some point, 10:52 bacteria from the outside entered and one of 11:43 Q. Well, that's your memorialization of it.

11:43 What I'm talking about is -- 11:43 A. Written.
11:43 Q. Is what I've shown you that we'll mark 11:43 as No. 5 the only time you wrote something and sent 11:43 the written document to either Charles or Krystal's 11:43 family?
11:43 A. Yes, that is the only time.
11:43 Q. All right. If I could have that back so 11:43 we can mark it and make sure it gets attached to 11:43 the deposition.
11:43 A. Uh-huh.
11:43 (Deposition Exhibit No. 5 was marked.)
11:43 Q. (BY MR. HADDAD) The next document that 11:43 Mr. Quane handed me at the break, we'll mark as 11:43 No. 6, which is a three-page document that 11:43 memorializes or appears to memorialize the 11:44 conversation you had with Angela Neil, the aunt of 11:44 Krystal Ballard.
11:44 Is that correct? Let me hand that to 11:44 you so you can identify it.
11:44 A. Yes.
11:44 Q. Okay. Is that all in your handwriting, 11:44 everything that's contained on those three pages?
11:44 A. I don't believe the front handwriting is 11:56 that.

11:56 Q. Okay. Well, let me ask you this: First 11:56 of all, is there any medication that you prescribed 11:57 for Krystal Ballard that you, in fact, know she did 11:57 not take as prescribed?
11:57 A. In my record, she admitted to have not 11:57 taken the Norco that was prescribed.
11:57 Q. And that's a narcotic pain medication?
11:57 A. Correct.
11:57 Q. What narcotic does it have in it?
11:57 A. Hydrocodone.
11:57 Q. Okay. Do you know that when they were 11:57 looking at -- or doing a toxicology screen -- I 11:57 can't remember if it was Elmore or Saint 11:57 Alphonsus -- they actually found hydrocodone in her 11:57 system?
11:57 A. I -- I've seen that toxicology report.
11:57 Q. Would that suggest to you that, in fact,
11:57 in order for the toxicology report to be positive
11:57 for Hydrocodone, it would mean that Krystal
11:57 actually took the Norco that you prescribed?
11:58 A. Not in the time frame that I prescribed 11:58 it. I know that when I had the conversation with 11:58 Charles, I asked him to give her a Norco, which he 11:58 said he did.

11:58 Q. Okay.
11:58 A. Or would.
11:58 Q. Let me ask you this: Norco is a pain
11:58 medication, correct?
11:58 A. Yes.
11:58 Q. It doesn't stop or fight an infection, 11:58 does it?
11:58 A. No.
11:58 Q. Okay. And it's usually written -- 11:58 And I don't have the actual 11:58 prescription, but when you write for a narcotic
11:58 pain medication, typically you write it to be taken 11:58 by the patient on an as-needed basis?
11:58 A. Often, yes.
11:58 Q. Okay. I mean, is there -- 11:58 Do you have a note that actually tells 11:58 us whether or not, for instance, you told -- or 11:58 wrote a prescription, "Take one tablet every four 11:58 hours as needed for pain," or words similar to that 11:58 to describe a -- a frequency that you were 11:58 prescribing that pain medication for?
11:58 A. You know, it would typically be every 11:59 four to six hours as needed.
11:59 Q. Okay. And the "as-needed" part means 11:59 the patient can elect to take a narcotic pain

11:59 medication or not to, correct?
11:59 A. Yes.
11:59 Q. And there's nothing inappropriate
11:59 whatsoever about a patient deciding to take Motrin
11:59 versus a narcotic, is there?
11:59 A. Well, repeat the question.
11:59 Q. Sure. First of all, did you tell -- 11:59 Did you ever write Krystal a 11:59 prescription for Motrin?
11:59 A. I did not write it.
11:59 Q. Were you aware or suggest that Motrin 11:59 would be an appropriate pain -- or 11:59 anti-inflammatory for her to take?
11:59 A. Yes.
11:59 Q. Okay. Motrin can both help relieve pain
11:59 and it can help reduce inflammation, correct?
11:59 A. Correct.
11:59 Q. All right. And there's nothing
11:59 inappropriate at all about a patient deciding to 11:59 take Motrin for pain versus taking a narcotic for 12:00 pain. That's a patient preference issue, isn't it?
12:00 A. Not necessarily.
12:00 Q. Okay. Well, do you think in any way, 12:00 shape, or form not taking Norco, a narcotic, or not 12:00 taking it as you prescribed it led to bacteria

12:00 getting in Krystal's body?
12:00 A. No.
12:00 Well, I'll digress. I'll strike that,
12:00 using your phrase.
12:00 Q. You don't get to strike it, but you can 12:00 add to it.
12:00 A. Okay. If someone --
12:00 Someone's behavior may be altered
12:00 because they are in a lot of pain and not 12:00 controlling their pain symptoms. Pain can -- can 12:00 alter a person's behavior.
12:00 Q. Do you have any basis in fact as you sit 12:00 here today to a reasonable degree of medical 12:01 probability that Krystal Ballard either not taking 12:01 a narcotic for pain or not taking it as prescribed 12:01 actually caused or contributed to bacteria getting 12:01 in her body?
12:01 A. I believe it may have.
12:01 Q. You actually are going to testify in 12:01 court if this goes to trial and say, "She didn't 12:01 take narcotic pain medication, she took Motrin, and 12:01 that may have influenced bacteria getting in her 12:01 body."
12:01 Is that going to be your testimony?
12:01 MR. QUANE: I object to the form, and I'm 12:02 A. 200.

12:02 Q. Let me go back.
12:02 Is it going to be -- is it your 12:02 testimony to a reasonable degree of medical 12:02 probability that Krystal Ballard taking 12:02 prescription Motrin instead of a narcotic pain
12:02 medication actually caused or contributed to her 12:02 having bacteria in her body?
12:02 A. Yes.
12:02 Q. And based on what set of specific facts 12:02 known to you support your opinion that taking 12:03 Motrin instead of a narcotic caused or contributed 12:03 to Krystal Ballard getting bacteria in her body?
12:03 Tell me every fact that supports that opinion.
12:03 A. I don't know if I can tell you every 12:03 fact.
12:03 Q. Tell me any facts that support that
12:03 opinion.
12:03 A. My opinion is that because she did not 12:03 want to --
12:03 She expressed to us that she was 12:03 concerned that narcotics would -- could show up in 12:03 a drug test, a -- a random drug screen by the 12:03 military. It was apparent from what she was 12:03 stating that she had not told her commanding

12:03 officer or anyone in the military and was very 12:03 concerned that they not be able to discover that.
12:03 She asked on several occasions about 12:04 both narcotics and the antibiotics that were 12:04 prescribed.
12:04 She was complaining of pain, and if she 12:04 was not getting adequate pain control, which, in my 12:04 opinion, Norco is a better -- is a stronger pain 12:04 medication, then she could have not followed the 12:04 instructions on how to care for herself, changing 12:04 her bandages, appropriate rest, other 12:04 post-operative care issues because she was dealing 12:04 with pain rather than dealing with her operative 12:04 care.
12:04 Q. Okay. I asked you --
12:04 I don't mean any disrespect. Sometimes 12:04 I ask for what facts support it, and people that 12:04 haven't been in deposition answer a question that 12:05 they believe is responsive to the question.
12:05 Do you know the difference between a 12:05 fact and an opinion?
12:05 A. Will you explain it to me?
12:05 Q. Okay. When you -- your opinion is that 12:05 Krystal Ballard, by not taking a narcotic but 12:05 instead taking Motrin, that that caused or 12:08 Q. Okay. First of all, I kind of jumped the gun.

12:08 Where is the note that talks about her overexerting herself?

12:08 A. Let me take a minute to see --

12:08 Q. Sure.

12:08 A. -- if I can find it.

12:08 Q. You can look at any other documents you need to. You tended to focus on that, but to the extent it's somewhere else, that's fine.

12:09 A. On the right side column, 7/24, it says, "Talked with by phone, complains of buttocks pain, says she has -- she was better this morning, a.m., but may have been too active."

12:09 Q. Okay. Do you equate the word "active" meaning --

12:09 A. And then down lower --

12:09 Q. I'm sorry. Go ahead.

12:09 A. Then down lower, it says, "Ice yesterday but not today."

12:09 Q. Okay. All right.

12:10 Is that -- the fact that it says --

12:10 Is "TW" "talk with"? Is that what it --

12:10 A. "Talk with," yeah.

12:10 Q. Okay. And let me read as I understand 12:11 her abdomen.

12:11 Q. Fair. It doesn't really suggest one way
12:11 or the other, does it?
12:11 A. No.
12:11 Q. Okay. "Patient says she was better this 12:11 a.m. but may have been to," again, it's t-o, 12:11 "active this morning."
12:11 A. Okay.
12:11 Q. What activity was she doing?
12:11 A. I don't know.
12:11 Q. Okay. You said she overexerted.
12:11 Now, obviously, there's a certain level
12:11 of activity that you permit and then certain level 12:11 of activity that you think in the immediate 12:11 post-operative period, a patient should refrain 12:11 from.
12:11 Is that fair?
12:11 A. Yes.
12:11 Q. Okay.
12:11 A. And in our --
12:11 Q. Okay.
12:11 A. In our pre-operative instructions, it 12:12 specifically states to avoid overexertion for two 12:12 weeks.
12:12 Q. Okay.

12:12 A. Now, to shed some light on this -- 12:12 Q. Let me ask -- let me ask you something 12:12 first, and then I'll let you shed your light. I 12:12 don't want to cut you off.
12:12 A. Okay.
12:12 Q. Do you know specifically what activities 12:12 she was performing on 7/24 in order for you to 12:12 reach an opinion she overexerted herself and 12:12 exceeded your post-operative instructions?
12:12 A. No, but I can tell you what our fear 12:12 was.
12:12 Q. First I want to know fact; then you can 12:12 give me your opinion.
12:12 A. Okay.
12:12 Q. No facts support an opinion that she 12:12 overexerted and exceeded your instructions.
12:12 Is that fair?
12:12 A. Other than her statement that she said
12:12 she had overexerted.
12:12 Q. Well, she said she was too active. I 12:12 don't know what that means. Do you know what that 12:12 means?
12:12 A. That she was too active.
12:12 Q. Okay. That could mean she got out of 12:12 bed. To a patient, that may be too active given

12:15 A. Correct.
12:15 Q. Okay. And I interpret the 7/23 note 12:15 that appears on STMS 12 as actually her coming into 12:15 your office and you're doing an examination and 12:15 assessment.
12:15 Is that a fair reading?
12:15 A. That's a fair reading.
12:15 Q. Is there anything in that July 23, 2010,
12:16 note where you had a chance to talk with Krystal 12:16 face-to-face, examine her, where there's any 12:16 notation that she did this PT examination the day
12:16 before or the day of your exam?
12:16 A. There's not a notation.
12:16 Q. All right. In fact, while you might 12:16 have had a fear she might have done a -- was 12:16 scheduled for a PT exam, you do not have a basis in 12:16 fact that she ever undertook that PT exam.
12:16 Is that true?
12:16 A. I don't have a basis in fact that she 12:16 did.
12:16 Q. Okay.
12:16 A. I have a suspicion.
12:16 Q. Now, let's look at that --
12:16 Well, we'll come back to that 7/23. I 12:16 want to kind of -- I don't want to digress every 12:19 care to explore, is the issue of taking Motrin or 12:19 not taking the Norco as often as you might have 12:19 liked, okay?

12:19 A. Okay.
12:19 Q. What other non-compliance issues do you 12:19 think are pertinent to Krystal's taking care of 12:19 herself?
12:19 A. Okay. The --
12:19 In our pre-operative visit with her,
12:19 both in the oral discussion and in the written 12:19 instructions, it specifies that she needed to have 12:19 someone to drive her home from the procedure. And 12:19 when she arrived, having received those 12:19 instructions and telling us that she would, she, in 12:19 fact, did not have someone there.
12:19 Another point of discussion was that she 12:20 needed to have someone to take care of her, and she 12:20 acknowledged that she would, and then we had to -- 12:20 we discussed --
12:20 At some point she revealed that she had 12:20 not told her husband. We strongly advised that she 12:20 should tell her husband because to do otherwise 12:20 would compromise her care. She agreed to do that.
12:20 When we saw her back on the 23rd, we -- 12:20 she revealed to us that she had not told him. We

12:25 sedative to do the procedure, and Krystal was told 12:25 that she could not take the sedation. And if she 12:25 chose to take the sedation during the procedure, 12:25 then she didn't have that option to drive herself
12:25 home.
12:25 Q. Okay. Going back to my question, it's 12:25 because you might get a medication that sedates you
12:25 during a procedure. That's the reason why you 12:25 wanted somebody there to drive her, correct?
12:25 A. That's part of the reason.
12:25 Q. Okay. What is the other reason or the 12:25 other part?
12:25 A. If they had, you know, other conditions 12:26 secondary to the procedure that would preclude them
12:26 from driving home.
12:26 Q. Okay. And you've kind of excluded those 12:26 concerns by, one, not giving her a sedative, and,
12:26 two, observing her for a sufficient period of time 12:26 after the procedure where you felt comfortable she 12:26 could drive herself, correct?
12:26 A. That's correct.
12:26 Q. All right. I think the other issue 12:26 of -- that you raised about compliance was whether 12:26 or not Krystal should tell her husband that she had 12:26 had this procedure, correct?

July 28, 2010

I am writing this today regarding my involvement and care of Krystal Ballard.
I met her July 13th for a Smart Lipo consultation. Dr. Kerr was involved with the consultation as well.
She had had Lipo suction at another facility on her back two years ago and was unhappy about her abdominal fat. She wanted to get it done as soon as possible, while her husband was gone but did not have someone to drive her.

Dr. Kerr discussed her options of not having oral sedation if she was going to drive herself. He also suggested she consider getting a hotel room for one nite and drive home the following day if need be. Dr. Kerr would not let her leave the Spa if he did not feel she was ok on her own.

July 21st, Krystal had her Smart Lipo procedure. I visited with her several times, she was up beat and jokative.

July 22nd I called Krystal in the morning to see how she was doing. Krystal was alone and was caring for herself. She said she was not sick but in pain. I asked if she was taking her medications and encouraged her to have something to eat so she didn't get sick. Krystal called later that day to ask for a RX for Extra Strength Motrin for her pain. She said she was having a test at work the next day and could not take prescription pain pills. Dr. Kerr called in the RX to Walmart in Mt. Home.

July 23rd. Krystal called in the morning to reschedule her follow up appointment in the late afternoon for earlier. She took the day off work and needed to see Dr. Kerr. I told her to come in as soon as she could and Dr. Kerr would work her into his schedule.
Krystal came in Friday afternoon, Dr. Kerr had met with her and so had Susie Kerr. A RX was called into Walgreen's and Krystal was resting in one of our rooms until the RX was ready. I went in to visit with her, she said she was not sick but in pain. She asked for some juice which I brought her along with a Zofran for nausea. I went to Walgreen's to pick up RX so she could rest.

July 26th. I called Krystal in the morning and left her a message to see how she was doing. At that time, I did not know she had gone to the ER over the weekend. Later, I was told she had been flown to St. Al's in Boise. Dr. Kerr asked me to call to check up on her and at that time was told she had passed away earlier that day.

I can't express the sorrow and complete shock I felt. I know we did everything we could to help Krystal.

DEPOSITION OF GEOFFREY STILLER, M.D.
TAKEN ON BEHALF OF THE PLAINTIFF
AT MOSCOW, IDAHO
JULY 19, 2013, AT 9:09 A.M.

Reported by Nancy K. Towler, CSR, Notary Public

Q. In terms of the machine that you all have used since March of 2012, you don't know who the manufacturer is?

A. I don't remember.

Q. Okay. Do you know what the manufacturer recommends in terms of how to clean and disinfect and sterilize that equipment?

A. The equipment, itself, is just an engine to pull tissue. It doesn't have any contaminants to it.

Q. Okay.

A. So everything going to it is disposable.

Q. What about the hand piece?

A. The hand piece is my liposuction cannulas.

Q. Okay. Okay. The hand piece, as you understand it, that Dr. Kerr used was because he used ultrasound?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Have you been provided the manual from the manufacturer of the machine Dr. -- the vaser machine Dr. Kerr used on Krystal Ballard?

A. I have not.

Q. Okay. Now, at some point in time, Doctor, during the -- when you were asked to -- to review this case, I know there was some correspondence from Mr. Jones' office about contacting Dr. O'Neil so that you could talk to him, Dr. O'Neil, about the standard of practice as it exists in Boise, correct?

A. At the time of this incident, correct.

Q. Okay. Because you had not practiced in Boise or the sounding area, correct?

A. I had practiced in Boise and the surrounding area up until 2005.

Q. As a general surgeon?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. But they wanted you, as I understand it, to talk to Dr. O'Neil about the standard of practice during the time that Krystal Ballard had her procedure for cosmetic procedures?

A. Correct.

Q. All right. Do you know when you spoke to Dr. O'Neil?

A. End of May, beginning of June.

Q. I mean, do you have any -- first of all, do you have any notes that you've made in your review of any materials?

A. I do not.

Q. Do you have anything that you've kept in any type of electronic format concerning notes about your case review?

A. I have not.

Q. What type of -- what type of practice does

Dr. O'Neil have?

A. A cosmetic physician, I believe.

THE REPORTER: I'm sorry?

THE WITNESS: A cosmetic physician, I believe.

BY MR. HADDAD:

Q. What type of background does he have?

A. I don't know offhand.

Q. Okay. Do you know whether he had any kind of surgical residency?

A. I do not know offhand.

Q. Okay. I mean, when you say you don't know offhand, did you ever -- before you spoke to him, did you ever try to find out what type of background Dr. O'Neil had in terms of his practice?

A. No.

Q. When you were talking to him, did you ask him how he was trained, both in -- through medical school, residency and in cosmetic procedures?

A. No. I asked him about the standard of practice in Boise at that point in time.

Q. Okay. We'll get to that. Did you ask Dr. O'Neil what type of machine he used at his office? For instance, do you know whether he used the vaser?

A. I did not ask him, and I do not know.

Q. Do you know if Dr. O'Neil's practice is such that he has -- strike that. Do you know whether Dr. O'Neil personally performs the cleaning, disinfecting and sterilizing of equipment and supplies that are reusable at his office?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know what type of cleaners Dr. O'Neil uses?

A. I do not know.

Q. Do you know what type of disinfectants Dr. O'Neil uses?

A. No.

Q. Do you know if Dr. O'Neil uses an autoclave?

A. No.

Q. Do you know whether Dr. O'Neil takes spore counts?

A. I do not.

Q. Did you ever ask him any of those questions?

A. I did not.

Q. I mean, how long was your conversation with Dr. O'Neil that you utilized to gain an understanding as to the standard of practice for a cosmetic physician at the time Krystal Ballard had her procedure? How long was your call?

A. About 20 to 40 minutes.

Q. (Indicating).
A. Twenty to 40 minutes.
Q. Twenty to 40 minutes. All right. I want you to recount for me everything you discussed with Dr. O'Neil.
A. That will be a very -- a 20-minute to 40-minute conversation to discuss that. Do you want me to go through every aspect of it?
Q. Well, let me break it down. Then I'll ask you kind of a catchall question. And if it takes time, it takes time.
A. Sounds good.
Q. Do you know whether Dr. O'Neil does cosmetic procedures in his own office?
A. Yes.
Q. All right. Do you know whether Dr. O'Neil has specifically dedicated staff who do the cleaning, disinfecting and sterilizing?
A. I don't know.
Q. Do you know whether Dr. O'Neil has written policies and procedures in his office dealing with cleaning, disinfecting and sterilizing equipment?
A. I do not. I did not ask.
Q. All right. What were the general topics, and then we might get into specifics, that you discussed

Q. Okay. How many -- I mean, what was it like practicing in Boise, was that just kind of a general conversation, or what --

A. Absolutely.

Q. Then what was the point of -- I mean --

A. How many physicians there were --

Q. -- it may not have any relevance, but I just want to know, does asking him, gee, what was it like practicing? How many cosmetic physicians in Boise? How did that lead you to have an understanding as to the standard of practice in Boise?

A. As far as the standard of practice in Boise, which physicians, what kind of physicians perform -- were performing and where they were performing their procedures.

Q. Okay. What type of physicians in Boise were performing cosmetic procedures?

A. As -- Dr. Kerr was doing it, as well as Dr. O'Neil was doing it. And I think he said there was an -- not an ophthalmologist, but an ER doc. Again, these were all non-plastics people and who was doing it. And there was five in total. There might have been an OB that was doing it as well, as far as I remember.

Q. Okay. To your recollection, there were only five physicians in Boise doing cosmetic procedures?

A. No. There were five cosmetic physicians doing procedures.

Q. Okay. To your knowledge, all five were nonsurgical trained?

A. I don't know if they were surgical trained.

Q. Now, when you say you discussed the sterilization and the adequacy of the sterilization as described, are you talking about as Dr. Kerr described in his deposition?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Tell me specifically what it was you and Dr. O'Neil talked about in terms of the adequacy of the sterilization as described in Dr. Kerr's deposition.

A. Sure. We talked about his cleaning of the instruments. We talked about the sterilization of his instruments.

Q. Okay. Is that it? I mean, can you be any more specific? When you say you talked about the cleaning, what did you all talk about in terms of cleaning the instruments?

A. We discussed what Dr. Kerr had said he did.

Q. Okay. What did Dr. Kerr say he did?

A. Well, he mentioned, at some point in time, that he did both the Hibiclens and the alcohol, as well as he also talked about using a chemical, which he didn't know the name of.

Q. Okay. Now, how is -- okay. I'm sorry, I interrupted you --

A. No worries.

Q. -- and I shouldn't do that.

A. No worries.

Q. You said alcohol, Hibiclens --

A. Uh-huh.

Q. -- and some unknown chemical Dr. Kerr couldn't remember the name of?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Anything else dealing with the cleaning of instruments that you all talked about, other than the types of solutions Dr. Kerr described he used?

A. Not that I can tell you right now, no.

Q. Okay. Do you know in your practice whether you use alcohol to clean instruments?

A. Do we use alcohol to clean instruments? I will use alcohol to clean instruments on the field if I need to, yes.

Q. When you say "on the field," what does that mean?

A. My surgical field.

Q. Okay. But as far as once they go back with Ms. Blake, do you know what she uses?

A. She uses a -- a -- a hospital-grade cleaner, as well as the -- the disinfectant.

Q. Okay. I mean, saying a hospital-grade cleaner, what's --

A. There's -- well --

Q. -- what's the active ingredient?

A. An acetylene, something, something something. I don't know.

Q. All right. Okay. Let me ask you this. You talked about alcohol, Hibiclens; and, obviously, you couldn't have much discussion about the appropriateness of some unknown cleaner, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. All right.

A. Well, we also talked about his autoclave, the steam autoclave, and the fact that he did use a chemical marker.

Q. All right. That's more the sterilization side.

A. Correct.

Q. I look at it differently, but --

A. Well, the sterilization side is important.

Q. Okay. It is. We were going to get to that, but I was breaking them down. But we can deal with them all together --

A. No worries.

Q. -- if it's easier for you. Do you know whether whether Hibiclens is an appropriate solution to use?

A. I have not researched it.

Q. What concentration -- I mean, what is the active ingredient --

THE WITNESS: Just a moment.

MR. HADDAD: Sure.

THE WITNESS: Sorry.

MR. HADDAD: We're still good?

THE WITNESS: Yeah.

MR. HADDAD: All right.

BY MR. HADDAD:

Q. What is the active ingredient of Hibiclens?

A. I don't know.

Q. Do you know what -- now, did Dr. O'Neil tell you he uses alcohol?

A. As far as him using alcohol?

Q. To clean medical equipment or supplies.

A. To clean medical equipment, again, it's not the mixture -- it's not alcohol. It's the mixture of alcohol and Hibiclens. And alcohol and Hibiclens is what I use to cleanse patients as far as a cleaner and disinfectant. That being said, again, it's not a disinfectant. It's to sterilize the -- it's used to clean the tissue. So...

Q. Did you ask Dr. O'Neil whether or not he used a alcohol-Hibiclens solution, mixture, to clean medical equipment and supplies?

A. I asked him whether that was an adequate cleaning at that point in time in Boise with Dr. Kerr. And he agreed that he didn't see any issues with that.

Q. Did he say he did it? He used -- that Dr. O'Neil specifically said, I used alcohol and Hibiclens in a mixture to clean medical equipment and supplies? Did you ask him that?

A. I did -- I don't remember.

Q. Did you ask Dr. O'Neil whether or not he took spore counts?

A. I did not ask him.

Q. Did Dr. O'Neil tell you that other physicians in Boise that do cosmetic procedures did or did not do spore counts? Or did that not come up?

A. It did not come up.

Q. Again --

THE WITNESS: No. Just my wife.

MR. HADDAD: Sometimes that can be more important than any other call you get.

BY MR. HADDAD:

Q. The various places that you practice -- or have practiced -- I'm going to back up so I can kind of get them here. And we'll go in most recent. In March, 2012

Q. Okay. Did you ask Dr. O'Neil whether or not using alcohol to clean your hands before a procedure was or was not something that other Boise nonsurgically trained physicians did?

A. I did not.

Q. Do you do regular maintenance, or have somebody do regular maintenance, on your autoclave?

A. I do.

Q. Okay. How often do they come and check the autoclave to make sure it was working appropriately?

A. I think it's once a year they come by.

Q. The other facilities that you worked in, or were involved with, do you have an understanding that they, likewise, had routine maintenance and upkeep of their autoclaves?

A. I don't know.

MR. JONES: Object to form. Vague.

BY MR. HADDAD:

Q. I mean, do you know if at any other place, when you were at Palouse back in '05 to '08, do you know whether the -- somebody came and checked the autoclave to make sure it was functioning properly?

A. They were the hospital's, so I did not check.

Q. All right. Were you trained at Southeast -- or Southcenter Cosmetic Center and Hair Restoration, did it out? Have you --

A. They put a sticker on it. That's all I know.

Q. They come and say, I've inspected it?

A. Exactly.

Q. All right. When instruments are taken from the procedure room that you use at Linea, and then you go in and you put them in a basin to soak; is that correct? Do you do that process?

A. I don't do that process.

Q. Okay. Do you know how it's done?

A. I know they're put in a basin to soak.

Q. Do you know what kind of solution is used?

A. Again, it's a cleaning solution.

Q. Okay. When you were talking to Dr. O'Neil, did you ask him whether or not instruments taken from the procedure room are put in -- in a basin to soak?

A. I did not ask him that, no.

Q. Okay. Did you ask him -- we'll leave it at that. In looking at the medical records, is it -- do you have the general opinion that Krystal Ballard died as a result of sepsis?

A. Krystal Ballard died as a result of shock. I don't know if it was sepsis.

Q. Okay. If you were to give a differential diagnosis as to what caused the shock in Krystal knew.

Q. Okay. Well, if he knew before he actually performed the procedure that she did not have somebody to drive her home, would that be appropriate or inappropriate in Boise to proceed with -- with the liposuction in any way?

A. Depends on the clinical situation.

Q. Well, there's no clinical situation. You're there to have a cosmetic, elective procedure.

A. It is a clinical situation. So yes, it does depend on the clinical situation.

Q. So he could have gone -- he could have said, Krystal, I know that you didn't bring somebody here to drive you home, and I'm going to do it anyway, correct?

A. Correct.

Q. Or he could have said, you don't have somebody to bring you home, take you home, so I'm not going to do the procedure?

A. That -- it's his choice.

Q. Okay. So it's -- it's his choice to either proceed or not proceed?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Now, what's the clinical situation that might make him go on -- go forward with the procedure even if he knows she doesn't have somebody to drive her appropriateness of him performing liposuction on this patient knowing, if he did know beforehand, that she didn't have anybody to drive her home?

MR. JONES: Object to form. Vague.

THE WITNESS: It's a clinical decision. And it's his choice on whether he's going to do it or not.

BY MR. HADDAD:

Q. Well, you make clinical decisions every day.

A. I do.

Q. There are sometimes -- people can make good clinical decisions, and people can make poor clinical decisions, correct?

A. Certainly.

Q. Okay. I'm trying to get into the fact of what clinical situations make him doing this procedure on Krystal Ballard an appropriate clinical decision when he knew she didn't have somebody to drive her home?

A. Is your question whether it was appropriate for him to do this or not? And I agree with his appropriateness to do this procedure on her.

Q. Okay. Then I'm asking, why are you critical of her for not bringing somebody when Dr. Kerr could have said, I'm just not going to do it?

A. You're right, he could have just said that.

Q. Okay.

A. You're right, he could have.
Q. Now --
A. However, what makes me critical of her? Because she didn't listen to him in the first place.
Q. Oh, I see. So he could have stopped it, but the fact that she didn't bring somebody with him (sic), he's off the hook by using his clinical decision?
A. Oh, it's just like --
MR. JONES: Object to form. Argumentative.
THE WITNESS: Thank you. It's like me prescribing an antibiotic to a patient and them not taking it.
BY MR. HADDAD:
Q. Okay.
A. Same difference.
Q. Well, let me ask you this. Is -- do you -- so there's -- even though she didn't bring somebody there to his office on the day of the liposuction when he (sic) should have, when she was instructed to, you thought it was still okay for him to do the procedure, knowing she was going to drive herself home, correct?
A. I find no fault in him doing the procedure and letting her drive herself home.
Q. Okay. Now, that's one issue of noncompliance, I think, Dr. Kerr mentioned. First of all, do you know

Q. Okay. Hydrocodone versus non.
A. Hydrocodone, correct.
Q. Is there patients of yours that opt for using over-the-counter pain and anti-inflammatories in lieu of narcotics?
A. There are. But when they're calling -- coming in complaining of pain, I recommend narcotics.
Q. Okay.
A. And I prescribe the narcotics.
Q. And the day he actually -- she came in complaining of pain on the 23rd, two days postop, he prescribed her Norco, and she took the Norco, right?
MR. JONES: Object to form. Foundation and time.
THE WITNESS: We don't know.
BY MR. HADDAD:
Q. Okay. Well, let me ask you this. You don't know one way or the other. I mean, you know she got a prescription for Norco?
A. Correct.
Q. Okay. That's the day she came in two days postop?
A. She got it actually the day of the operation as well.
Q. True. Well, did she take it?

A. She said she didn't.
Q. Okay. Is there anything wrong if she decides to manage it with non-narcotics?
A. There isn't anything wrong with that, you're correct.
Q. Okay.
A. However, when it's prescribed and she's told to take it and she doesn't, again, and comes -- if she's complaining of pain, it comes down to non-compliance.
Q. Okay. Did that cause -- did Norco cause -- can not taking a narcotic cause a patient to have -- to get an infection?
A. Again, we don't know if she has an infection.
Q. I'm asking you generally, as a medical doctor, if somebody is prescribed narcotics following a liposuction and they don't take the narcotics because they choose to treat it with Motrin, is that going to cause an infection?
A. No, not necessarily.
Q. Well, you said "not necessarily." I want to know the circumstances by which taking or not taking a narcotic --
A. It's a --
Q. -- can --
A. -- theoretical question. I'm not going to answer

Q. Okay. I understand. I'm just wondering -- well, noncompliant means you've not followed the directions of a physician.

A. Correct.

Q. All right. I don't know what it is, other than just not following military protocol and not telling them exactly why you might be having a procedure done.

A. It shows a pattern of noncompliance, does it not?

Q. I want to know -- no, I disagree, and that's why we're here. I want to know what the effect of not telling the military -- if she didn't tell the military or her commanding officer about the procedure, how did that cause or contribute to her death?

A. It shows -- it points a direction of noncompliance.

Q. How did it --

A. It does not show any cause of death.

Q. Okay. That's all I want to know. Why is that -- why is that so hard?

A. Well (inaudible) the question.

MR. JONES: Let's -- let's -- Counsel, let's not be argumentative.

BY MR. HADDAD:

Q. My question's not very hard. I want to know what the causal effect of not telling the military has on her that cause, meaning "Sepsis with probable toxic shock syndrome"?

Deposition upon oral examination of John P. Lundeby, MD, taken at the request of the Plaintiff, before Danelle Bungen, CSR, and Notary Public, at the law offices of Ramsden & Lyons, 700 Northwest Boulevard, Coeur d'Alene, Idaho, commencing at 8:30 a.m. on July 26, 2013, pursuant to the Idaho Rules of Civil Procedure.

A. I reviewed this case and looked at it and -- well, I -- I guess that's a very broad question and I'm trying to figure out the best way to answer it for you.

I think the clinical picture that she presented would be consistent with sepsis. The toxic shock syndrome, from my medical recollection and training, is probably not used accurately here in that my understanding of toxic shock syndrome is not a gram negative sepsis, which seems to be the question in the medical record. But when I looked at this entire record, I was very -- it was difficult to figure out exactly why this patient died.

Q. Okay.

A. Like I say, the clinical picture would be most consistent with sepsis. I can see why the coroner's office and the medical examiner put that.

Q. You just haven't -- Let me see if I can rephrase what you said, and if I mess it up, you let me know. At this point in time, you don't know whether or not you have enough information to form an opinion as to the cause of this patient's death; is that fair?

MR. JONES: Object to form.

not Ms. Ballard was taking hydrocodone to alleviate pain prior to the time she presented to Elmore Medical Center?

A. Can I look at the record?

Q. Sure. And the reason I'm saying is there's a list of medications that the patient's on that reflect that one of them is hydrocodone.

A. That was my recollection, but I wanted to look at that.

MR. JONES: So you're asking him if there's evidence in the medical record that suggests or supports the conclusion that the patient had been taking hydrocodone at the time she arrived at Elmore Medical Center.

MR. HADDAD: On or before the time she arrived, yes.

THE WITNESS: Yeah, hydrocodone is on her current medications.

Q. (BY MR. HADDAD) Is that the -- I mean Dr. Kerr prescribed a drug called Norco, N-O-R-C-O. That is a hydrocodone, right?

A. Yes.

Q. All right. What was the schedule that was ordered, or at least reflected in the records from Elmore as far as the schedule that the patient was to take it?

A. The Elmore record says, "Hydrocodone PO 4 hours prn," and it's "10/325," so 10 milligrams/325 milligrams.
Q. And in layperson speak, that means you're to take a pill by mouth every 4 hours as you may need it for pain.
A. Yes.
Q. So a large measure of it is whether a patient takes a narcotic is based upon how much pain the patient's in and whether they can tolerate that level of pain without taking a narcotic; correct?
A. Yes.
Q. She was taking Motrin for pain; do you have an understanding of that?
A. It's listed on there as well, I think.
Q. Did Dr. Kerr reference the fact she wanted Motrin, as opposed to a narcotic, when she saw him in follow-up to the liposuction procedure?
A. Yes.
Q. Is there anything wrong, in terms of a compliance of a patient, who choses to take Motrin versus a narcotic to manage their pain?

MR. JONES: Object to the form.

THE WITNESS: No.

Q. (BY MR. HADDAD) I mean do you have a -- have you formed an opinion as to whether or not there was some but do you know any of the solutions that were used by Dr. Kerr as part of his cleaning and disinfecting the materials?

A. No.

Q. You have listed private practice infectious disease. I take it the bulk of your practice is probably being called in on a consult in a hospital setting?

A. Correct.

Q. Okay. Your private practice, does that simply involve follow-up to patients that you might have consulted with in the hospital that need outpatient assessment and treatment?

A. Yeah. We do -- we see patients, you know, outpatient consults in the office, too, for different kinds of things, fevers or swollen glands, things like that. And we have a pretty big HIV practice that we take care of.

Q. Now, Doctor, among the materials that you brought with you, Mr. Quane kind of explained it to me off the record, but I want to explain it, make sure I have an understanding on the record. There appears to be as part of the packet of materials that you brought with you comprising your file is various sheets that contain the first name of patients, dates of treatment, and then the procedures performed at Silk Touch. Is that your understanding?

A. That is.

Q. Do you have an understanding as to how these sheets were created?

A. I believe that the people at Silk Touch pulled up the names of -- and procedures of people they worked on the last several years and compiled them.

Q. Is there anything else other than getting this list that had the patient name, the date of treatment, and procedure, is there anything else you were given or shown regarding patient outcomes in any of these patients?

A. No.

Q. There is -- Mr. Quane has it for you. He indicated that it might contain certain tabs to it, which is the defendants' answers to the third set of discovery requests. And you understand part of this incorporates anticipated opinions that you may hold in this case. Do you understand that?

A. Yes.

Q. Okay. Had you been sent by e-mail or whatever he uses there in the office looks like.

Q. Okay. Now, there's a notation under the 7-23 chronology part of your notes, "Hasn't used Norco." And there looks like there's an exclamation in your notes. Is that the way it was written in Dr. Kerr's record or is that exclamation something you felt was important enough that she hasn't used Norco that you wanted to highlight?

A. I think I highlighted it.

Q. What significance does that have?

A. Well, Norco is a pain medication. You're not using it. So it's -- you know, usually if people are having a lot of pain, they'll use Norco.

Q. Okay. Is the only significance from an infectious disease or physician standpoint, an expert reviewer of this case with respect to Norco is if she's not using Norco, her degree of pain must not be that significant?

A. That would be my interpretation.

Q. And you hold that without the knowledge of how Dr. Kerr and Ms. Kerr described how Krystal Ballard was walking on 7-23 when she came to the office?

vibration or energy or heat to the tissue to help process the fat or help with the contouring before you actually do the removal of the fat.

I've used just about everything that's out there.

Q. Okay. In terms of a cosmetic practice, have you spoken to any physicians that practiced in Boise, Idaho, in 2010 which is the time period that Krystal Ballard had a procedure about the standard of practice in Boise in 2010?

A. Yes, I did.

Q. Who did you speak with?

A. Dr. Kelly O'Neil who practiced in this area around that time.

Q. And I think within the materials that are either part of Exhibit 1 or Exhibit 2, whichever is the stack of your file --

A. Yeah, it's 2.

Q. -- there's reference to Dr. O'Neil.

And you remember speaking with him?

A. That's correct.

Q. All right. Is your discussions with Dr. O'Neil --

Well, first of all, did you rely upon Dr. O'Neil exclusively in order to understand what the standard of practice was in Boise, Idaho, in 2010 in performing similar procedures and services to patients in --

MR. JONES: Object to form; vague.

THE WITNESS: There were no other physicians that I spoke to who practiced in Boise, Idaho, around that time to whom I spoke or communicated in any way.

Q. (BY MR. HADDAD) Okay. And Dr. O'Neil is a physician that you were referred to by Mr. Quane to contact in order to avail yourself of what the standard of practice was in Boise in in 2010, correct?

A. Yeah, correct. I did not know him before.

Q. Okay. Basically, counsel for Dr. Kerr told you, "You need to learn what the standard of practice was in 2010, and here's the guy that can tell you what the standard of practice is," and they named Dr. O'Neil, correct?

MR. JONES: Object to form.

THE WITNESS: So, yes, I spoke to him after they referred me to him as someone who was reliable.

Q. (BY MR. HADDAD) Okay. Did you know

Dr. O'Neil from any other circumstance other than the fact that counsel for Dr. Kerr told you to contact him about understanding the standard of practice?

A. I'd never run into him at a meeting or anything like that, correct.

MR. JONES: Counsel, we don't have the benefit of coffee or water or anything in this room like you do, so I'd like to take a break when you get to a point --

MR. HADDAD: Okay. It will be just --

Well, let's do it now. Let's go off the record.

(Break taken from 10:11 a.m. to 10:21 a.m.)

Q. (BY MR. HADDAD) Doctor, in terms of your conversations --

First of all, have you had more than one conversation with --

A. I'm sorry. The video skipped.

Q. I'm sorry. I was looking down, so that probably had something to do with it.

Dr. Kelly O'Neil, have you spoken to him on more than one occasion?

A. Two occasions.

Q. All right. What I see, Doctor, within Ballard's medical records?

A. Again, I don't know whether he had reviewed them or not, and I -- and I don't recall if there was anything in particular that he said that would have, by inference, made me be able to say that he had or had not.

Q. Okay. Is it fair to say that it was -- the longer telephone call is the one that you used as the basis by which you came to learn what the standard of practice was in Idaho in 2010?

MR. JONES: Object to form.

THE WITNESS: I think that a combination of the review of all the records and in combination with the conversation with him was what I relied upon to be able to say that Dr. Kerr was within the standard of practice for the area.

Q. (BY MR. HADDAD) Okay. Well, we'll get to that.

I understand you reviewed the medical records, but in terms of familiarizing yourself with the standard of practice in Idaho, is it fair to say that familiarizing yourself with what the standard of practice was in Boise, Idaho, in 2010 was really based upon the longer call with Dr. O'Neil?

Q. (BY MR. HADDAD) I mean, I think you presumed it, but you didn't specifically ask him, "During the calendar year 2010, did you do liposuction?"

A. I did not ask the number of cases he had done in any particular month or year, correct.

Q. Okay. In terms of fat transfer, did you talk to Dr. O'Neil at all about fat transfer?

A. I did.

Q. Did Dr. O'Neil tell you that he performed fat transfers in 2010?

A. We talked about fat transfer specifically.

Fat transfers are an area of liposuction where some doctors really, really are excited about it, and some do very little fat transfer. And I don't recall whether I asked him if fat transfer was something that he did routinely with every one of his liposuctions or with 10 percent. But he certainly was familiar with that aspect.

We talked very specifically about the -- the different options that the physician had with regard to the addition of PRP, the addition of -- whether the fat was spun down or just gravity was used to separate out.

And so he -- he was clearly knowledgeable about fat transfer, but I don't know how much he did it.

Q. Based upon your discussions with Dr. O'Neil, was it your understanding that during the calendar year 2010, he had done any fat transfer procedures?

A. Would you ask that question again?

Q. Yes.

A. It sounded -- I'm sorry. It sounds like something that you had already asked, but maybe it's a little bit different.

Q. Maybe a little bit different.

Do you know one way or the other whether or not, during the calendar year 2010, Dr. O'Neil had performed any fat transfer procedures based upon your discussions with him?

A. Okay. So you're asking the same question about fat transfer that you were about liposuction. I understand.

The same answer. I'm not -- I did not ask him specifically what his caseload looked like.

Q. Okay. When Dr. O'Neil was talking about other physicians in Boise, did he tell you -- did you have a discussion about what other physicians did in their office practice as it relates to the fat transfer procedure?

A. Yes, we did.

Q. Did Dr. O'Neil tell you how he came to learn how other physicians in Boise might either do liposuction or fat transfer?

A. You know, no, he did not tell me how he knew other physicians did one thing or another.

Q. Okay. In your discussions with Dr. O'Neil, did he tell you that his facility was an accredited facility in 2010?

A. You're talking about Dr. O'Neil --

Q. Yes.

A. -- and whether his facility was or was not accredited?

We certainly did talk about the accreditation issue, and he related to me that -- that there were a variety of practice situations in Boise where these type of procedures were performed in both accredited and facilities that were not accredited. He did not --

He could have told me whether his facility currently or in Boise was or was not, but I don't recall.

Q. Did Dr. O'Neil tell you how he came to

Q. Okay. Did he tell you how he came to learn the whole process that you described to him you did -- cleaning, disinfecting, and sterilizing -- how he learned what other physicians did in their practices?

A. You know, I know that in my office, the only way I have to know exactly what my peers do is that sometimes we share staff and employees. So a lot of my staff that has come in are people that worked somewhere else.

So I can say from my standpoint, I generally know that the way I approach sterilization is similar to other physicians.

I assumed that, likely, he had enough connections with staff or through other people that gave him a sense that other physicians in Boise had a similar approach.

Q. But you don't know that specifically, do you?

A. That's -- I cannot tell you how he knew that, correct.

Q. Now, you talked about a medical equipment specialist.

What is a medical equipment specialist in terms of what you just referred to a moment ago?

facility or not in 2010?

A. We mentioned that earlier. I had mentioned that he did not tell me whether he operated out of a -- an office or an accredited facility.

Q. In terms of materials, I understand that you've seen the disclosure that purports to have the opinions that you are going to express, correct?

A. I think I understood your --

What did you say again?

Q. Well, there's a -- we were provided, as part of the discovery, your name and several pages that followed your name that says, "Here's the areas he may testify on."

Have you seen that?

A. Yes, I have.

Q. Okay. When did you first see that?

A. I saw that --

I believe it was sent to me earlier, but I reviewed it yesterday for the first time. I think I probably lost it in my stack of paperwork, and I feel like I'd seen it before. It sounded like me talking.

But it was prepared by my attorneys

Sound Surgical Technologies --

First of all, do you know if Sound Surgical Technologies was a manufacturer of the liposuction machine?

A. It was the -- the manufacturer of not the liposuction machine but the Vaser.

Q. Okay. The Vaser?

A. Right.

So, yes.

Q. Do you --

A. Yes, Sound Surgical is the manufacturer of that.

Q. Did you review their operator's manual with respect to what recommendations they make as to how to clean, disinfect, and sterilize the equipment that is used as part of the Vaser procedure?

A. I did not; I did not.

Q. Doctor, you've given --

This is part of the packet of file materials that's part of your file that was produced. I think that's No. 2, I think.

A. Correct.

Q. Give me a second here. I'll look through my sticky notes here.

A. I have not. I have looked at this sheet, but I haven't looked at the corresponding charts.

Q. Okay. But in any event, you were given this chart on August 27th of this year?

A. That's correct.

Q. Is it your opinion, Doctor, that --

Well, you had mentioned Ms. Ballard, in your opinion, experienced a urosepsis.

Is that correct?

A. That's correct.

Q. And you believe that's what caused the sepsis and shock that she experienced?

A. The -- to -- to my best evaluation, that's what I would say.

Q. Okay. And obviously, we have certain standards in the law for opinion testimony.

Are you able to say one way or the other to a reasonable degree of probability that Ms. Ballard had a urosepsis?

A. I would just say more likely than not.

Q. Okay. Do you have an opinion, more likely than not, that the urosepsis caused her to die?

A. Yes, I believe she died of sepsis.

Re: Ballard v. Kerr, et al.

Dear Mr. Quane,

I am in receipt of "Defendants' Supplemental Answer to Plaintiff's Interrogatory No. 20", served on September 16, 2013. In your supplemental answer to Interrogatory No. 20, you identify Susie Kerr as being expected to testify to "Silk Touch, records and data she compiled of Silk Touch for infections, patients," etc. I do not know exactly what she compiled at this point given the vague response, but take issue with Ms. Kerr apparently compiling information at the 11th hour; over 15 months after the service of the original requests; after a motion to compel requiring you to respond to the interrogatories; after Ms. Kerr's deposition as a fact witness and 30(b)(6) representative; and after a significant number of expert depositions. We will certainly raise this issue with the Court due to the untimeliness of this supplementation, but not having the benefit of how the Court will address this issue, and without waiving any objection, we need you to provide the following:

1.) Records, data or documents she compiled as referenced in the supplemental answer to Interrogatory No. 20. This would also be required as part of your duty to supplement request for production No. 1, which asks for "all documents identified or referred to in answering any of the foregoing interrogatories." We do NOT want a mere summary of the information, but all documents she actually used and relied upon in compiling the information. Without the actual documents, our ability to fully cross-examine Ms. Kerr would be impeded.

2.) A date on which Ms. Kerr can be re-deposed to address the possible testimony referenced by this late supplementation.

Given our current trial date and the need to obtain this information immediately, I would like the documents faxed to my office within the next 3 business days. This should not be difficult since apparently it has already been compiled by Ms. Kerr.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Sincerely,

P. Gregory Haddad, Esq.

Re: Ballard v. Kerr
Our File No. 1107/25-938

Dear Mr. Haddad:

The records and data compiled by Susie Kerr regarding infections and patients which you erroneously claim was untimely supplemented in my Answer to your Interrogatory Number 20 was produced for you at your deposition of Dr. Coffman on August 20, 2013. You have had this data for one month before you ever brought up the subject of deposing Susie Kerr. If anything, you are the one who is untimely and you seem to always cast blame on me for your dilatory conduct. The records and data under discussion was prepared shortly before August 20, 2013 for the purpose of being a trial exhibit and it did not exist before and therefor it was not available for production or reference in supplementation to answers to written discovery. In fact, since it will be used only as a trial exhibit, the court Order governing further proceedings does not require its identification and disclosure until either 14 days or 7 days before trial. The Order also provides that the last day to take discovery depositions shall be no later than sixty (60) days prior to trial. Your request to depose Susie Kerr (September 20, 2013) was not made within the time frame of the Court Order.

I must have you provide me with legal authority and support for your claimed right to depose Susie Kerr. I did you a favor by producing the data at the deposition of Dr. Coffman on August 20, 2013.

You also contend that Dr. Garrison untimely disclosed his opinion on fat emboli at his deposition for the first time. I agree that his opinion was first disclosed at his deposition but I do not agree it was untimely. It was formed by Dr. Garrison a few days before his deposition and therefor it was not subject to disclosure in his two prior expert disclosures or at any time before it was formulated by him. He did not tell me about his opinion until the day before the deposition. I am always amazed when lawyers take depositions of opposing experts and ask about opinions of the expert not previously disclosed. It makes no sense or logic why lawyers want to know of opinions of experts that have not been previously disclosed when such undisclosed opinions are not admissible in evidence. Why ask? You are the one who caused the new opinion of Dr. Garrison on fat embolism to be brought out and as a result, you must now live with the opinion. But for you, it would not even exist. The deposition of an opposing expert taken after the expert has given a disclosure of opinions constitutes a valid disclosure of opinions elicited at the deposition, even if new. You did the same thing at the deposition of Dr. Coffman and I objected but you persisted and got an opinion of sorts on an issue not previously described in the disclosure of Dr. Coffman. You also went into details about fat embolism and the basis for the opinions of Dr. Garrison at the deposition. This included references to the chest x-ray at Elmore Medical Center and the report of Dr. Morgan, both of which made reference to fat embolism. You now claim that you could not adequately prepare for his deposition because you did not have notice of his opinion in advance. This is an absurd position because you would not be prepared when you brought up the matter of fat embolism which you should not have done, but you did. You must live with your contention that you were not prepared and I know of no legal authority that gives you the right to take another deposition of Dr. Garrison. You have put yourself in an awkward position and if you will provide me legal authority and support for taking another deposition of Dr. Garrison I will consider your request.

Very truly yours,

Jeremiah A. Quane

Case No. CV OC 1204792

DEFENDANTS' FIRST SUPPLEMENTAL ANSWERS TO PLAINTIFF'S FIRST SET OF INTERROGATORIES

Defendants hereby submit their First Supplemental Answer to Plaintiff's First Set of Interrogatories as follows:

INTERROGATORY NO. 3: State the name and addresses of each person whom you intend to call as an expert witness at trial, the subject matter on which each expert is expected to testify, the substance of the facts and opinions of each expert, a summary of the grounds for each opinion of each expert, and a summary of each expert's qualifications.

SUPPLMENTAL ANSWER TO INTERROGATORY NO. 3:

1) Brian C. Kerr, M.D.
C/o Quane Jones McColl PLLC
101 S. Capitol Blvd. Suite 1601
Boise, Idaho 83701
(208) 780-3939

Subject Matter: Facts of case, applicable standards of health care practice, causation, damages and the care and treatment of Krystal Ballard.

Substance of facts and opinions held: Dr. Kerr is a physician licensed by the state of Idaho to practice medicine and surgery. Dr. Kerr has engaged in the medical specialty of anesthesiology and cosmetic surgery at all times relevant herein. Dr. Kerr will testify as a non-retained expert witness at the trial as to his compliance with the applicable standard of health care practice with respect to all of the medical services rendered to the patient/decedent Krystal Ballard. Dr. Kerr will testify that he has actual knowledge of the standard of health care practice applicable to physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise, Idaho in 2010 and that he met such standard taking into account his background, training, experience and field of medical specialization with respect to any and all medical services rendered to the patient.

Part of the basis for Dr. Kerr's opinions include: his background, training, research, practice and experience in performing cosmetic procedures as a licensed physician in Boise, Idaho, his prior involvement in the peer review process while working as an anesthesiologist, his involvement as an anesthesiologist on thousands of surgeries, his prior medical staff privileges, his knowledge of how cosmetic procedures like liposuction are performed in Boise in 2010, his experience in performing a large volume of liposuction and fat transfer procedures, his knowledge of how the Vaser ultrasonic liposuction procedure is performed, how fat transfers/grafting procedures are performed, his knowledge of the types of equipment and instruments needed to perform the nature and types of cosmetic procedures at issue in this case, his knowledge of the scope of practice of cosmetic providers in Boise, Idaho and elsewhere, and his knowledge of the types of medical providers who perform cosmetic procedures like the ones at issue in this case and his knowledge of the manner and method by which surgical equipment and surgical procedure facilities are maintained in a sterile fashion. Dr. Kerr will explain his training and experience at the Mayo Clinic during his residency in anesthesiology 1989-1992 as it relates to sterile operating conditions for the anesthetic procedures he performed, was taught and observed. He will explain the same matters for his experience as a staff anesthesiologist at Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center in Boise from 1992 to 2008.

Dr. Kerr will discuss the standard of health care practice employed at Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center for achieving sterile operating conditions and the disinfection of instruments and equipment and that the similar matters undertaken for the procedure on Krystal Ballard were used and exceeded.

Dr. Kerr will testify that the infection rates at Saint Alphonsus Regional Medical Center were and are for in excess of any infections he has encountered which are essentially zero, with possibly one or two minor cellulitis cases that were easily treated successfully with no adverse consequences.

By way of these and other professional experiences in Boise, Idaho, Dr. Kerr will testify that he has actual knowledge of community standards of health care practice applicable to him. During his professional career in Boise, Idaho, he has been acquainted with physicians who perform cosmetic procedures who are not plastic surgeons, but rather come from a number of different medical backgrounds including: family practice, anesthesia, general surgery, dermatology and obstetrics and gynecology. Dr. Kerr has become acquainted with the nature and scope of the practice of these other cosmetic procedure providers and the procedures utilized by them in this specialty in Boise, Idaho in 2010, including the procedures utilized for maintaining a sterile field and how to properly clean and maintain the surgical equipment and instruments utilized for cosmetic procedures including the procedures at issue in this case. Dr. Kerr will explain that the standard of health care practice for plastic surgeons is not the standard of health care practice for him or physicians who practice in the same medical specialty he does.

Dr. Kerr will describe and offer testimony on the training he received for the procedures he performed on Krystal Ballard and refer to the publications, data and documents that have been produced in discovery on this subject that are incorporated herein by this reference and explain the numerous similar procedures he performed before his treatment of Krystal Ballard, consisting of 199 liposuctions through July 20, 2010 and 33 fat transfers through July 20, 2010.

Dr. Kerr will explain that there was no requirement, per the standard of health care practice or otherwise, for his facility to be certified, inspected or approved by any organization or government agency, which included his autoclave, his clinic and the instruments he used for surgery and that his medical license allowed him to conduct his medical practice and the procedure he performed on Krystal Ballard.

During Dr. Kerr's professional career in Boise, Idaho, he has received specific training in various lipolysis procedures including traditional, laser assisted and ultrasonic assisted lipolysis. He will testify that he had adequate training and experience to perform the liposuction and fat transfer procedures on the patient at issue. He will testify regarding the significant experience he has in performing these types of procedures as part of his cosmetic practice. He will testify that it was appropriate for the procedures at issue to be performed on patients like Krystal Ballard in an office based setting without general anesthesia and that he had proper facilities, equipment and personnel to do these procedures safely and within the applicable local standard of health care practice. As reflected in his deposition testimony and discovery responses which are hereby incorporated as if set forth in full, Dr. Kerr had performed these procedures on numerous other patients before and since the procedure at issue in this case. Dr. Kerr will testify that he possesses the professional knowledge and experience that allows him to express the opinions and testimony described in this document.

Dr. Kerr will testify that he has never had a patient experience a post-operative complication like the one alleged in this case nor has he ever had a patient experience a post-operative infection of this nature, nor a patient death. Based in part on his review of this case and in consultation with experienced and trained medical professionals in several other areas of medicine including infectious disease and pathology, he will testify that the patient's death was not due to any error or omission on his part or the part of anyone associated with his practice. He will testify that he employed the use of proper cleaning and sterilization techniques for his equipment and instruments and that he utilized proper procedures and supplies. Dr. Kerr will explain the procedures he performed on patients the days following his procedure on Krystal Ballard, starting on July 23, 2010 through July 31, 2010 in which he utilized the same sterile and disinfection procedures he employed in his procedure on Krystal Ballard and there were no infections or infectious conditions with any of the patients. He will explain the same matters in regard to the multitude of procedures her performed before the procedure he performed on Krystal Ballard. He will render the opinion that his liposuction and fat transfer procedures did not cause or result in the introduction of any bacteria to the patient. Dr. Kerr actually holds the opinions expressed in this document and that his opinions will be stated on a more probable than not basis or reasonable medical certainty.

Dr. Kerr will testify that nothing he elected to do or not do with respect to the medical services provided to Krystal Ballard in Boise in 2010 violated the applicable local standard of health care practice which in turn caused or contributed to any damages or injuries to the patient. Dr. Kerr will testify that the unfortunate death of Krystal Ballard was not and cannot be assumed to be the result of violations of the standard of health care practice by him. He will testify that the standard of health care practice applicable to physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise is established by the local community of physicians engaged in this specialty and the way they typically practice in the community and not by any organization, academic center, publication, foreign physician, or by virtue of any specialty board certification. Dr. Kerr's testimony at trial will necessarily contain a mixed component of both factual and expert testimony. He will opine that the standard of health care practice is the care typically provided under similar circumstances by Boise physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise, Idaho in 2010.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Kerr will express and define the local standard of practice as it existed in Boise in 2010 with respect to the medical issues in this case consistent with his deposition testimony, prior discovery responses and the contents of this disclosure which are hereby incorporated. He will discuss how compliance with the standard of practice does not guarantee a perfect result and its application and compliance is intended to minimize and hopefully largely reduce undesirable and unintended results. The standard of healthcare practice for physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery is not perfect and no perfect outcome was ever warranted or represented to the patient. The standard of practice applicable includes as a major element aspects of provider judgment as opposed to the application of science which may vary depending on the patient and care circumstances. Dr. Kerr will be prepared to testify about his experiences in this regard at trial and why his care in this case was consistent with the standards of practice he is held to. As with all operative procedures, the risk of infection is always a possibility and Dr. Kerr will explain that post-operative infection, if it should develop, is an accepted and recognized risk factor that is not due to inappropriate care or violations of the standard of health care practice by the physician and that under the best of circumstances and medical care, infections may occur. Dr. Kerr will explain the advice and information given to Krystal Ballard in regard to the risk, benefits and options he provided to Krystal Ballard on two occasions before his procedure on July 21, 2010 which is documented in his medical records. Dr. Kerr will explain the standard of health care practice that is applicable to him and that everything undertaken by him in his care and treatment of Krystal Ballard is illustrative of the standard of health care practice, based on the class of health care provider to which he belonged and in which capacity he was functioning. Dr. Kerr will explain that the standard of health care practice provides that he is to be judged and evaluated in comparison with similarly trained and qualified physicians of the same class as himself, taking into account his training, experience and field of medical specialization.

As part of his testimony and consistent with his specialty of anesthesiology and cosmetic surgery, Dr. Kerr is expected to testify concerning the totality of medical services provided to Krystal Ballard. As part of his testimony, Dr. Kerr will discuss his training and the certifications he obtained in order to become a physician engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery. He will discuss his care and treatment of the patient as outlined in the patient's medical records as well as his conversations and interactions with the patient and her husband as discussed in the documents produced in discovery and/or attached as exhibits to Dr. Kerr's deposition. To the extent it is relevant to his opinions, he will also discuss his continuing education courses since transitioning from anesthesia to cosmetic procedures including his further knowledge of cosmetic surgery which includes both the Vaser procedure and fat injection procedures and how they are performed in different locations in this body.

With respect to the fat injection, he will discuss how a person's own fat may be used to improve the appearance of the body by moving it from an area where it is less needed (usually the thighs or abdomen) to an area that has less tissue volume. He will explain how typically, the transferred fat results in an increase in volume of the body site being treated. Before the procedure, the areas from where the fat is being removed are injected with a fluid to minimize bruising and discomfort. The fat is removed from the body by a cannula through a small incision. He will discuss how the fat is prepared to be reinjected back into the patient's body and then placed into the desired area using either a smaller cannula, or as was done in this case, a needle. He will explain how some of the fat that is transferred often does not maintain its volume over time, which is often addressed by injecting more than is needed at the time to achieve the desired end result. Over a few weeks, the amount of transferred fat will decrease. He will explain how the fat transfer procedure was done using a local anesthetic and that this was consistent with the local standard of practice given the nature and extent of the procedure.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Kerr will discuss the entries in his records including his first encounter with the patient on July 13, 2010, what treatment she desired, the fact that this was an elective procedure, that it was a purely cosmetic procedure, he will discuss the patient's health history form, the fact that she had previously had a liposuction procedure and desired further treatment of this type, the general state of the patient's health, the operative report and a detailed explanation of how he did the procedure on July 21, 2010, he will discuss the patient's vital signs and her clinical condition before during and after the surgery as well as at the post-operative visit with the patient, his pre-operative, intra operative and post-operative discussions, instructions and directions shared with the patient and then ultimately the discussions he had with patient's husband and aunt, he will discuss the technical aspects of the Vaser liposuction procedure including how the local anesthetic is given, how the tumescent anesthetic is prepared and injected, what it does to the adipose tissue, how the Vaser device operates to liquefy the adipose tissue, how and where the cannulas are placed, the amount of energy applied to the device to effectuate the desired impact on the adipose tissue, he will explain the artistic nature of the procedure and the laborious aspect of moving the cannula back and forth to feather the tissue and achieve the desired aesthetic result.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Kerr will explain the manner and method by which the adipose tissue harvested is then drained and prepared for reinjection, how the instruments and equipment are routinely cleaned and sterilized for each procedure, he will discuss those pieces of equipment and/or attachments and medical goods which are new versus sterilized for reuse between patients and/or procedures, he will discuss the pre and post-operative antibiotics he administered to the patient and the reasons why they were appropriate, he will discuss how the patient never appeared infected or septic to him or even to be suffering from any signs or symptoms of any infection beyond general localized pain in her buttocks which would be expected initially from this type of procedure. He will discuss the cardinal signs of infection and how the patient did not have any fever or warmth to the surgical area, there was no oozing of pus or other signs of active drainage from the operative sites, there was no swelling or signs of a rash or change in condition of the skin surrounding the area. Dr. Kerr will explain how he looked for and documented the absence of these signs and symptoms during his postoperative visit on July 23 and in his subsequent discussions with the patient and her husband prior to her death. He will testify that at no point did the patient present to him as having an infection nor did the standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr require him to refer the patient, prescribe a different course of medical care or obtain any further diagnostic testing than was done. He will discuss his knowledge of gram negative rods and the fact that they do not exist on the skin nor would they be found on his instruments, but rather they are a class of bacteria which resides in the bladder, bowels and urinary tract of a patient.

Dr. Kerr will discuss why the Vaser procedure is an appropriate method of removing unwanted adipose tissue in a patient like Krystal Ballard. He will testify that he had adequate training and experience to perform the surgical procedures on the patient in question and that he performed these procedures in conformity with the local standard of practice to which Dr. Kerr is held. He will explain how the field of laser lipolysis with the use of tumescent anesthesia has expended in recent years. He will discuss how when considering different types of the body for lipolysis that each area has its own unique geography and involves a degree of physician judgment as to how much material to remove and/or reinject into each location. He will explain the positioning of the patient, incision sites, pre and post-operative photos, patient behavior, choice of instruments, his artistic eye and attention to detail, management of patient expectations, and patient education and counseling from the informed consent phase through the postoperative follow up period. He is expected to utilize at trial various anatomical illustrations as well as various cannulas and related instrumentation for the procedures at issue including those depicted in the discovery photos of instruments and supplies produced to date.

As part of his testimony, he will explain how Vaser Lipo involves a minimally invasive technique to selectively break apart and gently remove unwanted fat. He will explain how the targeted area is injected with a special saline solution known as tumescent fluid which numbs the target area and shrinks local blood vessels. This also temporarily expands the volume of the targeted area, making fat cells easier to remove.

Small-diameter probes are then inserted into the body through small incisions. He will explain how by resonating at a high ultrasonic frequency, the probes literally shake loose fat cells — while leaving blood vessels, nerves and connective tissues unharmed. The loose fat cells mix with the tumescent fluid, which is then removed from the body using gentle suction. After the surgery, patients are prescribed a recovery regimen to promote maximum skin retraction, smoother results with minimal recovery time compared to traditional liposuction.

Dr. Kerr may also discuss his knowledge of the history of tumescent technique liposuction which was started by dermatologists, not plastic surgeons. He will discuss his operative report and how he creates his medical record documentation, how and why he selected the antibiotics in question including the decision on July 23 to place the patient on 500 mg of Keflex and that this was an appropriate broad spectrum antibiotic to provide the patient given her location in Mountain Home, he will explain how the affected area is expected to drain postoperatively, the types of dressings placed on the affected area, the instructions given to the patient, he will discuss the cardinal signs of an infection and how he specifically evaluated, questioned the patient and documented regarding these issues on each encounter he had with the patient. He will discuss the amount of time it takes to perform the procedures in question and that he took the appropriate amount of time to address this patient during her procedure on July 21, 2010. He will discuss his knowledge of the various cosmetic organizations to which he belongs and/or has knowledge of, what they offer their members and the opportunities to associate with colleagues and obtain continuing education in this emerging field. Dr. Kerr will explain the matter he undertook on July 23, 2010 for evaluating Krystal Ballard and assessing whether there was any clinical evidence of infection of the surgical sites, including abnormal odor, and thus there was no evidence or suggestion of infection of the sites.

He will discuss how on July 26, 2010 he learned around 1 p.m. that Krystal Ballard had died. After the patient's death he sent a document setting forth his list of concerns to the coroner who he asked for a copy of the autopsy record. He will discuss the hospital records from Elmore Medical Center and St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, including the laboratory reports showing the patient had 3+ bacteria in her urine and that this is consistent with an infectious process in the patient's bladder. This is also an area wherein gram negative rod bacteria are known to populate and exist. He will discuss how the patient did not present with any fever, but had a WBC count of 14.7. He will discuss causes for an elevated WBC count including surgery. He will comment upon the fact that the autopsy failed to address the patient's bladder or perform any microscopic examination of that organ to address the nature of the bacteria identified in the positive UA performed at Elmore Medical Center on July 25, 2010. Dr. Kerr is expected to offer testimony on the autopsy report of Dr. Glen Groben and the matters he described in his deposition in regard to the report, including the fact that Dr. Groben did not perform a microscopic evaluation of the bladder and urinary tract with the exception of the kidneys.

Dr. Kerr is also expected to discuss the patient's elevated creatinine and how this can be signs of dehydration as well as the evidence that the patient's kidneys were not functioning properly. He will address the vague and confusing nature of the autopsy report wherein the pathologist at autopsy referred to an increase in the amount of acute inflammatory cells within tissue from the surgical sites, it is not clear which surgical sites he is referring to in his report. He will discuss how it is not clear where the tissue sections where harvested from on the patient. Dr. Kerr will render the opinion, more likely than not, that the gram negative bacterial rods, if they existed, were introduced into the patient's surgical site sometime after the procedure rather than being introduced during the procedure. He has never had a patient experience such an infection in all his years. Dr. Kerr will testify that few of his patients who have undergone a lipolysis procedure have ever experienced any kind of post-operative infection and none of those patients died and all of them were diagnosed based on clinical observation. These were limited cellulitis based on clinical suspicion and not based on a culture result. Dr. Kerr will explain that if the opinions of Dr. Dean Sorensen are valid, there should have been other infections of patients before and after the procedure on Krystal Ballard, and there were not.

Dr. Kerr will testify that when he saw the patient on July 23, two days post operatively, he did not observe any evidence of cellulitis or redness in the surgical site. He will discuss how the patient repeatedly concealed this procedure from her husband and the military and that she was noncompliant with what she had been told both in writing and verbally about how to care for herself. He will discuss how the patient erroneously reported that she had fallen and injured her back and claimed this was the source of her pain rather than admit she had cosmetic surgery performed. He will discuss how the patient admitted she was not taking her medications because she did not want proof of them to show up in any drug screen she might take with the military. He will also discuss how the patient admitted to engaging in activities she was told to refrain from in order to allow her body time to heal. He will discuss his concern that the patient was not properly changing her bandages and caring for herself as instructed and how during any of these times would have been an opportunity for the bacteria in question to be introduced into her system.

Dr. Kerr will testify that he and his employees followed the appropriate sterile technique in regards to the procedure he performed on Krystal Ballard. He will explain that there are no absolutes with a sterile technique and that one can do everything right and still have situations where unwanted bacteria can become introduced into the surgical site. He will discuss the patient's admission that she was not taking the narcotic pain medication Norco and was instead taking the non-narcotic drug Motrin which did not appear to be providing the patient with adequate pain control. He will explain how the patient was not following the instructions on how to care for herself, change her bandages, and get appropriate rest. He will discuss the patient's disclosure that she had a PT exam in the military scheduled for a day or two after the procedure and was told that she should not engage in that activity. He will discuss how the patient agreed to tell her husband that she had the cosmetic procedure done so he could help care for her, but then she failed to do so on multiple occasions. He will explain that when the patient showed up on July 21 to have the procedure she did not have someone present to drive her home as she was instructed to do. Dr. Kerr will discuss how he did not use a sedating drug with the patient and then observed her for a period of time after the procedure before allowing her to drive home and even offered to have a taxi take the patient home.

The patient was placed on 500 mg of Keflex per day for 10 days as of the July 23 visit. He would have removed the bandages in order to personally observe the area of the wound to check for signs and symptoms of infection. He will testify that the amount of bruising and edema observed on July 23 was consistent with what he would expect to see at that point postoperatively. He will testify that the standard of practice did not require him to obtain a complete blood count on the patient on July 23 in order to determine what her white count was at that time. He will discuss his training in performing liposuction he received from both John Lundeby and at the Keller Medical Institute. He will discuss his experiences with and the differences between Smart Lipo, Ultrasonic liposuction and traditional liposuction. He will discuss his background, training and experience in the use and regular implementation of the sterile technique. He will discuss how this is an office based procedure which is not required to be performed in a hospital setting, nor are hospital privileges required in order to perform such a procedure. He was not required, nor does the standard of practice require that his facility be certified or approved by any accreditation facility such as the AAACH or AAAASF.

He will discuss how his procedure room is prepared for surgery, how the patient, himself, his assistant and the patient are all prepared for surgery and the sterile technique utilized. He will discuss the autoclave he uses, how it operates and how it helps him maintain a sterile field for his procedures. He will testify that he was not required to test for spores or mold and that these issues have nothing to do with the case. He will discuss the areas around the patient which are considered part of the sterile field depending on the nature and type of procedure at issue. He will discuss the operation and use of the Vaser ultrasonic lipolysis machine utilized for the procedure in this case. He will explain how the tumescent lidocaine is mixed, prepared and injected into the patient. He will explain how the Vaser procedure is done with the device in place under the skin without direct visualization. He will discuss how he harvested 400 cc of fat from the patient's anterior abdomen, 200 cc of fat from her right lateral waist flank and 200 cc of fat from the patient's left lateral waist flank. He will discuss how the Vaser in this case was utilized for less than eleven minutes despite the fact the patient was in the procedure room for around four hours. He will discuss the different cannulas used to aspirate the fat and the artistic technique required to accomplish the desired aesthetic outcome.

He will explain how the fat was injected into the patient using only a needle and syringe and that there were no incisions made into the patient during the injection phase of the procedure. He will testify that it was proper and acceptable technique for the same needles to be used to inject the fat into both the left and right buttocks of the patient. He will discuss his informed consent discussion with the patient including the contents of the informed consent document signed by the patient in this case. He will discuss the risk of infection as being a specifically consented risk of the lipolysis and fat injection procedure. He will discuss how the consent form discusses with the patient both pre and post treatment instructions and how it warns the patient that if they fail to comply with these instructions may increase the possibility that the patient will develop complications. He will discuss and interpret the entries in his medical records.

Dr. Kerr will render his opinions consistent with the requirements of Idaho Code §6-1012 and 6-1013. In this regard, he will challenge the foundation as well as rebut the opinions of the expert witnesses listed by the Plaintiff. Regarding the issue of consent, he will testify that he discussed with the patient the nature and the extent of the risks normally attendant to the procedure in question such that the giving of consent by the patient was valid in all respects consistent with the requirements of Idaho Code §39-4506. As part of his testimony, he may also discuss his preoperative clinical examination including evaluation of the regions to be lipo-contoured including review for hernias, scars, asymmetries, cellulite, stretch marks, the quality of the skin and its elasticity, the presence of stria and dimpling and the location of fat deposits. He will rebut any testimony by Plaintiff's experts that he improperly performed the lipolysis procedure, the fat injection procedure, that he improperly sterilized his equipment or that he did anything to cause the patient's death. Depending on the testimony of Dr. Dean Sorensen at trial, Dr. Kerr may offer testimony on and descriptive of the fact that Dr. Sorensen is a competitor of his and advertises his belief that non-plastic surgeons should not do liposuction, such as his website that states "unfortunately, there are a number of procedures being performed by physicians who are not trained in plastic surgery. These non-plastic surgeons often utilize technologies that have catchy names and are expensive but in clinical trials have not shown any significant improvement over the standard tumescent liposuction techniques. Patients are advised to select a procedure that is safe and effective based on scientific results performed by a Board Certified plastic surgeon and to ignore the marketing hype so common today." Depending on the proof submitted at trial and the testimony of Dr. Sorensen and/or the tenor or implication of his testimony and opinions, Dr. Kerr may describe the lawsuit against Dr. Sorensen in Boise that resulted in the jury rendering a verdict of malpractice against him and assessing damages of a substantial amount against him. Dr. Kerr may testify that Dr. Sorensen has never observed or seen the operating procedures of his, including his sterile techniques, use of instruments, disinfectant matters and the way he performed the procedures on Krystal Ballard.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Kerr will discuss the patient's anatomy including the location of nerves, blood supply, adipose tissue, organs as well as the body's response to surgery, infection, pain medication and antibiotics. This may include extensive testimony by way of demonstrative exhibits depicting general anatomy and/or pictures of the patient and/or of the surgical equipment itself. Dr. Kerr will testify that he had the best interests of the patient in mind and that he was committed to the rendition of his services in full compliance with the applicable local standard of health care practice and his experience and capability. He will testify that even in hindsight the patient did not present with any increased risk for infection that would have raised any concern about her undergoing the procedures on July 21, 2010. At the time of Dr. Kerr's procedure on July 21, 2010, there was no evidence of a urinary tract infection of Krystal Ballard and Dr. Kerr will opine that Krystal Ballard was not suffering from a urinary tract infection on July 21, 2010.

Data and other information considered and summary of qualifications: In forming his opinions, Dr. Kerr has relied upon his own unique training and experience as a licensed physician engaged in the medical specialty of anesthesia and cosmetic surgery in Boise, Idaho in 2010 in treating, diagnosing, managing and caring for patients like Krystal Ballard, his observations of the habits and practices of other cosmetic surgeons and care providers, his knowledge that it is within his specialty and capability to perform the procedures in question as part of his practice of medicine, his interactions with cosmetic providers, and his membership and participation in various medical associations, including those in the state of Idaho. The data upon which his opinions are based include his medical education, training, skill, experience, his experience practicing cosmetic surgery within Boise, his review of the care and treatment experiences with similar lipolysis and fat injection cases over the course of his career in medicine in Boise.

Dr. Kerr will discuss the ability, competence and proficiency of Brianna Kerr as a surgical assistant and the manner in which she maintains sterile conditions for surgeries, and the fact that she did nothing in the surgery of Krystal Ballard that would create or contribute to an infection.

His opinions are also based upon the findings of various other health care providers for the patient, the results and values of various laboratory studies and other testing and observation, treatment plans, consultations, referrals and recommendations for treatment for the patient derived from such medical services and interactions before, during and after the care rendered by Dr. Kerr as described in all medical records, affidavits, discovery responses and depositions taken. Dr. Kerr's professional background and qualifications were discussed in his deposition and are incorporated herein. As part of his review of this case, and for purposes of forming his opinions, he has considered and reviewed the depositions taken to date including his own, his employees, and the Plaintiff's. He has also reviewed and considered his medical records, the records of Elmore Medical Center, Elmore Ambulance Service, Life Flight, St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, the Ada County Coroner's Office and the Plaintiff's expert witness disclosure. In the event further depositions or medical records are produced, they will also be considered. Dr. Kerr will explain the weight changes of Krystal Ballard. On July 23, 2010 she weighed 135 pounds. On July 25, 2010 at Elmore Medical Center she weighed 130 pounds. At autopsy on July 26, 2010 she weighed 180 pounds. He will explain the medical reasons and significance of these changes in weight.

At Elmore Medical Center, July 25, 2010, the treating physician evaluated the buttocks and abdomen of Krystal Ballard and noted little induration of the skin and no redness, warmth or skin sensitivity and delayed the administration of IV antibiotics until 4 ½ hours after admission. At Elmore, cardiac ejection fraction was only 17% and at St. Alphonsus on July 25, 2010, central venous pressure was measured at 20 which is very high and proof of fluid overlaid. Dr. Kerr will explain these factors and their relative significance in terms of the possible reasons for the death of Krystal Ballard.

Dr. Kerr will testify that the laboratory data of Elmore Medical Center and the clinical findings are indicative of a developing urinary tract infection or abnormalities that developed after his procedure of July 21, 2010 and if gram negative rods were in fact present at autopsy in certain locations, they came from the urinary tract of Krystal Ballard or her intestinal tract and were not introduced during his surgical procedure. Bacteria was found in the urinalysis at Elmore.

It is expected that Dr. Kerr will explain pertinent anatomy, infectious processes, pathophysiology of infections, nidus for infections, gram negative rods, types of bacteria, reasons why the blood cultures and urine cultures were negative for growth, antibiotics used for the care and the comments of Krystal Ballard regarding what drugs would show up on drug test by the Air Force. He will also explain the post-surgery matters he undertook and his efforts to assist Krystal Ballard, including the importance of the post-treatment instructions given to Krystal Ballard as denoted in his medical records and the evidence that is consistent with non-compliance by Krystal Ballard.

Dr. Kerr reserves the right to rely as further support for his opinions on medical literature related to any of the subjects set forth in this disclosure as discovery continues. Dr. Kerr reserves the right not to offer all or any of the opinions set forth in this disclosure as it as an attorney prepared document and is intentionally worded broadly in order to comply with rule 26(b)(4). The ultimate testimony to be offered at trial will depend to an extent on what testimony is deemed necessary to refute the testimony of the Plaintiff and his experts consistent with the requirements of Idaho Code §6-1012. Plaintiff has the burden of proof and it is only after that burden has been met can the defense determine what evidence and testimony will be needed to respond. Dr. Kerr has not testified in any matter in the last four years. He is not a retained expert. His curriculum vitae was previously produced and is incorporated by this reference.

2) Gregory Laurence, M.D.
Germantown Aesthetics
7475 Poplar Pike
Germantown, Tennessee 38138
(901) 624-5605

Subject Matter: Facts of case, applicable standards of health care practice, causation, damages and the care and treatment of Krystal Ballard.

Substance of facts and opinions held: Dr. Laurence is a physician licensed in the state of Tennessee to practice medicine and surgery. Dr. Laurence is board certified in both family practice and laser surgery and has engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery at all times relevant herein. Dr. Laurence will testify as a retained expert witness at the trial. Dr. Laurence will testify that he has actual knowledge of the standard of health care practice applicable to physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise, Idaho in 2010 and that in his opinion Dr. Kerr met such standard taking into account Dr. Kerr's background, training, experience and field of medical specialization with respect to any and all medical services rendered to the patient.

Dr. Laurence will explain the process he undertook in order to familiarize himself with the standards and practices in Boise and the surrounding area for the types of procedures and treatment performed by Dr. Kerr in this case. Part of the basis for Dr. Laurence's opinions include: his background, training, research, practice and experience in performing cosmetic procedures as a licensed physician, his experiences in the peer review process associated with his hospital staff privileges at Baptist Memorial Hospital and St. Francis Hospital in Memphis, Tennessee, his experience of having performed hundreds of cosmetic surgical procedures, his knowledge of how cosmetic procedures like liposuction and fat transfers were performed in Boise in 2010, his experience in performing a large volume of liposuction and fat transfer procedures, his knowledge of how the Vaser ultrasonic liposuction procedure is performed, how fat transfers/grafting procedures are performed, his knowledge of the types of equipment and instruments needed to perform the nature and types of cosmetic procedures at issue in this case, his knowledge of the scope of practice of cosmetic providers like Dr. Kerr in Boise, Idaho and elsewhere, his knowledge of the types of medical providers who perform cosmetic procedures like the ones at issue in this case and his knowledge of the manner and method by which surgical equipment and surgical procedure facilities are maintained in a sterile fashion. As part of his testimony, Dr. Laurence may also explain his training and experience at the University of Tennessee during his residency in family practice in 1992-95 as it relates to sterile operating conditions for the procedures he performed, was taught and observed. He will explain the same matters for his experience in his own aesthetics surgical center which he operates in Germantown, Tennessee from 2003 to the present.

Dr. Laurence will discuss the standard of health care practice employed at his own surgical facility in Tennessee for achieving sterile operating conditions and the disinfection of instruments and equipment and maintaining a sterile operative field and that the similar actions and efforts undertaken by Dr. Kerr as have been described for the procedure on Krystal Ballard in this case were used and exceeded in his opinion. Dr. Laurence will testify that the infection rates described by Dr. Kerr in his deposition and discovery responses are well below average for a cosmetic facility and are essentially zero, with possibly one or two minor cellulitis cases that were easily treated successfully with no adverse consequences. He will comment upon how this is evidence that the sterility procedures employed by the Defendants in this case were appropriate and working properly at the time of the surgery at issue in this case.

Dr. Laurence will testify that during his professional career he has been acquainted with numerous physicians who perform cosmetic procedures that are not plastic surgeons, but rather come from a number of different medical backgrounds including: family practice, anesthesia, general surgery, dermatology and obstetrics and gynecology. He will discuss the training he has been provided in cosmetic surgery by various physicians who are not plastic surgeons. Dr. Laurence has become acquainted with the nature and scope of the practice of these other cosmetic procedure providers and the procedures utilized by them in this specialty, including the procedures utilized for maintaining a sterile field and how to properly clean and maintain the surgical equipment and instruments utilized for cosmetic procedures including the procedures at issue in this case. Dr. Laurence will explain that the standard of health care practice for plastic surgeons is not the standard of health care practice in the same medical specialty as his and Dr. Kerr.

Dr. Laurence will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr had proper training and experience in order to perform the procedures at issue on Krystal Ballard. As part of his testimony, he is expected to refer to the publications, data and documents that have been produced in discovery on this subject and explain the numbers of similar procedures he has performed. Dr. Laurence will explain that there was no requirement, per the standard of health care practice or otherwise, for Dr. Kerr's facility to be certified, inspected or approved by any organization or government agency, which included his autoclave, his clinic and the instruments he used for surgery and that his medical license allowed him to conduct his medical practice and the procedures he performed on Krystal Ballard. He will testify that he was not required to test for spores or mold and that these issues have nothing to do with the case.

During Dr. Laurence's professional career he has received specific training in various lipolysis procedures including traditional, laser assisted and ultrasonic assisted lipolysis. He will testify that he has reviewed the nature and degree of training obtained by Dr. Kerr and that in his opinion Dr. Kerr had adequate training and experience to perform the liposuction and fat transfer procedures on the patient at issue. Dr. Laurence will testify regarding the significant experience he has in performing these types of procedures as part of his cosmetic practice. He will testify that it was appropriate for the procedures at issue to be performed on patients like Krystal Ballard in an office based setting without general anesthesia and that Dr. Kerr had proper facilities, equipment and personnel to do these procedures safely and within the applicable local standard of health care practice. Dr. Laurence will testify that he possesses the professional knowledge and experience that allows him to express the opinion and testimony described in this document.

Dr. Laurence will testify that the fact this patient experienced a post-operative complication like the one alleged in this case which resulted in a patient death does not establish that the standard of practice was violated by Dr. Kerr. He will testify that postoperative infections are not proof of a violation. He will render the opinion that the patient's death was not due to any error or omission on Dr. Kerr's part or the part of anyone associated with his practice. He will discuss his own sterilization techniques, training and experience in this area which will help support his opinion that Dr. Kerr employed the use of proper cleaning and sterilization techniques for his equipment and instruments and that he utilized proper procedures and supplies.

Dr. Laurence will testify regarding the significance of the fact that the procedures Dr. Kerr performed on patients the days following his procedure on Krystal Ballard, starting on July 23, 2010 through July 31, 2010 in which he utilized the same sterile and disinfection procedures he employed in his procedure on Krystal Ballard and there were no infections or infectious conditions with any of the patients. He will discuss how if there had been a failure to adequately sterilize the equipment in question that evidence of that should have shown up not only in all of the operative sites on this patient, but also in all of the operative sites of the subsequent patients which did not occur in this case. Dr. Laurence will similarly discuss the significance of these same matters in regards to the multitude of procedures Dr. Kerr performed before the procedures performed on Krystal Ballard.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Laurence will render the opinion that the surgical technique employed by Dr. Kerr during his liposuction and fat transfer procedures did not cause or result in the introduction of any bacteria to the patient. Dr. Laurence actually holds the opinions expressed in this document and will express all opinions stated herein on a more probable than not basis and/or to a reasonable degree of medical certainty.

Dr. Laurence will testify regarding the specific issues set forth in this disclosure, but he will also testify globally that nothing Dr. Kerr elected to do or not do with respect to the medical services provided to Krystal Ballard in Boise in 2010 violated the applicable local standard of health care practice which in turn caused or contributed to any damages or injuries to the patient. Dr. Laurence will testify that the unfortunate death of Krystal Ballard was not and cannot be assumed to be the result of violations of the standard of health care practice.

Dr. Laurence will testify that the standard of health care practice applicable to physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise in 2010 is established by the local community of physicians engaged in this specialty and the way they typically practice in the community and not by any organization, academic center, publication, foreign physician, or by virtue of any specialty board certification. In this regard, Dr. Laurence will testify regarding his various publications, honors and university appointments as set forth in his curriculum vitae which is hereby incorporated as if set forth in full. He will also discuss his various society memberships which provide him with opportunities to expand his knowledge and networking base in the field of cosmetic surgery including his affiliations with the American Institute of Ultrasound Medicine, the Association of American Physicians and Surgeons, the American Society of Cosmetic Breast Surgeons, and the National Society of Cosmetic Physicians.

Dr. Laurence will opine that the standard of health care practice is the care typically provided under similar circumstances by Boise physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise, Idaho in 2010. As part of his testimony, Dr. Laurence will express and define the local standard of practice as it existed in Boise in 2010 with respect to the medical issues in this case consistent with this disclosure and any deposition which may subsequently be taken and which is hereby incorporated as if set forth in full. Dr. Laurence holds the opinion and will discuss how compliance with the standard of practice does not guarantee a perfect result and its application and compliance is intended to minimize and hopefully largely reduce undesirable and unintended results. He will explain that the standard of healthcare practice for physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery is not perfect and the records and deposition testimony demonstrate and confirm that no perfect outcome was ever warranted or represented to this patient.

Dr. Laurence will explain how the standard of practice applicable includes, as a major element, aspects of provider judgment as opposed to the application of science which may vary depending on the patient and care circumstances. He will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr provided appropriate post-operative instructions and properly followed the patient and communicated with her and her family. Dr. Laurence will be prepared to testify about his experiences in this regard at trial and why Dr. Kerr's care in this case was consistent with the standards of practice he is held to. As with all operative procedures, the risk of infection is always a possibility and Dr. Laurence will explain that post-operative infection, if it should develop, is an accepted and recognized risk factor that is not due to inappropriate care or violations of the standard of health care practice by the physician and that under the best of circumstances and medical care, infections can and do occur.

Dr. Laurence will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr gave appropriate advice and information to Krystal Ballard in regard to the risk, benefits and options prior to the procedure on July 21, 2010 which is documented in Dr. Kerr's medical records. Dr. Laurence will explain that everything undertaken by Dr. Kerr in his care and treatment of Krystal Ballard is illustrative of, and in compliance with, the standard of health care practice, based on the class of health care provider to which Dr. Kerr belonged and in which capacity he was functioning. Dr. Laurence will explain that the standard of health care practice provides that Dr. Kerr must be judged and evaluated in comparison with similarly trained and qualified physicians of the same class as himself, taking into account his training, experience and field of medical specialization and not by a plastic surgeon which Plaintiff is unfairly trying to do in this case.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Laurence will discuss his training and the certifications he obtained in order to become a physician engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery as well as the adequacy and nature of those obtained by Dr. Kerr. He will discuss the care and treatment of the patient as outlined in the patient's medical records and he will discuss the appropriate nature, timing and content of Dr. Kerr's documented conversations and interactions with the patient and her husband.

With respect to the fat injection procedure at issue, Dr. Laurence will discuss and explain to the jury the medical basis upon which a person's own fat may be used to improve the appearance of the body by moving it from an area where it is less needed (usually the thighs or abdomen) to an area that has less tissue volume. He will explain how typically, the transferred fat results in an increase in volume of the body site being treated. He will explain how before the removal procedure begins the areas from where the fat is being removed are injected with a tumescent fluid which helps to minimize bruising and discomfort to the patient. He will explain how and why the adipose tissue or fat is freed and ultimately removed from the body via a cannula placed through a small incision in the patient's skin.

Dr. Laurence will discuss and describe how the adipose tissue is then prepared to be re-injected back into the patient's body and strategically placed into the desired area using either a smaller cannula, or as was done in this case, a needle. He will render the opinion that the manner, method and volume by which Dr. Kerr re-injected the adipose tissue back into the patient was appropriate in all respects. He will explain how some of the fat that is transferred often does not maintain its volume over time, which is often addressed by the physician having to re-inject more adipose tissue into a specific location to achieve the desired end aesthetic result. He will explain how the fat transfer procedure was done using a local anesthetic and that this was consistent with the local standard of practice given the nature and extent of the procedure.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Laurence will discuss the entries in Dr. Kerr's records including the first encounter with the patient on July 13, 2010, what treatment she desired, the fact that this was an elective procedure, that it was a purely cosmetic procedure, he will discuss the entries in patient's health history form, the general state of the patient's health and the absence of risk factors for infection preoperatively, the fact that she had previously had a liposuction procedure and desired further treatment of this type. To the extent it is relevant to his opinions, Dr. Laurence will also discuss Dr. Kerr's operative report as well as an explanation of how the procedure was performed, the patient's vital signs and her clinical condition before and after the surgery as well as at the post-operative visit with the patient. He will discuss the adequacy of the Dr. Kerr's post-operative discussions, instructions and directions shared with the patient and then ultimately the discussions he had with patient's husband and aunt. Dr. Laurence will explain that Krystal Ballard appeared to be in good health and without a urinary tract infection before the procedure on July 21, 2010 and there is no evidence that she had a urinary tract infection and that the pre-operative work up of Dr. Kerr was within the standard of health care practice.

Dr. Laurence will discuss the technical aspects of the Vaser liposuction procedure including how the local anesthetic is given, how the tumescent anesthetic is prepared and injected, what it does to the adipose tissue, how the Vaser device operates to liquefy the adipose tissue, how and where the cannulas are placed, the amount of energy applied to the device to effectuate the desired impact on the adipose tissue, and the amount of traction applied to free the adipose tissue. From his unique perspective as a cosmetic surgeon, Dr. Laurence will explain the artistic nature of the liposuction procedure and the laborious aspect of moving the cannula back and forth in order to feather the tissue and achieve the desired aesthetic result which varies depending on the location of the procedure and the body habitus and surgical goals of each patient.

In the process of providing his opinions that the care by Dr. Kerr was appropriate, Dr. Laurence will also explain the manner and method by which the adipose tissue harvested was then drained and prepared for reinjection. He will also discuss how the instruments and equipment are routinely cleaned and sterilized for each procedure, he will discuss these pieces of equipment as well as their various attachments as well as describing the medical equipment which is new versus that which must be re-sterilized for reuse between patients and/or procedures. Dr. Laurence will discuss the pre and post-operative antibiotics administered by Dr. Kerr to the patient and explain why they were appropriate medications to give to the patient as a prophylaxis against infection.

Dr. Laurence will discuss how the patient never appeared infected or septic per the medical records and deposition testimony. He will discuss the expected localized pain patients can expect to experience following a fat transfer procedure. To the extent it becomes relevant to aid in expressing his favorable opinions, Dr. Laurence may also discuss the cardinal signs of infection and how the patient did not have any fever or warmth to the surgical area, there was no oozing of pus or other signs of active drainage from the operative sites, and there was no swelling or signs of a rash or change in condition of the skin surrounding the area or abnormal odor.

Dr. Laurence will discuss the appropriate manner in which Dr. Kerr looked for and then properly documented the absence of signs and symptoms of infection during his postoperative visit on July 23 and in his subsequent discussions with the patient and her family prior to her death. He will testify that he concurs with Dr. Kerr that at no point did the patient present to Dr. Kerr as having an infection, nor did the standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr require him to refer the patient, prescribe a different course of medical care or obtain any further diagnostic testing than was done.

Consistent with his background and experience in medicine and surgery, Dr. Laurence will discuss his knowledge of gram negative rods and the fact that such organisms do not exist on or in the skin, nor would they be found on surgical instruments. Instead, they represent a class of bacteria which reside in the urinary tract and bowels of a patient. He will testify that Dr. Kerr had adequate training and experience to perform the surgeries in question, that Dr. Kerr's medical records contain an adequate description of the care rendered and the discussions with the patient, that Dr. Kerr implemented appropriate sterility techniques and conditions for surgery and that he used correct solutions for cleaning and disinfecting instruments and assuring that operative conditions were adequately sterile to guard against the risk of infection. He will testify that postoperative infections can and do occur even under ideal conditions which are not the subject malpractice, but rather as accepted complications which are impossible to prevent.

To the extent the surgical selection is questioned or needs further explanation at trial, Dr. Laurence will be prepared to discuss why the Vaser procedure is an appropriate method of removing unwanted adipose tissue in a patient like Krystal Ballard. As part of his testimony and in order to expand upon his background and experience in cosmetic surgery, Dr. Laurence may offer testimony explaining how the field of laser lipolysis with the use of tumescent anesthesia has developed in recent years.

This may include testimony addressing that when considering different types of the body for lipolysis that each area has its own unique geography and involves a degree of physician judgment as to how much material to remove and/or re-inject into each location. As part of his testimony, Dr. Laurence will be prepared to explain the positioning of the patient, incision sites, pre and post-operative photos, patient behavior, choice of instruments, his artistic eye and attention to detail, management of patient expectations, and patient education and counseling from the informed consent phase through the postoperative follow up period. He is expected to utilize at trial various anatomical illustrations as well as various cannulas and related instrumentation for the procedures at issue including those depicted in the discovery photos of instruments and supplies produced to date.

As part of his testimony, he will explain how Vaser Lipo involves a minimally invasive technique to selectively break apart and gently remove unwanted fat. He will explain how the targeted area is injected with a special saline solution known as tumescent fluid which numbs the target area and shrinks local blood vessels. This also temporarily expands the volume of the targeted area, making fat cells easier to remove. With the use of exemplars, he will demonstrate how small-diameter probes are then inserted into the body through small incisions. He will explain how by way of using a resonating high ultrasonic frequency, the probes literally shake loose fat cells — while leaving blood vessels, nerves and connective tissues unharmed. The loose fat cells mix with the tumescent fluid, which is then removed from the body using gentle suction. After the surgery, patients are prescribed a recovery regimen to promote maximum skin retraction, smoother results with minimal recovery time compared to traditional liposuction.

Dr. Laurence may also discuss his knowledge of the history of tumescent technique liposuction which was started by dermatologists, not plastic surgeons. As part of his explanation of the surgery at issue, he will describe how the affected area is expected to drain postoperatively, the types of dressings placed on the affected area, the instructions given to the patient, he will discuss the cardinal signs of an infection and how Dr. Kerr's records and deposition evidence that he specifically and appropriately evaluated and questioned the patient and then documented in his records regarding these issues on each encounter he had with the patient. He will discuss the amount of time it takes to perform the procedures in question and that there was nothing usual or out of character regarding the amount of time it took Dr. Kerr to perform the procedures on July 21, 2010.

As outlined above, Dr. Laurence will discuss his knowledge of the various cosmetic organizations to which he belongs and/or has knowledge of, what they offer their members and the opportunities to associate with colleagues and obtain continuing education in this emerging field. Dr. Laurence will explain the adequacy of the postoperative evaluation Dr. Kerr undertook on July 23, 2010 for evaluating Krystal Ballard and assessing whether there was any clinical evidence of infection of the surgical sites, including absence of any abnormal odor or other evidence or suggestion of infection of any of the surgical sites.

He will discuss his review and comments of the autopsy record and the patient's subsequent treatment records. By way of example, Dr. Laurence is expected to discuss the hospital records from Elmore Medical Center and St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, including the laboratory reports showing the patient had 3+ bacteria in her urine. Based on his experience in family practice, he will render the opinion that this laboratory finding is consistent with, and provides strong evidence of, an infectious process located within the patient's bladder. He will explain how the bladder is also an area wherein gram negative rod bacteria are known to populate and exist in the face of an infection.

Dr. Laurence will also comment upon the significance from his perspective regarding how the patient did not present with any fever, but had a WBC count of 14.7. He will discuss causes for an elevated WBC count including surgery, stress and dehydration. He will comment upon the fact that the autopsy failed to address the patient's bladder or urinary tract (aside from the kidneys) or perform any microscopic examination of that organ to address the nature of the bacteria identified in the positive UA performed at Elmore Medical Center on July 25, 2010. He is also expected to discuss the patient's elevated creatinine and how this can be signs of dehydration as well as the evidence that the patient's kidneys were not functioning properly.

Dr. Laurence will address the vague and confusing nature of the autopsy report wherein the pathologist at autopsy referred to an increase in the amount of acute inflammatory cells within tissue from the surgical sites, and how it is not clear which surgical sites he is referring to in his report. He will discuss how it is not clear where the tissue sections where harvested from on the patient. Dr. Laurence will render the opinion, more likely than not, that the gram negative bacterial rods were introduced into the patient's surgical site sometime after Dr. Kerr's surgical procedure rather than being introduced during the procedure.

He will comment upon the significance of the finding by Dr. Kerr that when he saw the patient on July 23, two days post operatively, he did not observe any evidence of cellulitis or redness in the surgical site. He will discuss what it means to him as a physician that the patient repeatedly concealed this procedure from her husband, her employer and that she engaged in noncompliant behavior despite what she had been told both in writing and verbally about how to care for herself and what she agreed to do. He will discuss the challenging position the patient elected to place herself and her health care provider in by erroneously reporting to her husband that she had simply fallen and injured her back and falsely claimed this was the source of her pain rather than admit she had cosmetic surgery performed.

In this regard, he will discuss how the patient admitted she was not taking her medications because she did not want proof of them to show up in any drug screen she might take with the military. He will discuss that when a patient elects to disobey her health care provider that there is only so much the physician can do and that the patient is essentially interfering with and limiting the physician's ability to provide her with care and to make decisions which may have made a difference in her overall outcome. He will discuss concerns regarding whether the patient was properly changing her bandages and caring for herself as instructed and how during any of these times would have been an opportunity for the bacteria in question to be introduced into her system.

Dr. Laurence will testify that Dr. Kerr and his employees followed the appropriate sterile technique in regards to the procedure he performed on Krystal Ballard.

He will explain that there are no absolutes with a sterile technique and that one can do everything right and still have situations where unwanted bacteria can become introduced into the surgical site, but that given the gram negative rods claimed to have been identified at autopsy, this is not what occurred in this case. He will discuss the patient's admission that she was not taking the narcotic pain medication Norco and was instead taking the non-narcotic drug Motrin which did not appear to be providing the patient with adequate pain control.

Dr. Laurence will render the opinion that the minimal amount of bruising and edema observed on July 23 was consistent with what he would expect to see at that point postoperatively. He will testify that the standard of practice did not require Dr. Kerr to obtain a complete blood count on the patient on July 23 in order to determine what her white count was at that time. He will discuss his background, training and experience in the use and regular implementation of the sterile technique in his practice in order to lay a foundation for his opinions as to the adequacy of Dr. Kerr's sterile technique. Dr. Laurence will discuss how liposuction and fat transfers are office based procedures which are not required to be performed in a hospital setting, nor are hospital privileges required in order to perform such procedures. Dr. Laurence will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr was not required, nor does the standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr, require that his facility be certified or approved by any accreditation facility such as the AAACH or AAAASF or any governmental agency.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Laurence will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr's procedure room was properly prepared for surgery and to protect and preserve an appropriate sterile field. He will discuss the autoclave at issue, how it operates and how it helps Dr. Kerr maintain a sterile field for his procedures. He will discuss the areas around the patient which are considered part of the sterile field depending on the nature and type of procedure at issue. He will discuss the operation and use of the Vaser ultrasonic lipolysis machine utilized for the procedure in this case. He will explain how the tumescent lidocaine is mixed, prepared and injected into the patient. He will explain how the Vaser procedure is done with the device in place under the skin without direct visualization. He will discuss how Dr. Kerr documented having harvested 400 cc of fat from the patient's anterior abdomen, 200 cc of fat from her right lateral waist flank and 200 cc of fat from the patient's left lateral waist flank. He will discuss how the Vaser in this case was utilized for less than eleven minutes and that this time was appropriate for the nature of the procedure.

As it relates to rebutting the testimony of the Plaintiff's experts, Dr. Laurence will explain how the fat was injected into the patient using only a needle and syringe and that there were no incisions made into the patient during the injection phase of the procedure. He will testify that it was proper and acceptable technique for the same needles to be used to inject the fat into both the left and right buttocks of the patient. He will discuss the adequacy of the informed consent discussion Dr. Kerr had with the patient including the content of the informed consent document signed by the patient in this case. He will discuss the risk of infection as being a specifically consented risk of the lipolysis and fat injection procedure. He will discuss how the consent form discusses with the patient both pre and post treatment instructions and how it warns the patient that if they fail to comply with these instructions may increase the possibility that the patient will develop complications.

Dr. Laurence will challenge the foundation as well as rebut the opinions of the expert witnesses listed by the Plaintiff. Regarding the issue of consent, he will testify that Dr. Kerr discussed with the patient the nature and the extent of the risks normally attendant to the procedure in question such that the giving of consent by the patient was valid in all respects. As part of his testimony, he may also discuss the adequacy of Dr. Kerr's preoperative clinical examination including evaluation of the regions to be lipo-contoured including review for hernias, scars, asymmetries, cellulite, stretch marks, the quality of the skin and its elasticity, the presence of stria and dimpling and the location of fat deposits. He will rebut any testimony by Plaintiff's experts that Dr. Kerr improperly performed the lipolysis procedure, the fat injection procedure, that Dr. Kerr improperly sterilized his equipment or that Dr. Kerr did anything to cause the patient's death.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Laurence may also address and explain the weight changes of Krystal Ballard. On July 23, 2010 she weighed 135 pounds. On July 25, 2010 at Elmore Medical Center she weighed 130 pounds. At autopsy on July 26, 2010 she weighed 180 pounds. He will explain the medical reasons and significance of these changes in weight. He may also comment upon the entries in the records from Elmore Medical Center for July 25, 2010, wherein the treating physician evaluated the buttocks and abdomen of Krystal Ballard and noted little induration of the skin and no redness, warmth or skin sensitivity and delayed the administration of IV antibiotics until 4 ½ hours after admission. At Elmore, cardiac ejection fraction was only 17% and at St. Alphonsus on July 25, 2010, central venous pressure was measured at 20 which is very high and proof of fluid overload. To the extent it relates to his opinions on causation, Dr. Laurence will explain these factors and their relative significance in terms of the possible reasons for the death of Krystal Ballard.

Dr. Laurence will testify that the laboratory data of Elmore Medical Center and the clinical findings are indicative of urinary tract infection the developed after his procedure of July 21, 2010 and if gram negative rods were in fact present at autopsy in certain locations, they came from the urinary tract of Krystal Ballard or her intestinal tract and were not introduced during his surgical procedure. As part of his testimony, it is expected that Dr. Laurence will explain pertinent anatomy, infectious processes, pathophysiology of infections, treatment for infections, gram negative rods, types of bacteria, reasons why the blood cultures and urine cultures were negative for growth, antibiotics used for the care and the comments of Krystal Ballard regarding that drugs would show up on drug test by the Air Force.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Laurence will discuss the patient's anatomy including the location of nerves, blood supply, adipose tissue, organs as well as the body's response to surgery, infection, pain medication and antibiotics. This may include extensive testimony by way of demonstrative exhibits depicting general anatomy and/or pictures of the patient and/or of the surgical equipment itself. Dr. Laurence will testify that even in hindsight the patient in this case did not present with any increased risk for infection that would have raised any concern about her undergoing the procedures on July 21, 2010. He will testify that at the time of Dr. Kerr's procedure on July 21, 2010, there was no evidence of a urinary tract infection of Krystal Ballard.

Data and other information considered and summary of qualifications: In forming his opinions, Dr. Laurence has relied upon his own unique training and experience as a licensed physician engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Tennessee in treating, diagnosing, managing and caring for patients like Krystal Ballard, his observations of the habits and practices of other cosmetic surgeons and care providers, his knowledge of the Boise, Idaho standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr in 2010 and his knowledge that it is within Dr. Kerr's specialty and capability to perform the procedures in question as part of his practice of medicine, and his membership and participation in various medical associations and organizations as set forth herein. The data upon which his opinions are based include his medical education, training, skill, experience, his experience practicing cosmetic surgery, his review of the care and treatment experiences with similar lipolysis and fat injection cases over the course of his career in medicine.

Dr. Laurence's opinions are also based upon the findings of various other health care providers for the patient, the results and values of various laboratory studies and other testing and observation, treatment plans, consultations, referrals and recommendations for treatment for the patient derived from such medical services and interactions before, during and after the care rendered by Dr. Kerr as described in all medical records, discovery responses and depositions taken. Dr. Laurence's professional background and qualifications are set forth in his attached curriculum vitae which is incorporated herein by reference.

As part of his review of this case, and for purposes of forming his opinions, he has considered and reviewed the depositions taken to date including Dr. Kerr's, employees of Silk Touch, and the Plaintiff's. He has also reviewed and considered Dr. Kerr's medical records, the records of Elmore Medical Center, Elmore Ambulance Service, Life Flight, St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, the Ada County Coroner's Office and the Plaintiff's expert witness disclosure. In the event further depositions or medical records are produced, they will also be considered.

Dr. Laurence reserves the right to rely as further support for his opinions on medical literature related to any of the subjects set forth in this disclosure as discovery continues. Dr. Laurence reserves the right not to offer all or any of the opinions set forth in this disclosure as it as an attorney prepared document and is intentionally worded broadly in order to comply with rule 26(b)(4). The ultimate testimony to be offered at trial will depend to an extent on what testimony is deemed necessary to refute the testimony of the Plaintiff and his experts consistent with the requirements of Idaho Code §6-1012. Plaintiff has the burden of proof and it is only after that burden has been met can the defense determine what evidence and testimony will be needed to respond.

3) Charles Garrison, M.D.
P.O. Box 4226
Pocatello, Idaho 83205
208.891.8505

Subject Matter: Facts of case, causation, damages and the care and treatment of Krystal Ballard.

Substance of facts and opinions held: Dr. Garrison is a physician licensed by the state of Idaho to practice medicine and surgery. Dr. Garrison has engaged in the medical specialty of forensic pathology at all times relevant herein which he practices in Pocatello and Boise, Idaho. Dr. Garrison will testify as a retained expert witness at the trial and his testimony will address the issue of the cause of the patient's death. Part of the basis for Dr. Garrison's opinions include: his background, training, research, practice and experience in performing forensic pathology and in determining disease processes as well as the cause of death of patients like Krystal Ballard as part of his regular practice of medicine.

Dr. Garrison will render opinions which refute and rebut the opinions, conclusions and methodology advanced by Plaintiff's experts including the opinions of George Nichols, M.D. and Keith Armitage, M.D. who claim that the bacterial infection which the patient died from was a direct result of bacteria introduced during the July 21, 2010 procedure and who further claim that the presence of gram negative rods are proof of a breach in sterility by the Defendants. The Plaintiffs' experts contend that the toxic shock and multisystem organ failure which the patient suffered from occurred as a result of contaminated equipment of the Defendants. Dr. Garrison, who has viewed and analyzed the medical and autopsy records as well as the tissue pathology slides from the post mortem examination, will refute these opinions at trial.

Dr. Garrison will render his opinions to a reasonable degree of medical certainty. Dr. Garrison's medical specialty, training, experience and knowledge enable him to render the opinions expressed in this document, which includes the subjects of bacteria, bacterial infections, virus, gram negative rods, types of bacteria that embrace gram negative rods, the presence and location of gram negative rods, sepsis, toxic shock, cause of death of patients from sepsis and toxic shock and bacteria that inhabit the skin, urinary tract and bowel. He will testify that the presence of gram negative bacteria in the wounds of Krystal Ballard, are by no means proof to a reasonable medical certainty, that a breach in sterility occurred in the surgical procedure. He will explain that although the patient's death involved gram negative sepsis, to contend as Plaintiffs' experts do, that the etiology of her sepsis was a primary infection of the wound which occurred as a result of a breach in sterility, is to ignore the medical facts of the case, and wound infections in general.

He will testify that for Plaintiffs' experts to state that there are no other reasons for Krystal Ballard's death other than as a direct result of bacteria introduced intraoperatively during the procedure as a result of contaminated equipment, is to ignore the process of postoperative wound infections, their etiology, the facts of this case, the patient's presenting symptoms and treatment course, how wounds are evaluated to determine the presence or absence of an infection and the routes by which they occur. In this regard, Dr. Garrison will explain post-operative wound infections and compare them to other infectious processes, including those associated with the patient's urinary track bacteria and abnormal urinalysis.

He will testify regarding how infections become septic. He will render the opinion that the sepsis which led to the septic shock and multi-system organ failure was caused by the patient's primary infection which was the urinary track, not any wound infection as alleged by Plaintiffs in this case. In this regard, he may also discuss the fluid retention and weight gain of the patient in the days prior to her death associated with her organ failure, but yet there was never any overt signs of the patient having any wound infection at the locations of the fat transfer or liposuction. The presence of gram negative bacteria in the surgical wound(s) of Krystal Ballard is simply proof of their presence, but by no means is it proof that they arrived there by or through the surgical procedure of Dr. Kerr.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Garrison will explain the difference between a primary versus a secondary infection and how it relates to the onset of sepsis in a patient like Krystal Ballard. He will render the opinion that the patient's sepsis and subsequent septic shock and death were not proximately caused by any bacteria introduced into the operative field during Dr. Kerr's July 21, 2010 liposuction and fat transfer procedure. He will testify that Dr. Nichols conclusions are not only medically flawed and inaccurate, but they fail to take into consideration any other diagnostic evaluation that might have been done to further define the etiology of the infection, and reach such a conclusion with proper and appropriate medical investigation.

He will testify that the most that can be said about the presence of gram negative bacteria allegedly found in the wounds of Krystal Ballard at autopsy is simply that it is proof of their presence at that location – which location cannot be determined for certainty since the tissue samples were not labeled as to precise location. He will testify that such a bacterial finding at autopsy is by no means definitive proof to a reasonable degree of medical certainty that the gram negative organism, whatever it was, arrived there by or through the surgical procedure performed by Dr. Kerr, nor does such a finding at autopsy establish that the patient's death was due to any breach in sterility or cleaning protocol of any of the equipment, instruments or facility within the Silk Touch Med Spa facility.

Dr. Garrison will testify that he would expect to see gram positive organisms populate the site of the operative wound if in fact the sepsis was due to a skin infection caused by a breach in sterility as alleged. He will explain how in this case the presence of the gram negative organisms represented a secondary process to the patient's ongoing urinary tract infection. In this regard, he will explain the process by which a urinary tract infection can lead to sepsis in a patient like Krystal Ballard. He will testify that he has not seen a circumstance wherein a gram negative rod resulted in sepsis, septic shock followed by the death of the patient.

He will testify that the autopsy conducted in this case did not identify any specific organism. He will discuss how in most cases of a postoperative surgical wound infection, that he generally observes signs and symptoms of infection due to a breach in sterility within two to three days of surgery which did not occur in this case. He will discuss how the evidence in this case demonstrates that both Dr. Groben, Dr. Kerr, the patient's husband and the patient prior to her death all describe a patient and an operative site which is not grossly infected at any time, even at autopsy. He will testify that the absence of evidence of any gross infection at the surgical site is wholly inconsistent with it having caused the patient's death as Plaintiffs' experts contend. In this regard, Dr. Garrison will discuss the cardinal signs of infection and how the patient presented without evidence of any fever and without evidence of any warmth, redness or drainage to the wound site. He will discuss and explain the significance of such a finding.

He will testify that there is nothing from the autopsy, the depositions, the medical records or the death of the patient which establish to any reasonable degree of medical certainty that there was any breach of sterility in this case. He will discuss the autopsy report including the fact that the tissue samples do not identify with any degree of specificity where they were taken from which further compounds the relevance of the finding of gram negative rods. He will testify that Plaintiffs' experts cannot state to any degree of medical certainty that the mere presence of gram negative organisms was in any way caused by, evidence of, or the result of a breach in sterility or cleaning protocol by any of the Defendants or their employees. In the opinion of Dr. Garrison, it is most probable, which means to a reasonable degree of medical certainty, that the gram negative bacteria came from the bowel or urinary tract of Krystal Ballard where they reside and that their presence was not due to their being introduced during the procedure by Dr. Kerr.

As further support for his opinions, he will discuss the significance of the fact that there were not any other postoperative infections reported or experienced by any patient who was seen at the Silk Touch Med Spa before or since this patient's procedure and how this is further evidence that the sterilization procedures at the facility were adequate to maintain a proper sterile field. As part of his testimony, he will discuss how the process of sterilization works and how bacteria are eliminated by various cleaning processes and how there is not just one approved way to maintain a sterile field. As part of his testimony, he may also discuss how different types of bacteria are susceptible to different cleaning techniques, temperature and/or antibiotics.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Garrison will discuss different types of bacteria, how bacteria multiply, how they react to different parts of the human body, where they normally live in the human body, how they are identified in various standard tests, how the body fights off and/or responds to and/or relies upon different types of bacteria, where various types of bacteria normally reside within and on the human body, how different kinds of gram negative bacteria organisms are known to reside within the human urinary tract and bowels as well as within fecal matter.

For purposes of explaining his testimony he is expected to discuss general anatomy including the location of nerves, blood supply, adipose tissue, organs as well as the body's response to surgery, infection, pain medication and antibiotics. He may discuss how antibiotics are able to travel throughout the body, how infection within certain types of tissue can be harder to treat depending on the vascularity of the area of the infection (such as treating localized infections in fatty tissue versus in muscle) and whether or not an infection is localized versus systemic. It is expected that Dr. Garrison will use during his testimony demonstrative exhibits depicting general anatomy and/or pictures of the patient and/or of the bacteria.

Data and other information considered and summary of qualifications: In forming his opinions, Dr. Garrison has relied upon his own unique training and experience as a licensed physician engaged in the medical specialty of forensic pathology, in evaluating laboratory results, tissue samples, autopsy records, consultations with other physicians and otherwise managing and identification of bacterial disease processes in patients like Krystal Ballard, his observations of the habits, customs and practice experiences of other forensic pathologists who address medical situations like those presented in this case, and his membership and participation in various medical associations, including those in the state of Idaho.

The data upon which his opinions are based include his medical education, training, skill, experience, his experience practicing forensic pathology, his review of the care and treatment of the patient by Dr. Kerr and others, and his review and consideration of the depositions and discovery responses taken and/or disclosed to date in this case. His opinions are also based upon the findings of various other health care providers for the patient, the results and values of various laboratory and infectious disease studies and other testing and observation, treatment plans, consultations, referrals and recommendations for treatment for the patient derived from such medical services and interactions before, during and after the care rendered by Dr. Kerr as described in all medical records, discovery responses and depositions taken. Dr. Garrison's professional background and qualifications are set forth in his attached curriculum vitae, which is hereby incorporated by reference.

As part of his review, he has had available to review and consider the medical records of Silk Touch Med Spa, Dr. Brian Kerr, the records of Elmore Medical Center, Elmore Ambulance Service, Life Flight, St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, the Ada County Coroner's Office and portions of the Plaintiff's expert witness disclosure. In the event further depositions or medical records are produced, they will also be made available to this witness for consideration.

Dr. Garrison reserves the right to rely as further support for his opinions on medical literature related to any of the subjects set forth in this disclosure as discovery continues. Dr. Garrison reserves the right not to offer all or any of the opinions set forth in this disclosure as it as an attorney prepared document and is intentionally worded broadly in order to comply with the law. The ultimate testimony to be offered at trial will depend to an extent on what testimony is deemed necessary to refute the testimony of the Plaintiff and his experts. Plaintiff has the burden of proof and it is only after that burden has been met can the defense determine what evidence and testimony will be needed to respond.

4) Thomas Coffman, M.D.
125 East Idaho, Suite 203
Boise, Idaho 83712

Subject Matter: Facts of case, causation, damages and the care and treatment of Krystal Ballard.

Substance of facts and opinions held: Dr. Coffman is a physician licensed by the state of Idaho to practice medicine and surgery. Dr. Coffman is engaged in the medical specialty of infectious disease at all times relevant herein which he practices in Boise, Idaho. Dr. Coffman will testify as a retained expert witness at the trial and his testimony will address the issue of the cause of the patient's death and the fact that death did not result from the events of the procedure of Dr. Kerr. Part of the basis for Dr. Coffman's opinions include: his background, training, research, practice and experience in infectious diseases and in determining disease and infectious processes as well as the cause of death of patients like Krystal Ballard as part of his regular practice of medicine.

Dr. Coffman will render opinions which refute and rebut the opinions, conclusions and methodology advanced by Plaintiff's experts including the opinions of George Nichols, M.D. and Keith Armitage, M.D. who claim that the bacterial infection which the patient died from was a direct result of bacteria introduced during the July 21, 2010 procedure and who further claim that the presence of gram negative rods are proof of a breach in sterility by the Defendants. The Plaintiffs' experts contend that the toxic shock and multisystem organ failure which the patient suffered from occurred as a result of contaminated equipment of the Defendants. Dr. Coffman, who has viewed and analyzed the medical and autopsy records as well as the tissue pathology slides from the post mortem examination, will refute these opinions at trial.

Counsel for the Defendants have requested access to blood samples, tissue samples and gram stained samples from the autopsy which are to be evaluated by Dr. Coffman and other defense experts, however, as of the writing of this disclosure, only the tissue sample slides have been produced by the Coroner's office. Arrangements are still being made and the defense is still waiting to receive both the gram stained slides and the blood samples for further evaluation and testing. As a result, Dr. Coffman is unable to complete his work on this matter thus far. The opinions of Dr. Coffman which are known thus far are set forth herein and it is expected that additional opinions will be supplemented once the missing materials identified above have been made available for review.

Dr. Coffman will render his opinions on a more probable than not basis which is to a reasonable degree of medical certainty. Dr. Coffman's medical specialty, training, experience and knowledge enable him to render the opinions expressed in this document, which includes the subjects of bacteria, bacterial infections, virus, tissue types, gram negative versus gram positive rods, types of bacteria that embrace gram negative and gram positive rods, the presence and location of gram negative versus gram positive rods and the methodologies for reviewing each, sepsis, toxic shock, cause of death of patients from sepsis and toxic shock and identification and type of bacteria that reside and inhabit the skin, urinary tract and bowel.

He will testify that Dr. Kerr was not required to test for spores or mold and that these issues have nothing to do with the case. Dr. Coffman will discuss other disease processes which are known to cause a rapid patient death such as occurred in this case. He will discuss how infections lead to sepsis and toxic shock. He will testify that based on his view of the tissue slides that he sees evidence of white blood cells which can be evidence of the reparative process following surgery. He will testify as to why he believes the blood cultures were negative as well as what the various components of a complete blood count mean to him as an expert in infectious disease.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Coffman will discuss where gram negative versus gram positive bacteria are known to reside in the body. He will testify that gram negative bacteria do not reside on or in the skin, but instead reside within the urinary tract and bowel. He will testify that even if gram negative bacteria were observed in any of the tissue samples that this does not rule out that the patient may well have had an ongoing infection in another area of her body such as her urinary tract.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Coffman will testify that he has substantial experience in identifying bacteria and other cellular structures and organisms in tissue samples obtained from the human body. He will testify that he is regularly called upon in his specialty in infectious disease to make such determinations and that he is capable of identifying the differences between a gram negative versus a gram positive bacteria on properly prepared slides as well as being able to further classify and define specific species of bacteria and other organisms and cellular structures within the human body.

Dr. Coffman will render the opinion that based on his review of the materials to date that any sepsis, toxic shock or other infectious process suffered by the patient was not caused by or in any way due to a lack of sterility or failure to properly clean and maintain the equipment and/or sterile field by Dr. Kerr and/or his office staff.

He will rebut the Plaintiffs' experts wherein they opine that there are no other reasons for Krystal Ballard's death other than as a direct result of bacteria introduced intraoperatively during the procedure as a result of contaminated equipment. In this regard, he will discuss the process of postoperative wound infections, their etiology, the facts of this case, the patient's presenting symptoms and treatment course, how wounds are evaluated to determine the presence or absence of an infection and the routes by which they occur. In this regard, Dr. Coffman will explain post-operative wound infections and compare them to other infectious processes to the extent not otherwise discussed by other defense experts.

He will testify regarding how various infections can lead to the condition known as sepsis. He will render the opinion that the sepsis which allegedly led to the septic shock and multi-system organ failure was caused by the patient's primary infection which was not a wound infection as alleged by Plaintiffs in this case. As part of his testimony, Dr. Coffman will explain the difference between a primary versus a secondary infection and how it relates to the onset of sepsis in a patient like Krystal Ballard. He will render the opinion that the patient's sepsis and subsequent septic shock and death cannot be blamed on Dr. Kerr's July 21, 2010 liposuction and fat transfer procedure.

He will testify that Dr. Nichols conclusions are not only medically flawed and inaccurate, but they fail to take into consideration any other diagnostic evaluation that might have been done to further define the etiology of the infection, and reach such a conclusion with proper and appropriate medical investigation. Even assuming arguendo as to the findings by Dr. Groben, Dr. Coffman will testify that the most that can be said about the presence of gram negative bacteria allegedly found in the wounds of Krystal Ballard at autopsy is simply that it is proof of their presence at that location – which location cannot be determined for certainty since the tissue samples were not labeled as to precise location.

Dr. Coffman will testify that such a bacterial finding at autopsy, is by no means definitive proof to a reasonable degree of medical certainty that the gram negative organism arrived there by or through the surgical procedure performed by Dr. Kerr, nor does such a finding at autopsy establish that the patient's death was due to any breach in sterility or cleaning protocol of any of the equipment, instruments or facility within the Silk Touch Med Spa facility.

Dr. Coffman will testify that he would expect to see gram positive organisms populate the site of the operative wound if in fact the patient's sepsis was due to a skin infection caused by a breach in sterility as alleged. Dr. Coffman will discuss and explain the process by which a urinary tract infection can lead to sepsis in a patient like Krystal Ballard. He will testify that he has not seen a circumstance wherein a gram negative rod resulted in sepsis, septic shock followed by the death of the patient. It is the opinion of Dr. Coffman that the infectious process of Krystal Ballard, as stated in the autopsy report, came from bacteria from her urinary tract or bowel that developed after the procedure of Dr. Kerr.

He will testify that the autopsy conducted in this case failed to identify any specific organism. He will discuss how the evidence in this case demonstrates that both Dr. Groben, Dr. Kerr, the patient's husband and the patient prior to her death all describe a patient and an operative site which was not grossly infected at any time. He will testify that the absence of evidence of any gross infection at the surgical site is inconsistent with such an alleged infection as having caused the patient's death as Plaintiffs' experts contend. In this regard, Dr. Coffman will discuss the cardinal signs of infection and how the patient presented without evidence of any fever and without evidence of any warmth, redness or drainage to the wound site. He will discuss and explain the significance of such a finding.

He will testify that there is nothing from the autopsy, the depositions, the medical records or the death of the patient which establish to any reasonable degree of medical certainty that there was any breach of sterility in this case and that the conclusions stated by the Plaintiff's experts on this topic are without a factual basis in the record. He will discuss the autopsy report, the photos, blood tests, tissue samples and gram staining. He will testify that Plaintiffs' experts cannot state to any degree of medical certainty that the mere presence of gram negative organisms were in any way the result of a breach in sterility or cleaning protocol by any of the Defendants or their employees. As further support for his opinions, he will discuss the significance of the fact that there were not any other postoperative infections reported or experienced by any patient who was seen at the Silk Touch Med Spa before or since this patient's procedure and how this is further evidence that the sterilization procedures at the facility were adequate to maintain a proper sterile field. He will render the opinion that for the patient to have suffered from an infection due to a breach in sterility caused by any failure in the cleaning and sanitizing protocol of the defendants, that one would expect to see substantial evidence of other contaminated equipment related postoperative infections which there are none of in this case.

From his unique perspective as an expert in infectious disease, as part of his testimony Dr. Coffman may also discuss the process of medical equipment sterilization and how bacteria are eliminated by various cleaning processes and how there is not just one approved way to maintain a sterile operative field. As part of his testimony, he may also discuss how different types of bacteria are susceptible to different cleaning techniques, temperature and/or antibiotics.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Coffman will be prepared to discuss different types of bacteria, how bacteria multiply, how they react to and survive in different parts of the human body, where they normally reside within the human body, how they are identified in various standard tests, how the body fights off, responds to and/or relies upon different types of bacteria, how different kinds of gram negative bacteria organisms are known to reside within the human urinary tract and bowels.

For purposes of explaining his testimony he is expected to discuss general anatomy including the location of nerves, blood supply, adipose tissue, organs as well as the body's response to surgery, infection, pain medication and antibiotics. He may discuss how antibiotics are able to travel throughout the body, how infection within certain types of tissue can be harder to treat depending on the vascularity of the area of the infection (such as treating localized infections confined to fatty tissue versus infections which are able to make their way into muscle and the blood stream) and whether or not an infection is localized versus systemic. It is expected that Dr. Coffman will use during his testimony demonstrative exhibits depicting general anatomy and/or pictures of the patient and/or of the bacteria.

Data and other information considered and summary of qualifications: In forming his opinions, Dr. Coffman has relied upon his own unique training and experience as a licensed physician engaged in the medical specialty of infectious disease in evaluating laboratory results, tissue samples, blood tests, gram staining, operating laboratory equipment, autopsy records and otherwise managing and identification of bacterial disease processes in patients like Krystal Ballard, his observations of the habits, customs and practice experiences of other infectious disease specialists who address medical situations like those presented in this case, and his membership and participation in various medical associations, including those in the state of Idaho.

The data upon which his opinions are based include his medical education, training, skill, experience, his experience practicing medicine in the area of infectious disease, his review of the care and treatment of the patient by Dr. Kerr and others, and his review and consideration of the depositions and discovery responses taken and/or disclosed to date in this case. His opinions are also based upon the findings of various other health care providers for the patient, the results and values of various laboratory and infectious disease studies and other testing and observation, treatment plans, consultations, referrals and recommendations for treatment for the patient derived from such medical services and interactions before, during and after the care rendered by Dr. Kerr as described in all medical records, discovery responses and depositions taken. Dr. Coffman's professional background and qualifications are set forth in his attached curriculum vitae, which is hereby incorporated by reference.

As part of his review, he has had available to review and consider the medical records of Silk Touch Med Spa, Dr. Brian Kerr, the records of Elmore Medical Center, Elmore Ambulance Service, Life Flight, St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, the Ada County Coroner's Office and portions of the Plaintiff's expert witness disclosure. In the event further depositions or medical records are produced, they will also be made available to this witness for consideration.

Dr. Coffman reserves the right to rely as further support for his opinions on medical literature related to any of the subjects set forth in this disclosure as discovery continues. Dr. Coffman reserves the right not to offer all or any of the opinions set forth in this disclosure as it as an attorney prepared document and is intentionally worded broadly in order to comply with the law. The ultimate testimony to be offered at trial will depend to an extent on what testimony is deemed necessary to refute the testimony of the Plaintiff and his experts. Plaintiff has the burden of proof and it is only after that burden has been met can the defense determine what evidence and testimony will be needed to respond.

5) Alan W. Frankle, Ph.D.
1491 Lewis Lane
Boise, Idaho 83712

Subject Matter: Damages and economic analysis.

Substance of Opinions and Expected Testimony: Dr. Frankle is an economist and retired professor from Boise State University. He has been an economist in Boise, Idaho, continuously from 1984 to the present. Dr. Frankle will respond to and rebut the opinions of the patient's economic expert, Cornelius Hofman. It is expected that Dr. Frankle will render opinions regarding discount rates and present value calculations regarding the patient's special damages claims. He may also testify regarding inflationary rates for annuities.

The economic report of Plaintiff's expert, Cornelius Hofman, was not produced until May 14 by means of the Plaintiff's second supplemental answers to the written interrogatories of the Defendants. By court order dated May 16, 2012, the Defendant's disclosure of experts shall be disclosed 60 days after the Plaintiff's disclosure of experts. It is impossible for Dr. Frankle to respond to and submit his opinions on the report of Mr. Hofman at this time and should the court allow Mr. Hofman to render testimony and opinions at trial over the objection of the defendants, the expert opinions of Dr. Frankle should not have to be disclosed until 60 days after May 14, 2013.

As a result, Defendants reserve the right to supplement the opinions of Dr. Frankle. As part of his opinions, however, he is expected to address the issue of consumption rates and how the Plaintiff has improperly calculated the decedent's rate of consumption in order to inflate claims for future lost wages. In this regard, he will address the permissible categories of damages eligible to the Plaintiff in this case, namely, the damages for wrongful death are measured by the support the Plaintiff as the surviving spouse would have received had the decedent lived. He will discuss the absence of any children in this case and that no support would have been provided by the decedent to support any children.

Dr. Frankle will also discuss the improper assumptions in earnings and the failure to consider other income and expense offsets which exist by virtue of both the Plaintiff and the decedent being members of the military. By law in Idaho, Plaintiff is not entitled to recover any amounts for loss of inheritance, loss of income or loss of accumulation which are deemed speculative, particularly here where in the decedent was only 27 years of age, had been married for less than four years and had been in the military for such a short period of time. Dr. Frankle will discuss the speculative nature of said damages and how these categories relate to the improper opinions advanced by Mr. Hofman.

Dr. Frankle is still in need of additional tax records for Charles Ballard and we currently have no tax records for Krystal Ballard despite the outstanding requests for these records. Dr. Frankle has further opinions he may render once being provided with these missing tax records as well as being able to comment on the fact that Mr. Hofman did not request or utilize such records when generating his report purporting to forecast the current and future losses of the Plaintiff.

Dr. Frankle will dispute the consumption rates relied upon by Mr. Hofman in the range of 24%. He will further testify Plaintiff has not produced a credible projection of earnings or anticipated promotions/advancements for either the Plaintiff or the decedent. For purposes of responding to the report of Mr. Hofman, Dr. Frankle has assumed a similar projection of earnings for both Charles and Krystal Ballard. He will discuss the absence of data and reports from the Air Force as to what track, if any, the decedent and Charles Ballard are/were on as respects aspirations for advancement, further promotions, raises in income, etc. Dr. Frankle will also comment upon the fact that Mr. Hofman has not produced item No. 39 relied upon as a basis for some of his opinions in his report.

Regarding the issue of loss of household services, Dr. Frankle will comment upon the lack of any documentation regarding what household services, if any, that the decedent provided in order to arrive at his conclusion.

There are additional issues which have not been addressed by Mr. Hofman including the fact that often the decedent and the Plaintiff were not living together and if they were it was often only half time. Mr. Hofman's report fails to factor this key component of household services.

Based on the limited information available, for the household services, one assumes each spouse spends 38% of the time on indivisible tasks, 31% on tasks for themselves and 31% on tasks for the other. Charles Ballard therefore only lost the 38% for services that were concerned with indivisible tasks. The 31% of tasks that the decedent did for the Plaintiff are therefore cancelled out because he is no longer having to do the 31% for the decedent. Thus his only potential household services loss is for those indivisible tasks she performed which they shared equally.

Underlying Facts and Data: Dr. Frankle will rely on his education, training and experience as an economist; the use and recognition of standard and accepted economic data, government reports, publications and authorities; his experience teaching economics and finance at Boise State University; his review of the economic loss report of the patient's experts and his assumptions and calculations for determining the annual costs for household services and lost wages associated with an individual like Krystal Ballard.

Dr. Frankle reserves the right to rely as further support for his opinions on recognized economic literature related to any of the subjects set forth in this disclosure. Additional materials which Dr. Frankle may ultimately review and consider for forming his opinions is unknown and reserved based on the foregoing. The Defendants have not received the income tax returns or documents that reflect the earnings of the decedent over the past several years even though they were requested of the Plaintiff to be produced several months ago. As a consequence, Dr. Frankle does not have this material showing the decedent's actual earnings which Dr. Frankle will utilize to further criticize the invalidity of Mr. Hofman's opinions. In the event Dr. Frankle is deposed his deposition testimony is hereby incorporated into this disclosure as if set forth in full.

Dr. Frankle reserves the right not to offer any of the opinions set forth herein as this disclosure is prepared with the assistance of counsel and is worded broadly in order to comply with the requirements of Rule 26(b)(4). The ultimate testimony to be offered at trial will depend entirely on what testimony is deemed necessary to refute the testimony of Plaintiffs and their experts. Plaintiff has the burden of proof and only after that burden has been met can the defense determine what evidence and testimony will be needed to respond.

Dr. Frankle's Curriculum Vitae setting forth his qualifications and prior publications is attached hereto and incorporated herein as if set forth in full.

6) John Lundeby, M.D., FACS, FAACS
Shape Cosmetic Surgery and Med Spa, PLLC
524 W. 6th Ave
Spokane, Washington 99204

Subject Matter: Facts of case, applicable standards of health care practice, causation, damages and the care and treatment of Krystal Ballard.

Substance of facts and opinions held: Dr. Lundeby is a physician licensed in the state of Idaho and Washington to practice medicine and surgery. Dr. Lundeby is board certified by the American Board of Surgery and the American Board of Cosmetic Surgery and has engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery at all times relevant herein. Dr. Lundeby will testify as a retained expert witness at the trial. Dr. Lundeby will testify that he has actual knowledge of the standard of health care practice applicable to physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise, Idaho in 2010 and that in his opinion Dr. Kerr met such standard taking into account Dr. Kerr's background, training, experience and field of medical specialization with respect to the medical treatment rendered to the patient.

Dr. Lundeby will explain the process he undertook in order to familiarize himself with the standards and practices in Boise and the surrounding area for the types of procedures and treatment performed by Dr. Kerr in this case. Part of the basis for Dr. Lundeby's opinions include: his background, training, research, practice and experience in performing cosmetic procedures as a licensed physician, his experiences in the peer review process associated with his hospital staff privileges at Kootenai Medical Center and Northwest Specialty Hospital, both in Idaho, his experience of having performed hundreds of cosmetic surgical procedures, his knowledge of how cosmetic procedures like liposuction and fat transfers were performed in Boise in 2010.

Dr. Lundeby will discuss his experience in performing a large volume of liposuction and fat transfer procedures, his knowledge of how the Vaser ultrasonic liposuction procedure is performed, how fat transfers/grafting procedures are performed, his knowledge of the types of equipment and instruments needed to perform the nature and types of cosmetic procedures at issue in this case, his knowledge of the scope of practice of cosmetic providers like Dr. Kerr in Boise, Idaho and elsewhere, and his knowledge of the types of medical providers who perform cosmetic procedures like the ones at issue in this case. As part of his testimony, Dr. Lundeby may also explain his training and experience at the University of Washington and the San Joaquin General Hospital in 1991-96.

Dr. Lundeby will testify that the infection rates described by Dr. Kerr in his deposition and discovery responses are well below average for a cosmetic facility and are essentially zero, with possibly one or two minor cellulitis cases that were easily treated successfully with no adverse consequences. He will comment upon how this is evidence that the sterility procedures employed by the Defendants in this case were adequate and working properly at the time of the surgery at issue in this case.

Dr. Lundeby will testify that during his professional career he has been acquainted with numerous physicians who perform cosmetic procedures that are not plastic surgeons, but rather come from a number of different medical backgrounds including: family practice, anesthesia, general surgery, dermatology and obstetrics and gynecology. He will discuss the training he has been provided in cosmetic surgery by various physicians who are not plastic surgeons. Dr. Lundeby has become acquainted with the nature and scope of the practice of these other cosmetic procedure providers and the procedures utilized by them in this specialty. Dr. Lundeby will explain that the standard of health care practice for plastic surgeons is not the standard of health care practice in the same medical specialty as his and Dr. Kerr.

Dr. Lundeby will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr had proper training and experience in order to perform the procedures at issue on Krystal Ballard. He will testify that Dr. Kerr did not need any residency in general or other surgical field in order to competently perform the liposuction and fat grafting procedures at issue in this case. As part of his testimony, he is expected to discuss the fact that he provided training to Dr. Kerr at his office in Spokane and that Dr. Lundeby has trained many physicians in performing a variety of cosmetic procedures.

He will testify that he has performed cosmetic surgery with Dr. Kerr and has witnessed his habits and customs in this regard in a surgical setting. Dr. Lundeby is expected to refer to the publications, data and documents referred to in his attached curriculum vitae. He is expected to discuss the numbers of similar procedures he has performed. Dr. Lundeby will explain that there was no requirement, per the standard of health care practice or otherwise, for Dr. Kerr's facility to be certified, inspected or approved by any organization or government agency, which included his autoclave, his clinic and the instruments he used for surgery and that his medical license allowed him to conduct his medical practice and the procedures he performed on Krystal Ballard.

During Dr. Lundeby's professional career he has received and provided specific training in various lipolysis procedures including traditional, laser assisted and ultrasonic assisted lipolysis. He will testify that he has reviewed the nature and degree of training obtained by Dr. Kerr and that in his opinion Dr. Kerr had adequate training and experience to perform the liposuction and fat transfer procedures on the patient at issue. Dr. Lundeby will testify regarding the significant experience he has in performing these types of procedures as part of his cosmetic practice. He will testify that it was appropriate for the procedures at issue to be performed on patients like Krystal Ballard in an office based setting without general anesthesia and that Dr. Kerr had proper facilities, equipment and personnel to do these procedures safely and within the applicable local standard of health care practice. Dr. Lundeby will testify that he possesses the professional knowledge and experience that allows him to express the opinion and testimony described in this document.

Dr. Lundeby will testify that the fact this patient died does not establish that the standard of practice was violated by Dr. Kerr. He will testify that postoperative infections, if that is what occurred in this case, are not proof of a violation in operative technique, patient selection or breach in sterility. He will render the opinion that based on the record in this case that to a reasonable degree of medical certainty the patient's death was not due to any error or omission on the part of Dr. Kerr or his practice.

Dr. Lundeby will testify regarding the significance of the fact that the procedures Dr. Kerr performed on patients the days following his procedure on Krystal Ballard, starting on July 23, 2010 through July 31, 2010 in which he utilized the same sterile and disinfection procedures he employed in his procedure on Krystal Ballard and there were no infections or infectious conditions with any of the patients. He will discuss how if there had been a failure to adequately sterilize the equipment in question that evidence of that should have shown up not only in all of the operative sites on this patient, but also in all of the operative sites of the subsequent patients which did not occur in this case. Dr. Lundeby will similarly discuss the significance of these same matters in regards to the multitude of procedures Dr. Kerr performed before the procedures performed on Krystal Ballard.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Lundeby will render the opinion that the surgical technique employed by Dr. Kerr during his liposuction and fat transfer procedures would not have caused or resulted in the introduction of any bacteria to the patient. Dr. Lundeby actually holds the opinions expressed in this document and will express all opinions stated herein on a more probable than not basis and/or to a reasonable degree of medical certainty. Dr. Lundeby will testify that the unfortunate death of Krystal Ballard was not and cannot be assumed or proven to be the result of violations of the standard of health care practice.

Dr. Lundeby will testify that the standard of health care practice applicable to physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise in 2010 is established by the local community of physicians engaged in this specialty and the way they typically practice in the community and not by any organization, academic center, publication, foreign physician, or by virtue of any specialty board certification. In this regard, Dr. Lundeby will testify regarding his various publications, honors, committee and university appointments as set forth in his curriculum vitae which is hereby incorporated as if set forth in full. He will also discuss his various society memberships which provide him with opportunities to expand his knowledge and networking base in the field of cosmetic surgery including his affiliations with the American Society for Laser Medicine and Surgery, the American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery, the National Society of Cosmetic Physicians, the American College of Surgeons and both the Idaho and American Medical Associations.

Dr. Lundeby will opine that the standard of health care practice is the care typically provided under similar circumstances by Boise physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise, Idaho in 2010. As part of his testimony, Dr. Lundeby will express and define the local standard of practice as it existed in Boise in 2010 with respect to the medical issues in this case consistent with this disclosure and any deposition which may subsequently be taken and which is hereby incorporated as if set forth in full. Dr. Lundeby holds the opinion and will discuss how compliance with the standard of practice does not guarantee a perfect result and its application and compliance is intended to minimize and hopefully largely reduce undesirable and unintended results. He will explain that the standard of healthcare practice for physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery is not perfect and the records and deposition testimony demonstrate and confirm that no perfect outcome was ever warranted or represented to this patient.

Dr. Lundeby will explain how the standard of practice applicable includes, as a major element, aspects of provider judgment as opposed to the application of science which may vary depending on the patient and care circumstances. He will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr provided appropriate post-operative instructions and properly followed the patient and communicated with her and her family. Dr. Lundeby will be prepared to testify about his experiences in this regard at trial and why Dr. Kerr's care in this case was consistent with the standards of practice he is held to. As with all operative procedures, the risk of infection is always a possibility and Dr. Lundeby will explain that post-operative infection, if it should develop, is an accepted and recognized risk factor that is not due to inappropriate care or violations of the standard of health care practice by the physician and that under the best of circumstances and medical care, infections can and do occur.

To the extent he is asked to address the issue of informed consent, Dr. Lundeby will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr gave appropriate advice and information to Krystal Ballard in regard to the risk, benefits and options prior to the procedure on July 21, 2010 which is documented in Dr. Kerr's medical records. Dr. Lundeby will explain that the surgical care by Dr. Kerr of Krystal Ballard is illustrative of, and in compliance with, the standard of health care practice, based on the class of health care provider to which Dr. Kerr belonged and in which capacity he was functioning. Dr. Lundeby will explain that the standard of health care practice provides that Dr. Kerr must be judged and evaluated in comparison with similarly trained and qualified physicians of the same class as himself, taking into account his training, experience and field of medical specialization and not by a plastic surgeon which Plaintiff is unfairly trying to do in this case.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Lundeby will discuss his training and the certifications he obtained in order to become a physician engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery as well as the adequacy and nature of those obtained by Dr. Kerr. He will discuss the care and treatment of the patient as outlined in the patient's medical records and he will discuss the appropriate nature, timing and content of Dr. Kerr's documented conversations and interactions with the patient and her husband. He will discuss the training classes he provides to physicians, like Dr. Kerr, regarding introduction to and advanced applications for liposuction procedures.

With respect to the fat injection procedure at issue, Dr. Lundeby will discuss and explain to the jury the medical basis upon which a person's own fat may be used to improve the appearance of the body by moving it from an area where it is less needed (usually the thighs or abdomen) to an area that has less tissue volume. He will explain how typically, the transferred fat results in an increase in volume of the body site being treated. He will explain how before the removal procedure begins the areas from where the fat is being removed are injected with a tumescent fluid which helps to minimize bruising and discomfort to the patient. He will explain how and why the adipose tissue or fat is freed and ultimately removed from the body via a cannula placed through a small incision in the patient's skin.

Dr. Lundeby will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr's facility did not need to be certified in order to operate in Idaho. He will testify that there is no evidence that Dr. Kerr went too deep and entered the abdominal cavity or otherwise impacted the bowel in any way so as to contaminate the operative field during the liposuction procedure. He will discuss the pain response a patient would be expected to give if the fascia were to have been impacted, particularly where the patient did not have any sedatives on board for the procedure.

Dr. Lundeby will discuss and describe how the adipose tissue is prepared to be re-injected back into the patient's body and strategically placed into the desired area using either a smaller cannula, or as was done in this case, a needle. He will discuss how the fat is deposited above the muscle and in some instances within portions of the muscle. He will discuss the skill in making injections with accompanies performing fat transfer procedures and that it takes a degree of artistic talent, but that it is not otherwise generally a technically challenging or physically taxing activity for a cosmetic surgeon to engage in.

He will render the opinion that the manner, method and volume by which Dr. Kerr re-injected the adipose tissue back into the patient was appropriate in all respects. He will explain how some of the fat that is transferred often does not maintain its volume over time, which is often addressed by the physician having to re-inject more adipose tissue into a specific location to achieve the desired end aesthetic result. He will explain how the fat transfer procedure was done using a local anesthetic and that this was consistent with the local standard of practice given the nature and extent of the procedure.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Lundeby will discuss the entries in Dr. Kerr's records including the first encounter with the patient on July 13, 2010, what treatment she desired, the fact that this was an elective procedure, that it was a purely cosmetic procedure, he will discuss the entries in patient's health history form, the general state of the patient's health and the absence of risk factors for infection preoperatively, the fact that she had previously had a liposuction procedure and desired further treatment of this type.

Dr. Lundeby will testify that the preoperative preparation of the patient utilizing Hibiclens and alcohol. He will discuss how physicians and hospitals use Hibiclens to cleanse patients as well as their own hands and exposed parts of their bodies before surgery to prevent the spread of bacteria, infection, or disease to patients. It is also used to cleanse wounds to prevent the spread of bacteria and infection. Dr. Lundeby will render the opinion that the skin preparation and surgical sterile technique for the surgery in using Hibiclens and alcohol were appropriate and good agents to use for that purpose.

To the extent it is relevant to his opinions, Dr. Lundeby will also discuss Dr. Kerr's operative report as well as an explanation of how the procedure was performed, the patient's vital signs and her clinical condition before and after the surgery as well as at the post-operative visit with the patient. He will discuss the adequacy of the Dr. Kerr's post-operative discussions, instructions and directions shared with the patient and then ultimately the discussions he had with patient's husband and aunt. Dr. Lundeby will explain that Krystal Ballard was in good health before the procedure on July 21, 2010 and there is no clinical evidence that she had a urinary tract infection and that the pre-operative work up of Dr. Kerr was within the standard of health care practice.

He may discuss the fact that sometimes patients will elect not to disclose health conditions to the physician which may impact the timing of an elective procedure. The reason for this nondisclosure is generally because they are concerned that the physician will cancel or postpone the procedure which may be inconvenient to a patient due to the fact that the patient desires to achieve a recovery by a specific date.

Dr. Lundeby will discuss the technical aspects of the Vaser liposuction procedure including how the local anesthetic is given, how the tumescent anesthetic is prepared and injected, what it does to the adipose tissue, how the Vaser device operates to liquefy the adipose tissue, how and where the cannulas are placed, the amount of energy applied to the device to effectuate the desired impact on the adipose tissue, and the amount of traction applied to free the adipose tissue. From his unique perspective as a cosmetic surgeon, Dr. Lundeby will explain the artistic nature of the liposuction procedure and the laborious aspect of moving the cannula back and forth in order to feather the tissue and achieve the desired aesthetic result which varies depending on the location of the procedure and the body habitus and surgical goals of each patient.

Dr. Lundeby will discuss how the patient never appeared infected or septic per the medical records and deposition testimony while she was seen by Dr. Kerr. He will discuss the expected localized pain patients can expect to experience following a fat transfer procedure. To the extent it becomes relevant to aid in expressing his favorable opinions, Dr. Lundeby may also discuss the cardinal signs of infection and how the patient did not have any fever or warmth to the surgical area, there was no oozing of pus or other signs of active drainage from the operative sites, and there was no swelling or signs of a rash or change in condition of the skin surrounding the area or abnormal odor. Dr. Lundeby will discuss his experience in caring for postoperative wounds and infections based on his long history of performing all manner of both cosmetic and general surgery. Dr. Lundeby will discuss the appropriate manner in which Dr. Kerr looked for and then properly documented the absence of signs and symptoms of infection during his postoperative visit on July 23 and in his subsequent discussions with the patient and her family prior to her death. He will testify that he concurs with Dr. Kerr that at no point did the patient present to Dr. Kerr as having an infection, nor did the standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr require him to refer the patient, prescribe a different course of medical care or obtain any further diagnostic testing than was done. He will testify that Dr. Kerr was not required to obtain any diagnostic tests before electing to perform surgery on July 21.

Consistent with his background and experience in medicine and surgery, Dr. Lundeby will discuss his knowledge of gram negative rods and the fact that such organisms do not exist on the skin, nor would they be found on surgical instruments following an appropriate cleansing through an autoclave. Instead, he will discuss how they represent a class of bacteria which reside in the urinary tract and bowels of a patient. He will testify that postoperative infections can and do occur even under ideal conditions which are not the subject malpractice, but rather as accepted complications which are impossible to prevent.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Lundeby will be prepared to explain the positioning of the patient, incision sites, pre and post-operative photos, patient behavior, choice of instruments, his artistic eye and attention to detail, management of patient expectations, and patient education and counseling from the informed consent phase through the postoperative follow up period. He is expected to utilize at trial various anatomical illustrations as well as various cannulas and related instrumentation for the procedures at issue including those depicted in the discovery photos of instruments and supplies produced to date.

In connection with describing his opinions and the basis therefore, Dr. Lundeby may be called upon to explain how Vaser Lipo involves a minimally invasive technique to selectively break apart and gently remove unwanted fat. He will explain how the targeted area is injected with a special saline solution known as tumescent fluid which numbs the target area and shrinks local blood vessels. This also temporarily expands the volume of the targeted area, making fat cells easier to remove. With the use of exemplars, he will demonstrate how small-diameter probes are then inserted into the body through small incisions. He will explain how by way of using a resonating high ultrasonic frequency, the probes literally shake loose fat cells — while leaving blood vessels, nerves and connective tissues unharmed. The loose fat cells mix with the tumescent fluid, which is then removed from the body using gentle suction. After the surgery, patients are prescribed a recovery regimen to promote maximum skin retraction, smoother results with minimal recovery time compared to traditional liposuction.

Dr. Lundeby may also discuss his knowledge of the history of tumescent technique liposuction which was started by dermatologists, not plastic surgeons. As part of his explanation of the surgery at issue, he will describe how the affected area is expected to drain postoperatively, the types of dressings placed on the affected area, the instructions given to the patient, he will discuss the cardinal signs of an infection and how Dr. Kerr's records and deposition evidence that he specifically and appropriately evaluated and questioned the patient and then documented in his records regarding these issues on each encounter he had with the patient. He will discuss the amount of time it takes to perform the procedures in question and that there was nothing usual or out of character regarding the amount of time it took Dr. Kerr to perform the procedures on July 21, 2010. He will testify that the records and deposition testimony document that Dr. Kerr is a caring, hands on physician who goes to great lengths to monitor and be available for his patients.

Dr. Lundeby will explain the adequacy of the postoperative evaluation Dr. Kerr undertook on July 23, 2010 for evaluating Krystal Ballard and assessing whether there was any clinical evidence of infection of the surgical sites, including absence of any abnormal odor or other evidence or suggestion of infection of any of the surgical sites. He will render the opinion that in order for Dr. Kerr to have infected the patient in some manner at the time the surgery was performed on July 21, that there would have to have been evidence of infection at the location of the surgery by the time of the autopsy or at Elmore Medical Center. He will testify that the absence of any evidence of infection at the injection or liposuction sites is proof to Dr. Lundeby that the patient was not infected during the surgery and that her death is due to some other cause.

He will discuss his review of the autopsy record and the patient's subsequent treatment records. By way of example, Dr. Lundeby is expected to discuss the hospital records from Elmore Medical Center and St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, including the laboratory reports showing the patient had 3+ bacteria in her urine. Based on his experience in general surgery, he will render the opinion that this laboratory finding is consistent with, and provides strong evidence of, an infectious process located within the patient's bladder or urinary tract. He will explain how the bladder is also an area wherein gram negative rod bacteria are known to populate and exist in the face of an infection. He will discuss the concept of how infections, like a urinary tract infection, can be spread hematogenously or via the blood stream.

Dr. Lundeby will also comment upon the significance from his perspective regarding how the patient did not present to Elmore Medical Center with any fever, but had a WBC count of 14.7. He will discuss causes for an elevated WBC count including surgery, stress and dehydration. He will comment upon the fact that the autopsy failed to address the patient's bladder or urinary tract (aside from the kidneys) or perform any microscopic examination of that organ to address the nature of the bacteria identified in the positive UA performed at Elmore Medical Center on July 25, 2010. He is also expected to discuss the patient's elevated creatinine and how this can be signs of dehydration as well as the evidence that the patient's kidneys were not functioning properly.

Dr. Lundeby will discuss how the patient presented to Elmore Medical Center with a blood gas pH of 6.99 and how this is dangerously low and provides strong evidence that the patient was extremely ill by that point and that she needlessly delayed seeking medical attention despite the urging and instruction of Dr. Kerr and his staff. He will testify that the patient's decision to delay returning for further care to either Dr. Kerr or the ER after July 23 is the reason she died and that if she had returned sooner that she more likely than not would have been saved. He will discuss how the cost of vanity and the patient's apparent unrelenting desire for secrecy resulted in her own tragic demise. He will discuss with the jury that it is not the physicians fault when the patient fails to do as they are instructed and return when their condition worsened as it clearly did long before this patient ultimately elected to seek medical help and was transported critically ill to Elmore Medical Center.

Dr. Lundeby will address the vague and confusing nature of the autopsy report wherein the pathologist at autopsy referred to an increase in the amount of acute inflammatory cells within tissue from the surgical sites, and how it is not clear which surgical sites he is referring to in his report. He will discuss how it is not clear where the tissue sections where harvested from on the patient. In this regard, Dr. Lundeby will discuss how there are commonly a variety of bacteria located near the surface normally of wound sites which is not evidence of an infection, but that the more important inquiry which would be more indicative of an infection is whether the gram negative rods were located within the deeper issues under the wound sites which cannot be determined from the autopsy documents in this case.

He will discuss the normal wound biology is to see evidence of bacteria on the surface. Dr. Lundeby will render the opinion, more likely than not, that the gram negative bacterial rods were introduced into the patient's surgical site sometime after Dr. Kerr's surgical procedure rather than being introduced during the procedure. Dr. Lundeby will render the opinion that based on his experience that gram negative rods do not result in the sudden and unexpected patient death such as occurred in this case. He will discuss the fact that the autopsy records eliminate embolism as a cause of death for this patient. Despite this finding at autopsy, he will testify that it would be extremely uncommon (outside of necrotizing fasciitis which attacks the soft tissue and the fascia or tissue covering the muscle and can cause rapid death) for an alleged soft tissue infection to spread, become septic and kill a patient within the limited time frame at issue in this case. In this regard, he will discuss how sepsis is a presumptive clinical diagnosis which is compounded in this case due to the absence of any positive blood cultures. Dr.

Lundeby is expected to offer testimony on several aspects of the autopsy report of Dr. Groben, starting with sepsis with probable toxic shock syndrome of unknown etiology and manner of death natural. His inspection of the incisions through the surgical sites reveal reparative changes, but no gross evidence of an infectious process. No pockets of pus or discolored fluid are seen. No evidence of erythema around the incisions sites. Subcutaneous fat and muscle of the abdominal wall, lower back and buttocks show no areas of necrosis or discoloration associated with reparative changes and no pockets of discolored fluid or pus. These autopsy findings are consistent with and support his opinion that bacteria were just introduced during the procedure of Dr. Kerr.

He will comment upon the significance of the finding by Dr. Kerr that when he saw the patient on July 23, two days post operatively, he did not observe any evidence of cellulitis or redness in the surgical site. He will discuss what it means to him as a physician that the patient repeatedly concealed this procedure from her husband, her employer and that she engaged in noncompliant behavior despite what she had been told both in writing and verbally about how to care for herself and what she agreed to do. He will discuss the challenging position the patient elected to place herself and her health care provider in by erroneously reporting to her husband that she had simply fallen and injured her back and falsely claimed this was the source of her pain rather than admit she had cosmetic surgery performed.

In this regard, he will discuss how the patient admitted she was not taking her medications because she did not want proof of them to show up in any drug screen she might take with the military. He will discuss that when a patient elects to disobey her health care provider that there is only so much the physician can do and that the patient is essentially interfering with and limiting the physician's ability to provide her with care and to make decisions which may have made a difference in her overall outcome. He will discuss concerns regarding whether the patient was properly changing her bandages and caring for herself as instructed and how during any of these times would have been an opportunity for the bacteria in question to be introduced into her system.

Dr. Lundeby will explain that there are no absolutes with a sterile technique and that one can do everything right and still have situations where unwanted bacteria can become introduced into the surgical site, but that given the gram negative rods claimed to have been identified at autopsy, this is not what occurred in this case. He will discuss the patient's admission that she was not taking the narcotic pain medication Norco and was instead taking the non-narcotic drug Motrin which did not appear to be providing the patient with adequate pain control.

Dr. Lundeby will render the opinion that the minimal amount of bruising and edema observed on July 23 was consistent with what he would expect to see at that point postoperatively. He will testify that the standard of practice did not require Dr. Kerr to obtain a urinalysis or complete blood count on the patient on July 23. Dr. Lundeby will discuss how liposuction and fat transfers are office based procedures which are not required to be performed in a hospital setting, nor are hospital privileges required in order to perform such procedures. Dr. Lundeby will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr was not required, nor does the standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr, require that his facility be certified or approved by any accreditation facility such as the AAACH or AAAASF or any governmental agency.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Lundeby will explain how the tumescent lidocaine is mixed, prepared and injected into the patient. He will explain how the Vaser procedure is done with the device in place under the skin without direct visualization. He will discuss how Dr. Kerr documented having harvested 400 cc of fat from the patient's anterior abdomen, 200 cc of fat from her right lateral waist flank and 200 cc of fat from the patient's left lateral waist flank. He will discuss how the Vaser in this case was utilized for less than eleven minutes and that this time was appropriate for the nature of the procedure.

As it relates to rebutting the testimony of the Plaintiff's experts, Dr. Lundeby will explain how the fat was injected into the patient using only a needle and syringe and that there were no incisions made into the patient during the injection phase of the procedure. He will testify that it was proper and acceptable technique for the same needles to be used to inject the fat into both the left and right buttocks of the patient. He will discuss the adequacy of the informed consent discussion Dr. Kerr had with the patient including the content of the informed consent document signed by the patient in this case. He will discuss the risk of infection as being a specifically consented risk of the lipolysis and fat injection procedure. He will discuss how the consent form discusses with the patient both pre and post treatment instructions and how it warns the patient that if they fail to comply with these instructions may increase the possibility that the patient will develop complications.

Dr. Lundeby will challenge the foundation as well as rebut the opinions of the expert witnesses listed by the Plaintiff. Regarding the issue of consent, he will testify that Dr. Kerr discussed with the patient the nature and the extent of the risks normally attendant to the procedure in question such that the giving of consent by the patient was valid in all respects. As part of his testimony, he may also discuss the adequacy of Dr. Kerr's preoperative clinical examination including evaluation of the regions to be lipo-contoured including review for hernias, scars, asymmetries, cellulite, stretch marks, the quality of the skin and its elasticity, the presence of stria and dimpling and the location of fat deposits. He will rebut any testimony by Plaintiff's experts that Dr. Kerr improperly performed the lipolysis procedure, the fat injection procedure, that Dr. Kerr did anything to cause the patient's death.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Lundeby may also address and explain the weight changes of Krystal Ballard. On July 23, 2010 she weighed 135 pounds. On July 25, 2010 at Elmore Medical Center she weighed 130 pounds. At autopsy on July 26, 2010 she weighed 180 pounds. He will explain the medical reasons and significance of these changes in weight. He will discuss the concept of third spacing of fluid or leaking of fluid out of cellular structures due to the body's global inflammatory response. He will discuss this in connection with efforts which were made to maintain fluid volume for the patient once she presented at the hospital. He will testify that a weight gain of 50 pounds due to efforts to maintain fluid volume in the face of the patient's condition would not be unexpected.

He may also comment upon the entries in the records from Elmore Medical Center for July 25, 2010, wherein the treating physician evaluated the buttocks and abdomen of Krystal Ballard and noted little induration of the skin and no redness, warmth or skin sensitivity and delayed the administration of IV antibiotics until 4 ½ hours after admission. At Elmore, cardiac ejection fraction was only 17% and at St. Alphonsus on July 25, 2010, central venous pressure was measured at 20 which is very high and proof of fluid overload. To the extent it relates to his opinions on causation, Dr. Lundeby will explain these factors and their relative significance in terms of the possible reasons for the death of Krystal Ballard.

Dr. Lundeby will testify that the laboratory data of Elmore Medical Center and the clinical findings are indicative of urinary tract infection that developed after the procedure of July 21, 2010 and if gram negative rods were in fact present at autopsy in certain locations, they were more likely to come from the urinary tract of Krystal Ballard or her intestinal tract and that they were not introduced during his surgical procedure. As part of his testimony, it is expected that Dr. Lundeby will explain pertinent anatomy, infectious processes, pathophysiology of infections, treatment for infections, gram negative rods, types of bacteria, reasons why the blood cultures and urine cultures were negative for growth in this case, antibiotics used for the care and the comments of Krystal Ballard regarding that drugs would show up on drug test by the Air Force.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Lundeby will discuss the patient's anatomy including the location of nerves, blood supply, adipose tissue, organs as well as the body's response to surgery, infection, pain medication and antibiotics. This may include extensive testimony by way of demonstrative exhibits depicting general anatomy and/or pictures of the patient and/or of the surgical equipment itself. Dr. Lundeby will testify that even in hindsight the patient in this case did not present with any increased risk for infection that would have raised any concern about her undergoing the procedures on July 21, 2010. He will testify that at the time of Dr. Kerr's procedure on July 21, 2010, there was no evidence of a urinary tract infection of Krystal Ballard.

Data and other information considered and summary of qualifications: In forming his opinions, Dr. Lundeby has relied upon his own unique training and experience as a licensed physician engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic and general surgery in Spokane, Washington in treating, diagnosing, managing and caring for elective procedure patients like Krystal Ballard, his observations of the habits and practices of other cosmetic surgeons and care providers and the way they perform the procedures at issue in this case, his knowledge of the Boise, Idaho standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr in 2010 and his knowledge that it is within Dr. Kerr's specialty and capability to perform the procedures in question as part of his practice of medicine, and his membership and participation in various medical associations and organizations as set forth herein. The data upon which his opinions are based include his medical education, training, skill, experience, his experience practicing cosmetic surgery, his review of the care and treatment experiences with similar lipolysis and fat injection cases over the course of his career in medicine.

Dr. Lundeby's opinions are also based upon the findings of various other health care providers for the patient, the results and values of various laboratory studies and other testing and observation, treatment plans, consultations, referrals and recommendations for treatment for the patient derived from such medical services and interactions before, during and after the care rendered by Dr. Kerr as described in all medical records, discovery responses and depositions taken. Dr. Lundeby's professional background and qualifications are set forth in his attached curriculum vitae which is incorporated herein by reference.

As part of his review of this case, and for purposes of forming his opinions, he has considered and reviewed the depositions of Dr. Kerr. He has also reviewed and considered Dr. Kerr's medical records, the records of Elmore Medical Center, Elmore Ambulance Service, Life Flight, St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, the Ada County Coroner's Office and the Plaintiff's expert witness disclosure. In the event further depositions or medical records are produced, they will also be considered.

Dr. Lundeby reserves the right to rely as further support for his opinions on medical literature related to any of the subjects set forth in this disclosure as discovery continues. Dr. Lundeby reserves the right not to offer all or any of the opinions set forth in this disclosure as it as an attorney prepared document and is intentionally worded broadly in order to comply with rule 26(b)(4). The ultimate testimony to be offered at trial will depend to an extent on what testimony is deemed necessary to refute the testimony of the Plaintiff and his experts.

7) Geoffrey Stiller, M.D.
Palouse Surgeons
2400 West A. Street Suite 101
Moscow, Idaho 83843
(208) 882-1778

Subject Matter: Facts of case, standards of health care practice, causation, and the care and treatment of Krystal Ballard.

Substance of facts known and opinions held: Dr. Stiller is a physician licensed in the state of Idaho to practice medicine and surgery. Dr. Stiller is board certified in both general and cosmetic surgery and has engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery at all times relevant herein. Dr. Stiller will testify as a retained expert witness at the trial. Dr. Stiller will testify that he has actual knowledge of the standard of health care practice applicable to physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise, Idaho in 2010 and that in his opinion, and based on his own unique background, that Dr. Kerr met such standard taking into account Dr. Kerr's background, training, experience and field of medical specialization with respect to any and all medical services rendered to the patient. Dr. Stiller actually holds the opinions expressed in this document and will express all opinions stated herein on a more probable than not basis and/or to a reasonable degree of medical certainty.

Dr. Stiller will explain the process he undertook in order to familiarize himself with the standards and practices in Boise and the surrounding area for the types of procedures and treatment performed by Dr. Kerr in this case. Part of the basis for Dr. Stiller's opinions include: his background, training, research, practice and experience in performing general and cosmetic surgical procedures as a licensed physician, his experiences in the peer review process associated with his hospital staff privileges in Idaho, his experience of having performed hundreds of cosmetic surgical procedures, his knowledge of how cosmetic procedures like liposuction and fat transfers are performed, including how they were performed in Boise in 2010, his experience in performing a large volume of liposuction and fat transfer procedures.

Dr. Stiller will explain his knowledge of how the Vaser ultrasonic liposuction procedure is performed, his knowledge of the types of equipment and instruments needed to perform the nature and types of cosmetic procedures at issue in this case, his knowledge of the scope of practice of cosmetic surgery providers like Dr. Kerr in Boise, Idaho and elsewhere, his knowledge of the types of medical providers who perform cosmetic procedures like the ones at issue in this case and his knowledge of the manner and method by which surgical equipment and surgical procedure facilities are maintained in a sterile fashion.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Stiller may also explain his training and experience at the Graduate Hospital in Philadelphia, Pennsylvania during his residency in general surgery 1997-2001 as it relates to sterile operating conditions for the procedures he performed, was taught and observed, including his role as chief resident. He will explain the same matters for his experience in his own surgical facility which he currently operates at Palouse Surgeons in both Pullman, Washington and Moscow, Idaho.

Dr. Stiller will discuss the standard of health care practice employed at his own facility in Moscow, Idaho for achieving and maintaining sterile operating conditions and the disinfection of instruments and equipment and maintaining a sterile operative field and that the similar actions and efforts undertaken by Dr. Kerr as have been described for the procedure on Krystal Ballard in this case were used and exceeded in his opinion. Dr. Stiller will testify that the infection rates described by Dr. Kerr in his deposition and discovery responses are well below average for a cosmetic facility and are essentially nil.

He will comment upon how this is evidence that the sterility procedures employed by the Defendants in this case were appropriate and working properly at the time of the surgery at issue in this case. Dr. Stiller will testify that during his professional career he has been acquainted with numerous physicians who perform cosmetic procedures that are not plastic surgeons, but rather come from a number of different medical backgrounds. He will discuss the training he has been provided in cosmetic surgery by various physicians who are not plastic surgeons.

He may also discuss his various publications and presentations on cosmetic surgery including liposuction and fat transfers as set forth in his attached curriculum vitae. Dr. Stiller will discuss how he has become acquainted with the nature and scope of practice he and other cosmetic surgical procedure providers utilize as well as the procedures utilized by them in this specialty, including the procedures utilized for maintaining a sterile field and how to properly clean and maintain the surgical equipment and instruments utilized for cosmetic surgical procedures including the procedures at issue in this case. He will testify that there is more than one way to achieve proper sterilization.

Dr. Stiller will explain that the standard of health care practice for a plastic surgeon is not the same standard of health care practice for someone in the same medical specialty as his and Dr. Kerr. Dr. Stiller will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr had proper training and experience in order to perform the procedures at issue on Krystal Ballard. As part of his testimony, he is expected to refer to the publications, data and documents that have been produced in discovery on this subject and explain the numbers of similar procedures he has performed.

Dr. Stiller will explain that there was no requirement, per the standard of health care practice or otherwise, for Dr. Kerr's facility to be certified, inspected or approved by any organization or government agency, which included his autoclave, his clinic and the instruments he used for surgery and that his medical license allowed him to conduct his medical practice and the procedures he performed on Krystal Ballard. During Dr. Stiller's professional career he has received specific training in various lipolysis procedures including traditional, laser assisted and ultrasonic assisted lipolysis. He will testify that he has reviewed the nature and degree of training obtained by Dr. Kerr and that in his opinion Dr. Kerr had adequate training and experience to perform the liposuction and fat transfer procedures on the patient at issue.

He will testify that it was appropriate for the procedures at issue to be performed on patients like Krystal Ballard in an office based setting without general anesthesia and that Dr. Kerr had proper facilities, equipment and personnel to do these procedures safely and within the applicable local standard of health care practice. Dr. Stiller will testify that he possesses the professional knowledge and experience that allows him to express the opinion and testimony described in this document.

Dr. Stiller will testify that the fact this patient experienced a post-operative complication like the one alleged in this case which resulted in a patient death does not establish that the standard of practice was violated by Dr. Kerr. He will testify that postoperative infections are not proof of a violation. He will render the opinion that the patient's death was not due to any error or omission on Dr. Kerr's part or the part of anyone associated with his practice. He will discuss his own sterilization techniques, training and experience in this area which will help support his opinion that Dr. Kerr employed the use of proper cleaning and sterilization techniques for his equipment and instruments and that he utilized proper procedures and supplies.

Dr. Stiller will testify regarding the significance of the fact that the procedures Dr. Kerr performed on patients the days following his procedure on Krystal Ballard, starting on July 23, 2010 through July 31, 2010 in which he utilized the same sterile and disinfection procedures he employed in his procedure on Krystal Ballard and there were no infections or infectious conditions with any of the patients. He will discuss how if there had been a failure to adequately sterilize the equipment in question that evidence of that should have shown up not only in all of the operative sites on this patient, but also in all of the operative sites of the subsequent patients which did not occur in this case. Dr. Stiller will similarly discuss the significance of these same matters in regards to the multitude of procedures Dr. Kerr performed before the procedures performed on Krystal Ballard.

Dr. Stiller will render the opinion that gram negative bacteria do not cause sepsis or toxic shock as alleged in this case. As part of his testimony, he will discuss the urinalysis obtained at Elmore Medical Center which revealed plus 3 bacteria, white and red blood cells, elevated white blood cell count with a left differential shift and ketones. As part of his testimony, Dr. Stiller will render the opinion that the surgical technique employed by Dr. Kerr during his liposuction and fat transfer procedures did not cause or result in the introduction of any bacteria to the patient. Dr. Stiller will testify regarding the specific issues set forth in this disclosure, but he will also testify globally that nothing Dr. Kerr elected to do or not do with respect to the medical services provided to Krystal Ballard in Boise in 2010 violated the applicable local standard of health care practice which in turn caused or contributed to any damages or injuries to the patient.

Dr. Stiller will be rendering his testimony based on his own unique perspective as a general and cosmetic surgeon and the training and practice experience he has received. Dr. Stiller will testify that the unfortunate death of Krystal Ballard was not and cannot be assumed to be the result of violations of the standard of health care practice. Dr. Stiller will testify that the standard of health care practice applicable to physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise in 2010 is established by the local community of physicians engaged in this specialty and the way they typically practice in the community and not by any organization, academic center, publication, foreign physician, or by virtue of any specialty board certification. In this regard, Dr. Stiller will testify regarding his various publications, honors and university appointments at the National Society of Cosmetic Physicians and the University of Washington School of Medicine WWAMI program as set forth in his curriculum vitae which is hereby incorporated as if set forth in full.

He will also discuss his various society memberships which provide him with opportunities to expand his knowledge and networking base in the field of cosmetic surgery including his affiliations with the American College of Surgeons, American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery and the Idaho Medical Association. He will discuss what these organizations offer their members and the opportunities to associate with colleagues and obtain continuing education in this emerging field.

Dr. Stiller will opine that the standard of health care practice is the care typically provided under similar circumstances by physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery in Boise, Idaho in 2010. As part of his testimony, Dr. Stiller will express and define the local standard of practice as it existed in Boise in 2010 with respect to the medical issues in this case consistent with this disclosure and any deposition which may subsequently be taken and which is hereby incorporated as if set forth in full. Dr. Stiller holds the opinion that compliance with the standard of practice does not guarantee a perfect result and its application and compliance is intended to minimize and hopefully largely reduce undesirable and unintended results.

He will explain that the standard of healthcare practice for physicians engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery is not perfect and the records and deposition testimony demonstrate and confirm that no perfect outcome was ever warranted or represented to this patient. Dr. Stiller will explain how the standard of practice applicable includes, as a major element, aspects of provider judgment as opposed to the application of science which may vary depending on the patient and care circumstances. He will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr provided appropriate post-operative instructions and properly followed the patient and communicated with her and her family. Dr. Stiller will testify about his experiences in this regard at trial and why Dr. Kerr's care in this case was consistent with the standards of practice to which he is held.

As with all operative procedures, the risk of infection is always a possibility and Dr. Stiller will discuss that post-operative infections, if they should develop, are an accepted and recognized risk factor that are usually not due to inappropriate care or violations of the standard of health care practice by the physician and that under the best of circumstances and medical care, infections can and do occur even under the best of care conditions. Dr. Stiller will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr gave appropriate advice and information to Krystal Ballard in regard to the risk, benefits and options prior to the procedure on July 21, 2010 which is documented in Dr. Kerr's medical records.

Dr. Stiller will explain that everything undertaken by Dr. Kerr with regard to his care and treatment of Krystal Ballard is illustrative of, and in compliance with, the standard of health care practice typically provided, based on the class of health care provider to which Dr. Kerr belonged and in which capacity he was functioning. Dr. Stiller will explain that the standard of health care practice provides that Dr. Kerr must be judged and evaluated in comparison with similarly trained and qualified physicians of the same class as himself, taking into account his training, experience and field of medical specialization and not by a plastic surgeon.

In order to support his opinions, Dr. Stiller is expected to discuss the training he obtained in order to become a physician engaged in the medical specialty of cosmetic surgery as well as the adequacy and nature of those obtained by Dr. Kerr. He will discuss the care and treatment of the patient as outlined in the patient's medical records and he will discuss the appropriate nature, timing and content of Dr. Kerr's documented conversations and interactions with the patient and her husband.

With respect to the fat injection procedure at issue, Dr. Stiller will discuss and explain to the jury the medical basis upon which a person's own fat may be used to improve the appearance of the body by moving it from an area where it is less needed (usually the thighs or abdomen) to an area that has less tissue volume. He will discuss his research and publications on this topic. He will explain how typically, the transferred fat results in an increase in volume of the body site being treated. He will explain how before the removal procedure begins the areas from where the fat is being removed are injected with a tumescent fluid which helps to minimize bruising and discomfort to the patient.

He will explain how and why the adipose tissue or fat is freed and ultimately removed from the body via a cannula placed through a small incision in the patient's skin. Dr. Stiller will discuss and describe how the adipose tissue is then prepared to be re-injected back into the patient's body and strategically placed into the desired area using either a smaller cannula, or as was done in this case, a needle. With use of demonstrative exhibits and various medical instruments, he will explain both the lipo and fat injection process to the jury. He will render the opinion that the manner, method and volume by which Dr. Kerr re-injected the adipose tissue back into the patient was appropriate in all respects.

Dr. Stiller will explain how some of the fat that is transferred often does not maintain its volume over time, which is often addressed by the physician having to re-inject more adipose tissue into a specific location to achieve the desired end aesthetic result. He will explain how the fat transfer procedure was done using a local anesthetic and that this was consistent with the local standard of practice given the nature and extent of the procedure.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Stiller will discuss the entries in Dr. Kerr's records including the first encounter with the patient on July 13, 2010, what treatment she desired, the fact that this was an elective procedure, that it was a purely cosmetic procedure, he will discuss the entries in patient's health history form, the general state of the patient's health and the absence of risk factors for infection preoperatively, the fact that she had previously had a liposuction procedure and desired further treatment of this type. To the extent it is relevant to his opinions, Dr. Stiller will also discuss Dr. Kerr's operative report as well as an explanation of how the procedure was performed, the patient's vital signs and her clinical condition before and after the surgery as well as at the post-operative visit with the patient.

He will discuss the adequacy of the Dr. Kerr's post-operative discussions, instructions and directions shared with the patient and then ultimately the discussions he had with patient's husband and aunt. Dr. Stiller will explain that Krystal Ballard was in good health before the procedure on July 21, 2010 and there is no clinical evidence that she had a urinary tract infection and that the pre-operative work up of Dr. Kerr was within the standard of health care practice. He will render the opinion that the patient developed an infectious process in her urinary tract after the procedures by Dr. Kerr which had nothing to do with the surgery or the sterilization procedures used by the Defendants in this case. In order to further illustrate his testimony to the jury, Dr. Stiller will discuss the technical aspects of the Vaser liposuction procedure including how the local anesthetic is given, how the tumescent anesthetic is prepared and injected, what it does to the adipose tissue, how the Vaser device operates to liquefy the adipose tissue, how and where the cannulas are placed, the amount of energy applied to the device to effectuate the desired impact on the adipose tissue, and the amount of traction applied to free the adipose tissue.

From his unique perspective as both a general and cosmetic surgeon, Dr. Stiller will explain the artistic nature of the liposuction procedure and the laborious aspect of moving the cannula back and forth in order to feather the tissue and achieve the desired aesthetic result which varies depending on the location of the procedure and the body habitus and surgical goals of each patient. In the process of providing his opinions that the care by Dr. Kerr was appropriate, Dr. Stiller will address the method by which the adipose tissue harvested was drained and prepared for re-injection. He will also discuss how the instruments and equipment are routinely cleaned and sterilized for each procedure, he will discuss these pieces of equipment as well as their various attachments and describe that medical equipment which is new versus that which must be re-sterilized for reuse between patients and/or procedures.

Dr. Stiller will discuss the appropriate nature of the pre and post-operative antibiotics administered by Dr. Kerr to the patient and explain why they were given not for an infection, but rather as a prophylaxis against infection. Dr. Stiller will render the opinion that the evidence in this case establishes that the patient never appeared infected or septic while being treated by Dr. Kerr. He will discuss the localized pain patients can expect to experience following a fat transfer procedure into the buttocks region.

Dr. Stiller will discuss the cardinal signs of infection and how the patient did not demonstrate having any fever or warmth to the surgical area, there was no oozing of pus or other signs of active drainage from the operative sites, and there was no swelling or signs of a rash or change in condition of the skin surrounding the area or abnormal odor when she was seen by Dr. Kerr and when she was seen at Elmore Medical Center the day before her death.

Dr. Stiller will discuss the appropriate manner in which Dr. Kerr looked for and then properly documented the absence of signs and symptoms of infection during his postoperative visit on July 23 and in his subsequent discussions with the patient and her husband prior to her death. He will testify that he concurs with Dr. Kerr that at no point did the patient present to Dr. Kerr as having an infection, toxic shock or sepsis, nor did the standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr require him to refer the patient, prescribe a different course of medical care or obtain any further diagnostic testing than was done. Consistent with his background and experience in medicine and surgery, Dr. Stiller will discuss his knowledge of various bacteria including gram negative rods and the fact that such organisms do not exist on or in the skin, nor would they be found on surgical instruments in the event of a breach in sterility. Instead, he will discuss how they represent a class of bacteria which reside in the urinary tract and bowels of a patient.

He will testify that Dr. Kerr had adequate training and experience to perform the surgeries in question, that Dr. Kerr's medical records contain an adequate description of the care rendered and the discussions with the patient, that Dr. Kerr implemented appropriate sterility techniques and conditions for surgery and that he used correct solutions for cleaning and disinfecting instruments and assuring that operative conditions were adequately sterile to guard against the risk of infection. He will testify that postoperative infections can and do occur even under ideal conditions which are not the subject malpractice, but rather as accepted complications which are impossible to prevent.

As part of his testimony and in order to expand upon his background and experience in cosmetic surgery, Dr. Stiller will discuss how the field of laser lipolysis with the use of tumescent anesthesia has developed in recent years. This may include testimony addressing that when considering different types of the body to undergo lipolysis that each area has its own unique geography and involves a degree of physician judgment as to how much material to remove and/or re-inject into each location. As part of his testimony, Dr. Stiller will be prepared to explain the positioning of the patient, incision sites for various injections and instruments, patient selection, choice of instrument sizes and positioning, his artistic eye and attention to detail, management of patient expectations, and patient education and counseling from the informed consent phase through the postoperative follow up period.

He is expected to utilize at trial various anatomical illustrations as well as various cannulas and related instrumentation for the procedures at issue including those depicted in the discovery photos of instruments and supplies produced to date. As part of his explanation of how the Vaser Lipo process works, he will describe it as a minimally invasive technique to selectively break apart and gently remove unwanted fat. He will explain how the targeted area is injected with a special saline solution known as tumescent fluid which numbs the target area and shrinks local blood vessels. This also temporarily expands the volume of the targeted area, making fat cells easier to remove. With the use of exemplars, he will demonstrate how small-diameter probes are then inserted into the body through small incisions.

He will explain how by way of using a resonating high ultrasonic frequency, the probes literally shake loose fat cells — while leaving blood vessels, nerves and connective tissues unharmed. The loose fat cells mix with the tumescent fluid, which is then removed from the body using gentle suction. After the surgery, patients are prescribed a recovery regimen to promote maximum skin retraction, smoother results with minimal recovery time compared to traditional liposuction which requires far greater traction and trauma to the surrounding anatomical structures.

Dr. Stiller may also discuss his knowledge of the history of tumescent technique liposuction which was started by dermatologists, not plastic surgeons. As part of his explanation of the surgery at issue, he will describe how the affected area is expected to drain postoperatively, the types of dressings placed on the affected area and the instructions given to the patient. He will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr's records and deposition testimony evidence that he appropriately evaluated and questioned the patient and then documented in his records these issues on each encounter he had with the patient.

He will discuss the amount of time it takes to perform the procedures in question and that there was nothing usual or out of character regarding the amount of time it took Dr. Kerr to perform the procedures on July 21, 2010. Dr. Stiller will explain the adequacy of the postoperative evaluation Dr. Kerr undertook on July 23, 2010 for evaluating Krystal Ballard and assessing whether there was any clinical evidence of infection of the surgical sites, including absence of any abnormal odor or other evidence or suggestion of infection of any of the surgical sites. He will discuss his review and comments of the autopsy record and the patient's subsequent treatment records. He will discuss the hospital records from Elmore Medical Center and St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center.

He will render the opinion that the laboratory data at Elmore Medical Center is consistent with, and provides strong evidence of, an infectious process located within the patient's bladder which occurred postoperatively and not located within the operative area of Dr. Kerr. He will explain how gram negative rod bacteria are known to populate and exist in the urinary tract. Dr. Stiller will also comment upon the significance from his perspective regarding how the patient did not present with any fever, but had a WBC count of 14.7. He will discuss causes for an elevated WBC count including surgery, stress and dehydration. He will comment upon the fact that the autopsy failed to address the patient's bladder or urinary tract (aside from the kidneys) or perform any microscopic examination of that organ to address the nature of the bacteria identified in the positive UA performed at Elmore Medical Center on July 25, 2010.

He is also expected to discuss the patient's elevated creatinine and how this can be signs of dehydration as well as the evidence that the patient's kidneys were not functioning properly. Dr. Stiller will address the confusing aspect of the autopsy report wherein the pathologist referred to an increase in the amount of acute inflammatory cells within tissue from the surgical sites, and how it is not clear which surgical sites he is referring to in his report. He will discuss how it is not clear where the tissue sections where actually harvested from the patient. Dr. Stiller will render the opinion that the gram negative rods were introduced into the patient's surgical site(s) sometime after Dr. Kerr's surgical procedure rather than being introduced during the procedure and that their introduction had nothing to do with the cleanliness and/or sterility of Dr. Kerr's facility and equipment.

He will comment upon the significance of the finding by Dr. Kerr that when he saw the patient on July 23, two days post operatively, he did not observe any evidence of cellulitis or redness in the surgical site. He will discuss what it means to him as a physician that the patient repeatedly concealed this procedure from her husband, her employer and that she engaged in noncompliant behavior despite what she had been told both in writing and verbally about how to care for herself and what she agreed to do. He will discuss the challenging position the patient placed herself in despite the advice and instruction of her health care provider by erroneously reporting to her husband that she had simply fallen and injured her back and falsely claimed this was the source of her pain rather than admit she had cosmetic surgery and needed help monitoring her care and condition.

In this regard, he will discuss how the patient admitted she was not taking her medications because she did not want proof of them to show up in any drug screen she might take with the military. He will discuss that when a patient elects to disobey her health care provider that there is only so much the physician can do and that the patient is essentially interfering with and limiting the physician's ability to provide her with care and to make decisions which may have made a difference in her overall outcome. He will discuss concerns regarding whether the patient was properly changing her bandages and caring for herself as instructed and how during any of these times would have been an opportunity for the bacteria in question to be introduced into her system.

Dr. Stiller will testify that Dr. Kerr and his employees followed the appropriate sterile technique in regards to the procedure performed on Krystal Ballard. He will explain that there are no absolutes with a sterile technique and that one can do everything right and still have situations where unwanted bacteria can become introduced into the surgical site, but that given the gram negative rods claimed to have been identified at autopsy, this is not what occurred in this case. Dr. Stiller will render the opinion that the minimal amount of bruising and edema observed on July 23 was consistent with what he would expect to see at that point postoperatively.

He will testify that the standard of practice did not require Dr. Kerr to obtain a complete blood count on the patient on July 23 in order to determine what her white count was at that time. Dr. Stiller will discuss his background, training and experience in the use and regular implementation of the sterile technique in his practice as further support for his opinions as to the adequacy of Dr. Kerr's sterile technique. Dr. Stiller will discuss how liposuction and fat transfers are office based procedures which are not required to be performed in a hospital setting, nor are hospital privileges required in order to perform such procedures. Dr. Stiller will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr was not required, nor does the standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr, require that his facility be certified or approved by any accreditation facility such as the AAACH or AAAASF or any governmental agency.

As part of his testimony, Dr. Stiller will render the opinion that Dr. Kerr's procedure room was properly prepared for surgery and to protect and preserve an appropriate sterile field and that he did not require additional rooms or locations to store and clean equipment. He will discuss the autoclave at issue, how it operates and how it helps Dr. Kerr maintain a sterile field for his procedures. He will discuss how an autoclave operates, how it is loaded, what is done to maintain an autoclave, how it is tested and that Dr. Kerr was not required to do more with his autoclave that he has described in this case.

Dr. Stiller will describe the areas around the patient which are considered part of the sterile field depending on the nature and type of procedure at issue. With respect to the lipo procedure in this case, he will explain how the tumescent lidocaine is mixed, prepared and injected into the patient. He will explain how the Vaser procedure is done with the device in place under the skin without direct visualization. He will discuss how Dr. Kerr documented having harvested 400 cc of fat from the patient's anterior abdomen, 200 cc of fat from her right lateral waist flank and 200 cc of fat from the patient's left lateral waist flank. He will testify that these were not excessive amounts and may comment upon the findings set forth at autopsy and in the autopsy photos demonstrating the areas of adipose tissue within the patient.

Dr. Stiller will discuss how the Vaser in this case was utilized for less than eleven minutes and that this time was appropriate for the nature of the procedure. As it relates to rebutting the testimony of the Plaintiff's experts, he will explain how the fat was injected into the patient using only a needle and syringe and that there were no incisions made into the patient during the injection phase of the procedure. He will testify that it was a proper and acceptable technique for the same needles to be used to inject the fat into both the left and right buttocks of the patient. Dr. Stiller will discuss the adequacy of the informed consent discussion Dr. Kerr had with the patient including the content of the informed consent document signed by the patient in this case. He will discuss the risk of infection as being a specifically consented risk of the lipolysis and fat injection procedure. As part of his testimony, and to the extent it is an issue at trial, Dr. Stiller will discuss how the consent form discusses with the patient both pre and post treatment instructions and how it warns the patient that if they fail to comply with these instructions may increase the possibility that the patient will develop complications. He may also discuss his experiences in discussing risks and benefits with patients and the fact that certain patients fail to follow the advice and instructions and end up with an unexpected and/or dissatisfactory result.

Dr. Stiller will challenge the foundation as well as rebut the opinions of the expert witnesses listed by the Plaintiff. Regarding the issue of consent, to the extent not covered by other witnesses, he will testify that Dr. Kerr discussed with the patient the nature and the extent of the risks normally attendant to the procedure in question such that the giving of consent by the patient was valid in all respects. As part of his testimony, he may also discuss the adequacy of Dr. Kerr's preoperative clinical examination including evaluation of the regions to be lipo-contoured including review for hernias, scars, asymmetries, cellulite, stretch marks, the quality of the skin and its elasticity, the presence of stria and dimpling and the location of fat deposits.

He will rebut any testimony by Plaintiff's experts that Dr. Kerr improperly performed the lipolysis procedure, the fat injection procedure, that Dr. Kerr improperly sterilized his equipment or that Dr. Kerr did anything to cause the patient's death. Based on his own unique surgical perspective, Dr. Stiller may also address and explain the significant documented weight changes of Krystal Ballard. On July 23, 2010 she weighed 135 pounds. On July 25, 2010 at Elmore Medical Center she weighed 130 pounds. At autopsy on July 26, 2010 she weighed 180 pounds. He will discuss the medical reasons and significance of these changes in weight as it relates to the issues of fluid overload and organ failure.

He may also comment upon the entries in the records from Elmore Medical Center for July 25, 2010, wherein the treating physician evaluated the buttocks and abdomen of Krystal Ballard and noted little induration of the skin and no redness, warmth or skin sensitivity and delayed the administration of IV antibiotics until 4 ½ hours after admission. He may also comment upon the findings at autopsy which documented no frank evidence of an infection as aptly depicted in the autopsy photos. He may further address and explain to the jury how at Elmore Medical Center the patient's cardiac ejection fraction was noted to be only 17% which is poor. In addition, later at St. Alphonsus on July 25, 2010, the patient's central venous pressure was measured at 20 which is very high and proof of fluid overload. To the extent it relates to his opinions on causation, Dr. Stiller will explain these factors and their relative significance in terms of the causes for the death of Krystal Ballard all of which have nothing to do with the care and treatment rendered by Dr. Kerr.

Dr. Stiller will testify that the laboratory data of Elmore Medical Center and the clinical findings are indicative of urinary tract infection the developed after his procedure of July 21, 2010 and if gram negative rods were in fact present at autopsy in certain locations, they more likely than not came from the urinary tract of Krystal Ballard or her intestinal tract and were not introduced during Dr. Kerr's surgical procedure. As part of his testimony, it is expected that Dr. Stiller will discuss and explain pertinent anatomy, infectious processes, pathophysiology of infections, treatment for infections, gram negative rods, types of bacteria, reasons why the blood cultures and urine cultures were negative for growth, antibiotics used for the care and the comments of Krystal Ballard regarding that drugs would show up on drug test by the Air Force.

It should be noted that in response to the Plaintiff's counsel's concern about the defense experts, Dr. Stiller will testify such that he avoids the presentation of needless cumulative testimony by tailoring his responses such as to avoid excessive duplication of other defense experts. As part of his testimony, Dr. Stiller may be called upon to discuss the patient's anatomy including the location of nerves, blood supply, adipose tissue, organs as well as the body's response to surgery, infection, pain medication and antibiotics. This may include extensive testimony by way of demonstrative exhibits depicting general anatomy and/or pictures of the patient and/or of the surgical equipment itself.

Dr. Stiller will testify that even in hindsight the patient in this case did not present with any increased risk for infection that would have raised any concern about her undergoing the procedures on July 21, 2010. He will testify that at the time of Dr. Kerr's procedure on July 21, 2010, there was no evidence of a urinary tract infection of Krystal Ballard.

Data and other information considered and summary of qualifications: In forming his opinions, Dr. Stiller has relied upon his own unique training and experience as a licensed physician engaged in the medical specialty of general and cosmetic surgery in Moscow, Idaho in consenting, diagnosing, treating, operating, managing, caring for and following up with patients like Krystal Ballard, his observations of the habits and practices of other cosmetic surgeons and care providers, his knowledge of the Boise, Idaho standard of practice applicable to Dr. Kerr in 2010 and his knowledge that it is within Dr. Kerr's specialty and capability to perform the procedures in question as part of his practice of medicine (regardless of the fact that Dr. Kerr also happens to be board certified in anesthesia), and his membership and participation in various medical associations and organizations as set forth herein.

The data upon which his opinions are based include his medical education, training, skill, experience, his experience practicing cosmetic surgery, his review of the care and treatment experiences with similar lipolysis and fat injection cases over the course of his career in medicine. Dr. Stiller's opinions are also based upon the findings of various other health care providers for the patient, the results and values of various laboratory studies and other testing and observation, treatment plans, consultations, referrals and recommendations for treatment for the patient derived from such medical services and interactions before, during and after the care rendered by Dr. Kerr as described in all medical records, discovery responses and depositions taken. Dr.

Stiller's professional background and qualifications are set forth in his attached curriculum vitae which is incorporated herein by reference.

As part of his review of this case, and for purposes of forming his opinions, he has considered and reviewed the depositions taken to date including Dr. Kerr's, employees of Silk Touch, and the Plaintiff's. He has also reviewed and considered Dr. Kerr's medical records, the records of Elmore Medical Center, Elmore Ambulance Service, Life Flight, St. Alphonsus Regional Medical Center, the Ada County Coroner's Office and the Plaintiff's expert witness disclosure. In the event further depositions or medical records are produced, they will also be considered.

Dr. Stiller reserves the right to rely as further support for his opinions on medical literature related to any of the subjects set forth in this disclosure as discovery continues. He reserves the right not to offer all or any of the opinions set forth in this disclosure as it as an attorney prepared document and is intentionally worded broadly in order to comply with rule 26(b)(4). The ultimate testimony to be offered at trial will depend to an extent on what testimony is deemed necessary to refute the testimony of the Plaintiff and his experts consistent with the requirements of Idaho Code §6-1012. Plaintiff has the burden of proof and it is only after that burden has been met can the defense determine what evidence and testimony will be needed to respond.

A Unique Method of Body Lifting After Massive Weight Loss

Geoffrey Stiller, MD, FACS; E. Antonio Mangubat, MD, FAACS; Wael Kouli, MD, FACS; Lisa Precht, MD

Introduction: The epidemic of obesity has provided a new cosmetic challenge in postbariatric body reconstruction. Traditionally, body lift procedures and circumferential liposuction have been used to address the excess skin and adiposity present after weight loss. After applying alveolar abdominoplasty principles to circumferential body lifts, we describe our experience of the first 24 lipo-circumferential body lift procedures performed as single-stage outpatient surgery.

Materials and Methods: Between October 2007 and August 2009, 24 patients underwent a total body lift using our lipo-circumferential body lift technique. The operative technique is described. Intraoperative and postoperative complications are compared with published series.

Results: All procedures were performed as a single-stage outpatient procedure. The last 20 patients did not receive postoperative drains. Seven patients underwent additional procedures performed in the same setting. No intraoperative or major postoperative complications occurred. Five patients (20.8%) had posterior wound dehiscence (<2 cm). Five patients (20.8%) had anterior wound dehiscence (<2 cm). Two patients (8.3%) had minor wound infection. Two patients (8.3%) had cellulitis. One patient (4.2%) had umbilical necrosis. An overall minor complication rate of 58% was reported.

Conclusions: Our technique of lipo-circumferential body lift is a safe and effective procedure to address the body contouring after massive weight loss in a single stage, outpatient procedure.

Since its inception in 1966, bariatric surgery has offered the greatest degree of sustained weight loss to the morbidly obese.[1] Weight loss of 50 kg or more is common, resulting in significant improvement in patient health but leaving body deformities due to loose hanging skin. Body contouring after massive weight loss has naturally grown in frequency. More than 52000 body contouring procedures were performed in postbariatric weight loss patients in 2003, and a 36% increase was estimated for 2004.[2]

Body contouring surgery is rapidly undergoing modification and refinement. The contour deformities resulting from massive weight loss create diverse and often unexpected changes that involve virtually every body part. Traditional panniculectomy is rapidly fading from the standard of care. With the increase in the number of successful weight loss patients comes an increased need and demand for refined contouring procedures in all regions of the body. No longer are patients and their physicians willing to accept a normal body mass index (BMI) with all its health benefits; their demand to look better and feel better is naturally increasing and presents several technical challenges for the cosmetic surgeon.

The abdominoplasty has been the mainstay of skin removal after weight loss; however, in postbariatric procedures, traditional abdominoplasty has limitations. Severe skin laxity affects the entire body; thus new methods were pioneered to deal with the circumferential skin excess, including belt lipectomy, buttock lift, and body lift.

A relatively new technique in body contouring, lipo-abdominoplasty, was first described in 2000 by Dr Avelar.[3] Since that time, the procedure has evolved, and several papers have described variations. The conventional operative approach to addressing excess skin employs flap elevation, vessel ligation, and limited liposuction. An additional procedure is often required for body sculpting after excess skin excision. Challenging the traditional paradigm, the technique of lipo-abdominoplasty uses aggressive liposuction that mobilizes the flap and minimizes the need for extensive flap dissection and vessel ligation and preserves the vascular supply.

With more than 200 000 bariatric procedures performed yearly in North America,[4] the increased number of bariatric surgery patients has fueled demand for cosmetic procedures after massive weight loss; abdominoplasty, mastopexy, and circumferential body lifts are more frequently performed to achieve optimal aesthetic results.

In published experience with body lift procedures, the average hospital stay is up to 5 days, with multiple patients requiring at least 1 unit of blood, and the length of drain placement ranges from 2 to 5 weeks.[5-7] This report highlights the important advantages of applying the lipo-abdominoplasty concept to the circumferential body lift. With this new technique, advantages include short operative times, the ability to perform the procedure safely in an outpatient setting, elimination of drains, and reduced recovery time.

Methods

Twenty-four patients underwent our new body lift procedure from October 2007 to August 2009. A retrospective review was performed to evaluate operative times, liposuction aspirate volume, and complications. Postoperative follow-up ranged from 1 month to 3 years.

The patient is marked in the preoperative holding area in the standing position. The patient is asked to wear a bathing suit or undergarment for the initial marking. After the borders of the undergarment are marked, it is removed. The midline is marked anteriorly and posteriorly. The level of the anterior superior iliac crest (AIC) is then marked laterally and posteriorly to mark the most superior aspect of the proposed incision. The lax skin of the buttock and lateral thighs is then pushed upward to achieve maximum movement of the skin superiorly to the level of the AIC, and a mark is left at that level of the respective anatomy. This marks the estimated position of the inferior borders of the posterior and lateral incisions, and symmetric lines are drawn on the opposite side.

The superior incision is estimated in a similar fashion by pulling the skin downward, and estimated superior incisions are determined and marked. We emphasize that these incisions are estimates, and that final and more precise borders will be determined intraoperatively.

Anterior incisions differ considerably from traditional abdominoplasty in that they do not converge laterally. Instead, they join their respective superior and inferior markings determined for the estimated posterior incisions. Beginning at the umbilicus, the most superior border of the incision is joined with lateral markings. The inferior border is estimated to be at the level of the mons pubis, with caudal limits of the inferior incision being 6 to 8 cm from the vulvar cleft.

Once the circumferential markings are completed, vertical meridians are marked bilaterally at the midclavicular line, the anterior and posterior axillary lines, and the posterior superior iliac spine. These serve to line up the points across which the superior and inferior flaps can be rejoined after skin excision is accomplished.

These marks are only estimates and will be adjusted intraoperatively to maximize skin excision without excessive tension, and to adjust the incision location to fall within the previously marked undergarment to maximize scar camouflage. Details of this adjustment are described later.

Finally, the areas of liposuction are marked, including the anterior and posterior torso, and often the lateral thighs.

Once the patient is brought to the operating room, deep venous thrombosis (DVT) and antibiotic prophylaxis are administered, and deep sedation is attained with general or epidural anesthesia. With the patient in a prone position, the posterior torso and buttocks are prepped and draped in a sterile fashion. Incisions are made within the area of the planned skin resection, and tumescent solution is infused into the operative areas. After a wait of at least 15 minutes to acquire vasoconstriction, liposuction is performed. In the areas to be excised, more aggressive liposuction is performed to debulk more fat.

When the posterior liposuction is completed, the previously marked skin incisions are assessed using towel clips to approximate the superior and inferior lines. Typically, more skin can be excised safely and the clips are adjusted to include more skin. Inferior and superior adjustments are then marked to achieve the best incisional symmetry and location. The clips are removed, and the final incision lines are drawn. This method provides an added measure of confidence that the wound can be easily closed with good location and symmetry.

The incision is made through the dermis with care taken to enter only the superficial subcutaneous layer while leaving Scarpa's layer intact. We believe that an intact Scarpa's fascia preserves lymphatic drainage and eliminates the need for drains.

The skin is then quickly avulsed off the fascia using blunt dissection. Bleeding is usually minimal and is easily controlled with suture ligation. Electrocautery is often unnecessary. Once the skin edges are reapproximated using towel clips, the superior flap is tacked inferiorly at the midline with a 0 polydioxanone suture (PDS) by suturing the superficial fascial system to the fascia above the sacrum. The wound is closed in layers using interrupted 3-0 Monocryl for the deep dermal layer and a running subcuticular with 3-0 Monocryl to reapproximate the skin.

After the skin flaps are excised and passed off the table, the patient is placed in a supine position and is prepped and draped in a sterile fashion. As with the posterior procedure, incisions are again made in the planned area of skin resection, and tumescent anesthesia is infiltrated while waiting the full 15 minutes needed to achieve vasoconstriction. Abdominal liposuction is performed above and below Scarpa's fascia until completed. Again, the infraumbilical area of planned excision is suctioned more aggressively to debulk the fat volume in preparation for the skin flap advancement.

Umbilicoplasty is accomplished by cutting an inverted omega-shaped incision around the umbilicus. Blunt periumbilical dissection is performed down to the anterior rectus fascia. The periumbilical skin is freed of surrounding attachments by blunt dissection. Through this circular periumbilical incision, all fibrous retaining ligaments are removed between the medial borders of the rectus from the umbilicus to the xiphoid process. Care is taken to avoid injuring any neurovascular structures from the rectus abdominus muscles to the overlying skin flap.

The planned superior and inferior incision lines are again tested by approximation with towel clips. Any adjustments are made to adequate tension, and new lines are drawn as described posteriorly. The incisions are made through the dermis. The skin is removed with blunt dissection, while leaving Scarpa's fascia intact. If any significant rectus diastasis is identified, Scarpa's fascia is separated in the midline and taken laterally to the area of diastasis. The diastasis is closed using towel clips. Beginning at the umbilicus, a running 0 PDS is used to close the fascial defect in a baseball fashion, and the incision line is imbricated using the same suture in the manner of a horizontal mattress stitch. Scarpa's fascia is closed over the diastasis repair using 3-0 Monocryl.

An Alice clamp is placed on the superior aspect of the umbilical stalk to be used as a marker. The skin is reapproximated using towel clips. The total superior and inferior excursion of the umbilicus is marked along the midline. Bisecting the distance of excursion determines the most appropriate umbilical position, and a heart shaped incision is made. The umbilicus is brought through this incision and is sutured in place. The skin incision is closed in 2 layers, as described posteriorly (see Figures 1 through 4 for before and after photos).

Results

Our variation of the lipo-circumferential body lift was developed in October 2007. Twenty-four patients have undergone this procedure on an outpatient basis, the first 4 of which had drains placed. The last 20 patients did not have drains. All procedures were performed by one of the first 2 authors.

Table 1 lists the comorbidities of the patients. The most common comorbidity was hypertension followed by history of bariatric surgery. The average preoperative BMI was 27.4. The average preoperative hematocrit was 38.8. The average postoperative hematocrit was 30 with a delta hematocrit of 22.7%. Three patients did not have postoperative hematocrits checked secondary to less than 1000 cm^3 of fat aspirated, as per our policy. None of the patients received blood transfusions.

The average operative time was 289 minutes. Seven patients had additional procedures performed at the same time, as shown in Table 2. The average liposuction

The average amount of liposuction aspirate was greater than 5000 mL total, with an average of 3316 mL supranatant fat aspirate. Although this does exceed the recommendations put forth by the American Society of Plastic Surgery,[14] it falls within the recommendations of the American Academy of Cosmetic Surgery.[15] Each patient was assessed preoperatively and intraoperatively regarding the safety of proceeding with the operation with this volume of liposuction.

Conclusion

Based on our initial results, we concluded that lipoabdominoplasty first described by Dr Avelar can be applied safely to the circumferential body lift. The safety of performing the procedure in an outpatient setting, eliminating the use of drains, and reducing the recovery period without adversely affecting operative times makes this procedure an ideal alternative to the traditional body lift.

17:00 1 first disclosure was the end of May.
17:01 2 Q. When were -- you're looking at your 17:01 3 computer. Were you E-mailed that disclosure?
17:01 4 A. Yes, sir.
17:01 5 Q. And would you agree with me that that 17:01 6 disclosure on your computer does not reflect fat
17:01 7 embolism as a pathological diagnosis?
17:01 8 A. That's correct.
17:01 9 Q. Were you ever given any subsequent 17:01 10 disclosures that Mr. Quane filed reflecting what 17:01 11 your opinions were?
17:01 12 A. The most recent one, which did not 17:01 13 have --
17:01 14 Q. What was the date of that?
17:01 15 A. I believe the date on that is about 17:01 16 September 19th, if I'm reading this correctly.
17:01 17 Q. All right. On September 19th, did the 17:01 18 disclosure reflect fat embolism as a pathological 17:02 19 diagnosis?
17:02 20 A. No, sir. It did not.
17:02 21 Q. Okay. Is it your testimony that some 17:02 22 time after September 19, you arrived at the 17:02 23 conclusion that Crystal Ballard had a fat
17:02 24 embolism?
17:02 25 A. No, sir. Prior to that.

17:02 Q. So on the September 19th disclosure, it does not reflect an opinion that you had already formed about fat embolism; is that accurate?

17:02 A. I had not formed that opinion as such. It was one of the thoughts that I had in my mind that I was trying to sort through, and that's why it was not discussed with Mr. Quane.

17:02 Q. So you've -- some time after September 19th, you have cemented an opinion that Crystal Ballard had a fat embolism?

17:03 A. That's correct, sir.

17:03 MR. HADDAD: We're going to mark this part of the deposition as being an unfair disclosure of new opinions not set forth in any type of disclosures beforehand, and certainly something I'm not prepared to ask about since it's not appeared in any disclosures of any experts in this case.

17:03 So let's go off -- well, let me ask you this: Jerry, how are we going to handle this? Because obviously, he holds an opinion you didn't set forth in his disclosures, you didn't give me forewarning on.

17:03 MR. QUANE: Well, I didn't know about it --

17:03 MR. HADDAD: It's best to deal with this

17:03 now that we're --
17:03 MR. QUANE: Let me explain this: I
17:03 didn't realize this until yesterday, the first time
17:03 Dr. Garrison told me.
17:03 You have chosen to depose him --
17:03 MR. HADDAD: So --
17:03 MR. QUANE: -- and -- and when you 17:03 decide to depose an expert, the areas you get into 17:03 constitute an automatic extension and 17:04 supplementation of a prior disclosure. And that's 17:04 the risk you take when you depose experts in Idaho.
17:04 And I did not know about this --
17:04 MR. HADDAD: Well, Doctor -- Mr. Quane,
17:04 I disagree because I --
17:04 MR. QUANE: Let me finish my --
17:04 MR. HADDAD: I simply asked him what 17:04 articles he looked at.
17:04 MR. QUANE: Well, you've gone into --
17:04 MR. HADDAD: Period. That's it.
17:04 MR. QUANE: -- why didn't I disclose his 17:04 opinion on this fat embolism previously in my 17:04 disclosures, and the answer is: I did not know
17:04 about it. Dr. Garrison did not tell me about it.
17:04 He told me for the first time yesterday when I met 17:04 with him, and it -- and that's the reason it hasn't

17:19 that.
17:19 Q. What?
17:19 A. I can't answer that specifically.
17:19 Q. Okay. You don't know which is better
17:19 for identifying a fat embolism, CT or chest film?
17:20 A. No, sir. I can't answer that.
17:20 Q. All right. Doctor, because I have no
17:20 idea what your opinions are, have you -- what are 17:20 your opinions in this case?
17:20 A. Well, I think she had a fat embolism, 17:20 but I also think that she -- 17:20 Q. Okay. How did that cause her to have an 17:20 infection?
17:20 A. You didn't let me finish.
17:20 Q. Doctor, I apologize. I'm hearing myself
17:20 and thinking you're ending because there's a lag 17:20 time, so it's not intentional. I apologize for 17:20 that.
17:20 A. My opinion is that the decedent had fat
17:20 embolism syndrome. She also most likely had sepsis
17:20 as well. She also had Systemic Inflammatory 17:21 Response Syndrome.
17:21 Q. Does Dr. Groben mention Systemic 17:21 Inflammatory Response Syndrome?
17:21 A. No.

Re: Ballard v. Kerr, et al.

Dear Mr. Jones:

In providing dates for experts, please provide dates within the deadlines set by the Court for completion of discovery. To the extent this proves impractical for any particular expert, we are willing to discuss conducting a deposition after the discovery deadline, provided that under no circumstances would such discovery effect the trial date.

We have previously raised with you your disclosure of multiple experts concerning the same subject matter. Specifically, you have disclosed five experts, including Dr. Kerr, in the area of cosmetic and plastic surgery. We are quite certain the Court will not permit you to present redundant expert testimony at trial. Accordingly, we ask that you identify no more than two experts in this field. In other words, tell us the experts you actually intend to call as your trial witnesses so we can avoid unnecessary depositions. If you are not willing to do this, we will seek appropriate relief from the Court.

Thank you for your attention to this matter.

Re: Ballard v. Kerr
Our File No. 1107/25-938

Dear Mr. Perrine:

I am writing in response to your letter of June 20th. Regarding the depositions of Drs. Garrison and Frankle, their availability in August is based solely on their limited schedules. I provided you with earlier dates for Dr. Frankle in June, but this was wisely deferred until you are able to produce the requested tax records. Please understand that we are not looking to change the trial date by having these depositions after the discovery deadline. We take the position that we provided you with complete expert witness disclosures in conformity with the requirements of discovery and it is your decision to take depositions that we believe will simply prove duplicative of these disclosures.

Regarding your claim that we have listed multiple experts on the same subject matter, we disagree with your characterization. Rule 403 speaks to the prohibition of presenting needlessly cumulative evidence. We are mindful of this rule and will not run afoul of it at trial. We have listed several experts from different specialties of medicine to testify on behalf of the Defendants. The fact that you elected to only list one expert does not mean that we should be so limited at trial. The jury is entitled to hear from different experts with different background who all agree that Dr. Kerr did not violate the applicable local standard of practice.

In the spirit of cooperation, we will agree to withdraw Dr. Wills as one of our experts. This eliminates the need to take his deposition. We do, however, intend to call all of our remaining experts at trial and will vigorously oppose any efforts to otherwise limit the number of defense expert witnesses. We do not have an excessive number and your decision to include Dr. Kerr in your numerical calculation is improper. You may consider this our effort to meet and confer and informally resolve this matter.

Very truly yours,

Terrence S. Jones

BOISE, IDAHO
Wednesday, July 10, 2013, 2:00 p.m.

THE COURT: I will take up Ballard versus Kerr. Okay. Wasn't it kind of early days to limit your witnesses?

MR. McKAY: I don't think so. And I'm intending to address that.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. McKAY: And I will start with that, if the court would like me to address that.

THE COURT: Okay. Just feel free.

MR. JONES: Your Honor, I didn't hear your inquiry. What was it?

THE COURT: I just said, isn't it kind of early days to be limiting witnesses?

MR. McKAY: Right, and I think that's a fair question, Your Honor. But this is an issue that's brought about by a discovery deadline that is about to expire at the end of this month.

THE COURT: Okay.

MR. McKAY: And given the fact that the defendants have disclosed what we assert are cumulative experts, we are now -- that we would like to depose, we have to, you know, basically chase around the country and the state and spend a bunch of money and depose these experts, who we submit should not be permitted to testify at trial, at least not all of these experts shouldn't be permitted.

And if the court were to look at the case of Edmunds versus Kraner -- it's a 2006 case, 142 Idaho 867 -- the Idaho Supreme Court addressed this very issue, and it's cited in our reply brief.

It's discussed by the defendants under supplemental brief, and what the court said, it's appropriate to consider this issue now at an early stage of the proceeding, because to do otherwise, you run the risk of running afoul of one of the central rules of civil procedure 1(A), that the focus of which is to bring about a fair, just, and inexpensive determination to these civil lawsuits.

So that's what this is. This is a -- of course, a medical malpractice lawsuit against a single physician and his clinic. We represent Staff Sergeant Charles Ballard, who is the husband and former spouse of Crystal Ballard, Staff Sergeant Crystal Ballard, who had a medical procedure performed on her by the defendant in this case. It was a liposuction. It was performed in July of 2010 at his clinic in Eagle, and at the time she was 27 years old, enlisted full-time, serving our country through the United States Air Force and was in excellent health, and within five days of that procedure, she died from an infection.

And what we assert in this lawsuit is she died because this defendant failed to follow a sterile technique. And we have timely disclosed an expert, Dean Sorensen -- Dr. Dean Sorensen, who is going to opine at trial that Dr. Kerr violated the applicable standard of care.

And in response to that disclosure, the defendants initially disclosed five experts who would testify that Dr. Kerr did not violate the standard of care.

So shortly after they made that disclosure, then they filed supplemental responses to -- they served supplemental responses to pending interrogatories, and they scaled that back from five to four.

They abandoned, apparently, an intention to call Dr. Wills. But they still intend to call at least four experts to testify on the exact same issue. And I say at least, because some of the other experts, if you looked at their 107-page expert disclosure, you would see even causation experts weigh into the issue of sterile technique in this case.

And so we brought this motion prior to the expiration of the discovery deadline to simply ask for the court's help to say, "Judge, will you rule at this stage of the proceeding that the defendant should not be permitted to call more than two experts on any single issue?"

It seems reasonable. This is a -- certainly a matter that is within the court's discretion. I mean, that's exactly what the Edmunds case says, and we think it also is supported by Rule 403.

There are considerations of undue delay, waste of time, presentation of cumulative evidence. I think that would be presented if the defendants in this case are allowed to parade in expert after expert to talk about this same issue, and that's not how trials operate.

You know, trials come down to the jury's consideration of qualitative evidence, not quantitative, and I think that's what's going on here, is the defendants either intend to present a duplicative quantitative evidence, or if they only intend to call a couple of these experts, and there is, you know, somewhat of a shell game going on while we are supposed to guess who are their real experts? And so that's the basis for the motion.

They oppose, of course, this motion. They argue that because these experts have different backgrounds, that that somehow would permit them to testify as to the -- on the same issue, and we submit that that is a distinction without a difference.

I mean, every expert, every physician has a different background to some degree, and what's at issue, the central issue in this case, is whether this single defendant, Dr. Kerr, violated the applicable standard of care.

And I understand, they are entitled to present expert testimony on this, and should they do that, they should be limited to calling no more than two experts on the issue. So that's our motion, Your Honor.

THE COURT: Okay.

Response?

8

MR. JONES: Thank you, Your Honor, Terry Jones appearing for Dr. Kerr. I have had the privilege of being before this court in some medical malpractice trials with my partner Jerry Quane many years ago.

This issue similarly came up at that time, and I have dealt with this issue in a number of other circumstances.

As an initial matter, the motion that was presented to the court was specifically under Rule 403. That's what the motion was based on. That's was what the memorandum was based on.

In the reply brief, now the recitation of the Edmunds case, appears we are now looking at Rule 16(D). So that's what prompted my supplemental response, which I hope the court will accept and consider.

With respect to the application of each of these rules, I think starting with Rule 403, our brief put forth, I think, a substantial amount of information on why at this particular juncture the presentation of three experts plus the defendant would not amount to the needless presentation of cumulative evidence.

It's not simply evidence that's cumulative. It's not simply evidence that's similar or duplicative. It's whether we are talking about bringing in 25 people to say the light was green. We are not seeking to do that in this case.

And I have attempted to provide this court, given the absence of substantial case authority in Idaho, with some fairly point -- on-point decisions, including the one that was just decided three months ago in New Jersey, where this specific issue was addressed on whether or not it was appropriate just to limit the number of experts to come up with a number.

One of the things that opposing counsel did not explain to the court -- and perhaps he will in rebuttal, or his reply -- is how did they come up with two? What's the magic number with two?

And it's -- what I understand they are seeking is, it's my client plus one, so it's really one expert witness is what they are seeking to limit it to, and I'm not aware of any case authority that they have tried to provide this court, nor any case authority that I found for purposes of opposing this motion for the court, where it said that there was some magic number that was acceptable.

Now, the Edmunds decision, if we want to turn to Rule 16(D) for a minute, first of all we have to view that case for what it stands for. The issue in Edmunds dealt with the appropriateness of affidavits of two experts submitted by the plaintiff in opposition to summary judgment, whether or not they were timely, and whether or not those could be submitted.

The court ruled in that case one of them was, one of them wasn't. That resolved the issue on whether summary judgment was proper. In dicta, the court went on to address this issue, which was novel, of the court concluding, "Well, this is only a 403 issue. I don't have the ability to get into it, because it's not a discovery issue. It's an evidentiary issue."

And the appellate court said, "No, no. I want to you understand, I want the district court to understand they have this ability, that is, an inherent ability, and Rule 16(D) is the impetus for that ability."

Now what was the issue that was of concern in Edmunds? That Saint Al's had listed 53 expert witnesses? Okay? Now, in that instance, we also didn't have a disclosure of all the opinions of each one of those expert witnesses.

In this case, we have not only the disclosure of who these witnesses are, but we have a complete 26(B)(4) disclosure that has been provided addressing the opinions as well as the foundation for the opinions.

Now, the concern has been raised that somehow these witnesses will be needlessly cumulative. What has to be kept in mind is, the fact that these doctors are prepared to come in and testify to this court that they don't believe Dr. Kerr violated the standard of practice applicable to him on a whole different panoply of issues, some of which will be similar, some of which will overlap, and some of which will not, the issue is not just the opinion that they don't believe there was a violation.

It's the why. Why do you have the opinion that he didn't violate the standard of practice? That's where there will be a broad variation in the opinions rendered by these experts.

Now, what also comes into play is the fact that the three standard of practice experts that the defense has disclosed, one of them is from out of state in Tennessee, where he has a family practice background.

One of them is Dr. Lundeby from Spokane. He has a general surgery background and also provides training to physicians who do cosmetic procedures like the one at issue, including training that he provided to Dr. Kerr.

The last one is Dr. Stiller, who is an Idaho physician. There is very few physicians in Idaho that do this procedure -- these types of procedures and consider themselves to be cosmetic surgical providers.

THE COURT: What's the basis for having a family physician from Tennessee?

MS. JONES: Because he is somebody that's not a plastic surgeon. The plaintiffs have proposed a plastic surgeon is the only one who can do this type of surgery, and that, therefore, since Dr. Kerr, who is an anesthesiologist, provided this type of surgery, that it was a violation for him to do so.

And one of the things that's unique about Dr. Lawrence, Greg Lawrence, is he has a cosmetic practice that's almost identical to the cosmetic practice that Dr. Kerr has. And the issue for him goes to, all right, tell us about your background, training, and experience, Dr. Lawrence, and why you believe you are qualified to render opinions and provide this type of care in your own practice when you don't have a surgical background.

That's what Dr. Sorensen says. He has a surgical background and, therefore, he is the one that dictates as a plastic surgeon.

THE COURT: Well, wouldn't your training physician from Spokane cover that area, too?

MS. JONES: But he has the surgical background. We want to be able to present to the jury someone who doesn't have a surgical background who does this type of surgery.

That's the difference. That's the reason for the three different doctors and the three different specialties that all are involved in the provision of cosmetic surgical care.

And so that's why we take the position, Your Honor -- No. 1, the argument is, well, we shouldn't have to go engage in discovery and take all these depositions.

Well, it's not 53 like it was in Edmunds and, more importantly, in Edmunds, they didn't know the opinions of those experts because the court's scheduling order didn't require the production of that information.

In this instance, we have responded not only to the court's scheduling order but to interrogatories. Well, we have set forth those opinions, the basis for the opinions, and the balance of the information required by Rule 26(B)(4).

It is the plaintiffs who have decided on their own that they want to take it another step and take those depositions. They don't have to take those depositions. They are saying they want to take those depositions.

And point of fact, Your Honor, on the defense side, most of what I do is medical malpractice. Probably less than 50 per cent of the time do we take depositions of the opposing parties' experts, specifically because if there is a Rule 26(B)(4) disclosure requirement in place or an expert witness disclosure deadline, whether it's by interrogatory or the court's scheduling order, that rule governs.

And we expect and believe that as litigants, we are entitled to rely on those disclosures in order to set forth the opinions. So to the extent the argument is made, "Well, we shouldn't have to spend the money, you don't have to spend that money. If you choose to do so, that's fine," but that shouldn't be used as a basis now, months before trial, to say that three standard of practice experts in a case involving a patient who died of suspicious circumstances where they have asked us for millions of dollars in damages -- this isn't a $50,000 car wreck case.

They want millions of dollars in damages -- that presenting three experts would be needlessly cumulative, or in violation of the court's discretion under Rule 16(D) to limit us.

We believe, and if the court has had a chance to look at a view of those decisions that I have provided attached to my affidavit of counsel, there is some very, I think, helpful discussion by way of the reported decisions that I would like the court to consider.

In particular, this recent decision from the New Jersey case that we cite, which is the McLean versus Liberty Health Systems decided in March of this year, the discussion on page 6 of that decision, "We hold now that the trial court erred in limiting experts to only one per side to each relevant field of medicine. In particular, on the critical issue of the deviation from accepted standards of medical care, the court's pretrial ruling was a mistake in exercise of its discretionary authority to control the presentation of evidence."

Now, the court goes on and talks about how important it is when the issue for which the limitation is sought goes to a very critical issue in the case.

Now, one of the points that was raised by opposing counsel during his argument, Your Honor, was that the defense would be parading witnesses, expert witnesses up, and that that wasn't appropriate.

However, the Idaho Legislature seems to disagree, because in passing Idaho Code Section 6-1012, they specifically require expert witnesses to put on the evidence.

So without the presentation of experts, not only can the plaintiff not make a prima facie case, but we can't put on a defense for our clients. So the Legislature has dictated -- and this is consistent in states across the nation -- that these medical malpractice cases do become a battle of experts, and that it is a question for the jury on the credibility of these experts, and whether or not they are experts that have adequate credentials, and are they professional witnesses?

Are these people that have valid opinions that should be relied upon by the individual members of the jury in forming their conclusions.

And so I can appreciate the argument of plaintiff's counsel trying to even the numbers out, but plaintiff's counsel had every opportunity to list more experts, had he or she wanted to. And certainly in cases where the liability is beyond question, I have seen many instances involving David Comstock, for example, where he's had no trouble getting multiple expert witnesses to support his opinion.

In addition here, they have three experts to cover the waterfront plus their damages people, so they have three on standard of practice and causation. We have a total of five experts on standard of practice and causation; three for standard of practice, two for causation.

The issues in this case, Your Honor, are very interesting. The jury is going to be fascinated by the medicine in this case. They are going to be fascinated because, obviously, we have a terrible outcome, where we have a patient that died.

But we have fascinating issues of medicine, insofar as we are trying to understand how the body responds to either urinary tract infections, to the seeding of bacteria allegedly from lack of sterility, which is the plaintiff's argument, to issues of how these procedures are performed.

There are a host of issues, in addition to which once the patient presented to the hospital and Moore Medical Center, there are all kinds of problems with her organs. Her various organ systems were shutting down in response to a septic shock condition.

All of this is going to be covered by various experts in various capacities, and it's critical to the defense position of presenting their case that we be allowed to present these witnesses that we have disclosed thus far.

Your Honor, that case is on page 6. Most of what you see there, they talk about the bottom paragraph on page 6 of that decision.

"We see no reason that expert testimony should be treated wholly different from factual testimony with respect to vital opinions that go to the heart of the disputed issues in this case.

That's on point, Your Honor, with this issue I'm trying to address as to the limited number that we have here is not anywhere near on par with what was addressed in the Edmunds decision, and we think that it's distinguishable in that not only was that portion of the decision dicta, but in addition to that, the factual distinguishing issues in this case are substantial.

And while we recognize the court has that inherent authority from a discretionary standpoint, we don't believe the evidence justifies the court exercising that discretion to grant the plaintiff's motion at this time and would request that the court deny the motion.

THE COURT: Response?

MR. McKAY: Thank you, Your Honor. I know defense counsel says we don't have to take a deposition, and I certainly would not presume to tell an experienced practitioner like Mr. Jones how to practice or defend his cases, but we have chosen to take the depositions, and the rules allow us to take depositions of experts.

20

We want to hear what they have to say, we want to take their measure, and so we want to take the depositions of the defendant's trial experts.

And in Edmunds case, it wasn't 53 experts. What the defense made clear on appeal was the 53 witnesses that were disclosed included 50-some providers, treating providers, and that there were actually just three experts that they were intending to call at trial.

And I don't think it's necessary for the court to look beyond Idaho for authority which answers this question. And I'm looking at Edmunds now, which reads, "We have long recognized that courts have broad inherent power to control discovery," and they cite a Bailey case. And then --

THE COURT: Well, I certainly agree that that's true.

inherent authority to limit the number of expert witnesses during discovery. And then they cite a Hansen case out of Nevada finding no abuse of discretion where a district court disallowed three expert witnesses prior to trial.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. McKAY: And so two is a reasonable number. If something were to happen to one of their experts, they would have another expert. Or if they choose to call their client, the defendant Dr. Kerr, they can then call another expert.

The problem is, they are seeking to call the same -- they are seeking to call experts on the exact same issues, and they shouldn't be permitted to do that.

It runs afoul of Rule 403, it runs afoul of Rule 1(A), and it runs afoul of the discovery rule, Rule 16, and so for that reason, we have asked the court to limit their abilities to call cumulative experts.

And Edmunds was not dicta, as the defense argued in their supplemental motion. And we don't quarrel with them having filed a supplemental motion or brief. I know the rules don't address that. But we cited Edmunds in our reply brief because they argued that this is premature, that the court shouldn't -- the very question the court started with, you know, why should I consider this now?

Well, because Edmunds says you should, and that's what they argue, that you should not, and so we cite Edmunds for that reason.

So I think it's appropriate for the court to consider that decision, and in fairness, their supplemental brief, but it's not dicta. It says what it says, and it says it for a reason.

THE COURT: Well, and I agree entirely that the court has the power to limit the number of expert witnesses in any case after exercising that discretion with consideration of all the factors that the court should consider.

I don't think that -- the problem I see with the 403 early is that the overriding purpose of the rule is to make sure that all proceedings are just and that each side has a fair opportunity to fully develop their positions with the ultimate factfinders so that all cases should be justly and speedily tried.

And I have no problem in a situation where there is an abusive number of witnesses, expert witnesses laid out, where it's pretty clear from what you are seeing in the case that there is a lot of hide the ball going on, and there is a level of gamesmanship that's basically designed to put one party out of court because the expense is so enormous, and I don't think the court should countenance that.

I think that to allow parties to set an extraordinary number of experts and then to play hide the ball with which one is actually going to be the trial expert, I think the court should look carefully and deeply at those cases, and I think courts can and should limit experts in some instances.

The problem I have with this particular motion is I don't think, No. 1, that a court should get into just keeping parity between the numbers of witnesses on both sides.

I think that's too crude an approach, and I think it's so crude that it lends itself to unfairness, so I don't think it would be reasonable for a court to say, "Well, you can have one witness on one issue, and you can have one witness on the other side of that issue."

I don't think that in and of itself is a wise approach.

But I do think that anyone who has tried cases faces situations where testimony is quite cumulative, and the court has a responsibility to the jury to limit cumulative testimony, because it's simply not a good use of their time.

The level of hostility that juries frequently demonstrate when that's going on tends to be highly damaging to the case for whoever is doing it. And for many reasons, it's a good idea for a court to be responsive to objections that testimony is becoming cumulative, or it's misleading, or it's creating a situation where there is undue consumption of time.

I think courts have to be responsive to those objections and deal with it, and it's a matter of treating the jurors with respect and making sure that they are not so flooded with irrelevant or repetitive information that they lose sight of what's important in that case.

So I have no problem with the fact that the court has considerable power in that range. I do have -- it does seem to me, though, that this is not an unreasonable number of witnesses to address the particular issues presented by this case, and it seems to me that the more prudent approach might be to consider the approach on Idaho Rule of Civil Procedure 26(B)(4), Subsection C, which is to allow discovery to go forward -- because I don't think that having three additional witnesses is an enormous burden on discovery, and to apportion the fees somewhat differently for that reason.

For example, it does seem to be for the witness from Tennessee, it might be reasonable, and I would apportion the fees to that deposition differently, because geographically that's going to present some challenges, and there may be some logistical issues with that.

So what I would rather do in this particular case is allow you to go forward, to give you some additional time in case the setting of this motion has put you too close to your cutoff, to give you some additional time so you can arrange the depositions of these witnesses, and I may -- I'm inclined to require that the defense, at least initially, carry at least half the fees for the Tennessee witness, because it seems to me it's a family physician, a little bit farther out.

I think counsel's arguments are counterweight to the concern that maybe that's an unnecessary witness. It seems to me that counsel makes some good reasons why that could be a useful witness, but it does present logistical challenges, and it seems to me it might be more reasonable to deal with that by apportionment of fees differently.

MS. JONES: Your Honor, with respect to that issue -- I'm sure Mr. McKay was going to say this as well -- lead counsel for the plaintiffs is actually in Alabama.

THE COURT: Oh, well, then that should be way simpler. I still might require some apportionment of the fees for the farthest geographical witnesses, also in a different specialty. He is a family physician.

Seems to me it makes a great deal of sense to have that witness from Spokane because he has very relevant experience. You have a local witness. There are many reasons why that's a good choice.

And so it seems to me it's the family physician in Tennessee who's really the one who raises a question mark beside his name, and it seems to me that apportioning the fees and giving him some flexibility on your discovery deadline might be the better way to adjust for that if you need it, because I think to bar it altogether at a discovery stage is a big step.

I wouldn't have any problem when you are talking about loads of witnesses, because I have certainly seen the fall of Carthage approach to litigation, and I think courts have an absolute affirmative duty to make sure that doesn't go on. But this doesn't seem to me to be that unreasonable so that the court should completely bar it.

So I'm not going to limit the experts, but I will give you flexibility on your scheduling, and I will also require that there be an apportionment of the fees so that the entire cost of that deposition isn't placed on the plaintiffs.

MR. McKAY: I understand, Your Honor, and I just want to be -- make sure I understand.

THE COURT: Now, that's not precluding you from objecting at trial to testimony being cumulative, because it seems to me that there is a risk of that, and I don't think three extra witnesses because you already expect the doctor to cover -- stick up for himself -- I don't think three extra witnesses is one of those deals where you are worried that the jury is going to see that this side of the teeter totter has more people on it than this side.

But -- and that can be dealt with in an instruction, but I think it could be a real problem -- I certainly think it could be a potential problem, and I have no problem with considering the objection at that time.

MR. McKAY: Right. And I think this court should anticipate that we will be making that objection.

THE COURT: You bet. Right. I will anticipate that right now.

MR. McKAY: Right, right and, of course, the statute that Mr. Jones cites, Idaho Code 6-1012, I mean, it defines the standard of care, and it's not that, you know, the fact that these physicians come from different backgrounds. It doesn't permit them to then say the standard of care is different.

THE COURT: Still they have more hoops to get through.

MR. McKAY: Right, right. And so -- but the operative question is going to be whether they have the opinion that he violated or did not violate the standard of care applicable to him, and so if there is this parade of experts saying the exact same thing, we submit that it will be cumulative.

And I respect the court's ruling. I just want to be clear, we plan to, you know, front this issue at trial.

THE COURT: Oh, I expect you will.

MR. McKAY: Okay.

THE COURT: And, frankly, I'm never opposed to people pursuing that where it's warranted, because it's a dreadful use of jury time to be unduly cumulative, and I think it's not sensible for a trial judge to allow it.

MR. McKAY: I agree. Thank you, Your Honor.

MR. JONES: Your Honor, may I just make sure I clarify and understand the court's order?

THE COURT: Um-hmm.

MR. JONES: So the motion as it's been submitted is denied.

THE COURT: Correct.

30

MR. JONES: The court will allow the parties to extend discovery deadlines, if necessary, to allow the expert depositions to occur, and then as relates to the deposition of Dr. Gregory Lawrence, who's in Tennessee, that as it relates to his fee for his deposition, for his deposition time, which is normally covered by the plaintiffs, that the defense will pay half of that cost.

THE COURT: Right.

MR. JONES: Okay.

THE COURT: I think that would be a reasonable approach at this point, and we will deal with the rest when it comes up. But, no, I would welcome objections to cumulative testimony, if there is cumulative testimony.

MR. JONES: Does the court require an order? I'm not -- I'm only bringing that up because we have lead counsel for the plaintiffs that are in Tennessee.

THE COURT: That might be a good idea.

MR. JONES: Okay.

THE COURT: Why don't you go ahead and run it by counsel first.

MR. McKAY: Thank you. And the court is saying that the deadline for taking depos depositions, that applies to defendants' experts, because as I understand it --

THE COURT: Yes, exactly.

MR. McKAY: -- the defendant doesn't intend to depose our experts.

THE COURT: No. That's just the -- to give you a little bit more -- your side a little bit more flexibility in dealing with this so that you can get their information, because it seems to me it's fairer at this point --

MR. McKAY: Okay.

THE COURT: -- to allow both sides to explore the other side's experts and views --

MR. McKAY: Okay. Thank you, Your Honor.

THE COURT: -- than to cut it off.

MR. McKAY: All right. Thank you.

THE COURT: Okay. We will recess.

(Proximate Cause – "Substantial Factor" Without "But For" Test)

When I use the expression "proximate cause," I mean a cause which, in natural or probable sequence, produced the injury, the loss, or the damage complained of. It is sufficient if it is a substantial factor in bringing about the injury, loss, or damage. It is not a proximate cause if the injury, loss, or damage likely would have occurred anyway.

There may be one or more proximate causes of an injury. When the negligent conduct of two or more persons or entities contributes concurrently as substantial factors in bringing about an injury, the conduct of each may be a proximate cause of the death regardless of the extent to which each contributes to the injury.

Willful or reckless misconduct, when used in these instructions and when applied to the allegations in this case, means more than ordinary negligence. (Damages for Wrongful Death)

If the jury decides Charles Ballard is entitled to recover from the Defendants, the jury must determine the amount of money that will reasonably and fairly compensate Mr. Ballard for any damages proved to be proximately caused by Defendants' negligence.

The elements of damage the jury may consider are:

1. The reasonable cost of Krystal Ballard's funeral.

2. The reasonable value of necessary medical care and expenses incurred prior to Krystal Ballard's death.

3. The reasonable value to Charles Ballard of the loss of Krystal Ballard's services, training, comfort, conjugal relationship, and society and the present cash value of any such loss that is reasonably certain to occur in the future, taking into consideration the life expectancy of Mr. Ballard, Krystal Ballard's age and normal life expectancy, habits, disposition and any other circumstances shown by the evidence.

4. Charles Ballard's loss of financial support from Krystal Ballard, and the present cash value of financial support Krystal Ballard would have provided to Charles Ballard in the future, but for Krystal Ballard's death, taking into account Mr. Ballard's life expectancy, Krystal Ballard's age and normal life expectancy, Krystal Ballard's earning capacity, habits, disposition and any other circumstances shown by the evidence.

Death is inevitable. Although the law compensates for the untimeliness of a death caused by another, no damages are allowed for grief or sorrow.

Case No. CV OC 1204792

PLAINTIFF'S RESPONSES TO DEFENDANTS' MOTIONS IN LIMINE

ORIGINAL

COMES NOW the Plaintiff, Charles Ballard, by and through his attorneys, pursuant to Idaho Code § 9-102, Idaho Rule of Evidence 103(c), and the Court's Amended Scheduling Order of September 9, 2013, and responds to Defendants' Motions in Limine as follows. An Affidavit of Counsel, to which all exhibits referenced herein are attached, is filed contemporaneously with these responses.

1. DEFENDANTS' FIRST AND SECOND MOTIONS IN LIMINE[1] SHOULD BE DENIED BECAUSE PLAINTIFF SHOULD BE PERMITTED TO PUT ON EVIDENCE OF DR. O'NEIL'S COMPETENCE TO SERVE AS THE SOURCE OF ALL THREE DEFENSE STANDARD OF CARE EXPERTS' KNOWLEDGE OF THE APPLICABLE STANDARD OF CARE.

In Defendants' Memorandum of Law regarding the exclusion of malpractice and board of licensing matters, they reference only such evidence as pertaining to "Defendants" or their "experts." Their proposed order, however, broadens the scope of the proposed exclusion to include "defense witnesses" including specifically, "Dr. Kelly O'Neil." Dr. O'Neil is neither a Defendant here, nor is he a disclosed expert. He is, however, the sole source of information about the standard of care in Boise in 2010, upon which Defendants' experts relied to develop their opinions. Indeed, all three of Defendants' experts on the standard of care testified that they relied on Dr. O'Neil to tell them what the standard of care was in Boise, Idaho in 2010. (See Exhibit A, Lundeby Dep. 51:6-13; Exhibit B, Stiller Dep. 18:2-9; Exhibit C, Laurence Dep. 55:6 – 56:15).

Plaintiff must be permitted to explore the reliability of this central source, as it is a demonstrably unreliable one. During his medical career, Dr. O'Neil has been subject to numerous disciplinary proceedings. Specifically:

[1] Defendants move for an order in limine on six separate issues. (See Defs.' Mots. in Limine.) Defendants' memorandum of law, however, contains support for only three of those motions. (See Defs.' Mem. of Law.) These responses are organized in such a way as to account for all of Defendants' motions in limine.

- In 1998, Dr. O'Neil entered into a Stipulated Settlement and Disciplinary Order with the Medical Board of California, based on Dr. O'Neil's admissions that he committed "repeated acts of negligence" in the care and treatment of two separate patients. (Exhibit D, 1998 Agreement at 3.)

- Also in 1998, the Idaho State Board of Medicine adopted and incorporated the terms of the 1998 California Stipulated Settlement, for the purpose of reciprocal discipline. (Exhibit E, 1998 Idaho Order.)

- In 2004, Dr. O'Neil entered into a Stipulated Settlement and Disciplinary Order with the Medical Board of California, arising from allegations that, in 2000, he was grossly negligent and/or incompetent and/or committed repeated negligent acts in his care and treatment of two female patients who developed post-operative complications after being transferred to a hotel for a two day recovery stay pursuant to his arrangements. Both patients required emergency hospitalization. (Exhibit F, 2004 Agreement.)

- In 2005, the Medical Board of California issued a Public Reprimand following Dr. O'Neil's probation for the year 2000 infractions. (Exhibit G, Public Reprimand.)

- In 2007, Dr. O'Neil entered into another Stipulated Settlement and Disciplinary Order with the Medical Board of California based on his actions with respect to an elderly woman's elective cosmetic surgery and her resulting complications. (Exhibit H, 2007 Agreement.)

- In 2008, the Idaho State Board of Medicine issued a Stipulation and Order resolving Dr. O'Neil's application for an Idaho license to practice medicine and surgery. The Order stated the Board's concerns that Dr. O'Neil "had several malpractice cases" and that "the California State Board issued a disciplinary Order" against him. "In addition, Applicant incorrectly answered various questions on the application." The Board ultimately imposed a fine and issued Dr. O'Neil a restricted license to practice medicine. (Exhibit I, 2008 Order.)

- In 2009, the Medical Board of California formally adopted a Proposed Decision ordering that Dr. O'Neil be placed on probation for failing to accurately disclose his prior discipline in applications he submitted to Idaho and his discipline in the State of Idaho. (Exhibit J, 2009 Decision.)

The similarity of these infractions to the circumstances of Ms. Ballard's death, coupled with their numerosity, overwhelmingly compel a conclusion that they are relevant to whether Dr. O'Neil is a trustworthy source as to the standard of care. For this reason, and for all of those detailed below, Defendants' motion must be denied.

a. Dr. O'Neil's Background is Relevant Under Idaho Rule of Evidence 401 et seq., Idaho Rule of Evidence 608(b), and Idaho Courts' Application of Idaho Code § 6-1012.

Putting aside for the moment that Dr. O'Neil is not in fact their "expert," Defendants' claim, without explanation, that evidence of an expert's malpractice or licensing revocations is simply irrelevant. To the contrary, Dr. O'Neil's history of misconduct, which necessarily implicates his credibility and competency, is directly relevant to his knowledge of the applicable standard of care. Such evidence is thus admissible under Idaho Rule of Evidence 402. The fact that Dr. O'Neil's opinions form the basis of all three of the defense experts' knowledge of the applicable standard of care must outweigh any concern about unfair prejudice under Rule 403.

Furthermore, Dr. O'Neil's failure to provide truthful responses in his application for an Idaho license, which resulted in the imposition of a fine and a restricted license, brings his truthfulness within the scope of I.R.E. 608(b). Providing false information to the State Licensing Board is surely a "specific instanc[e] of conduct" that is "probative of [Dr. O'Neil's] truthfulness or untruthfulness" and thus appropriate for inquiry on cross-examination. See I.R.E. 608(b); see also discussion, infra, at pages 13-14.

Underscoring the relevance analysis, this dispute arises from the rule set forth in Idaho Code Chapter 10, Medical Malpractice, requiring that an expert's testimony as to the applicable standard of care be judged "in comparison with similarly trained and qualified providers of the same class in the same community, taking into account his or her training, experience, and fields of medical specialization, if any." Idaho Code § 6-1012. In Dunlap ex rel. Dunlap v. Garner, 127 Idaho 599 (1995), the Court found that it is sufficient for an out-of-state expert to gain the requisite familiarity with the standards of the community by conferring with "local authorized personnel" and to state that the standard did not deviate from the national standard. 127 Idaho at 606 (emphasis added).

This allowance of consultation with local experts comes with close restrictions. The out-of-state expert witness must not only show that he or she is familiar with the local standard of care for the relevant timeframe and specialty, but the expert must also state how he or she became familiar with that standard of care. Suhadolnik v. Pressman, 151 Idaho 110, 116 (2011) (citing Dulaney v. St. Alphonsus Reg'l Med. Ctr., 137 Idaho 160 (2002)). Furthermore, there "must be evidence showing that the Idaho physician knows the applicable standard of care." Ramos v. Dixon, 144 Idaho 32, 37 (2007) (district court properly sustained objection to testimony of out-of-state doctor who did not know nature of Idaho doctor's experience or when it occurred); see also Dulaney, 137 Idaho at 166 (out-of-state expert's opinion lacked foundation when there was no showing that Boise physician would know proper standard of care). Failure to strictly adhere to these requirements has resulted in a finding of inadmissibility as to the out-of-state expert's testimony. See Rhodehouse v. Stutts, 125 Idaho 208, 213 (1994) (Because there was no indication that expert inquired of a local doctor, and plaintiff did not state that the local standard of care was the same as the national standard, there was not sufficient foundation in expert's affidavit to show that expert had actual knowledge of the applicable community standard.); Arregui v. Gallegos-Main, 153 Idaho 801 (2012) (The Court is not required to believe out-of-state expert's "conclusory statements that the local unidentified chiropractor was familiar with the standard of care.")

The close scrutiny of an out-of-state expert's consultation with a local "expert" compels the conclusion that the local expert's qualifications and competency are admissible to probe the foundation for the out-of-state expert's testimony. Plaintiff must, therefore, be permitted to explore this highly relevant information, which forms the basis of not one, but three experts' opinions. The jury must be permitted to determine for itself whether Dr. O'Neil indeed "knows the standard of care." Ramos, 144 Idaho at 37.

b. Dr. O'Neil is the Source on Which Defendants' Experts Relied, Making His Numerous Suspensions and Disciplinary Proceedings Admissible Under I.R.E. 705.

Defendants argue only that Plaintiff be prohibited from mentioning whether "any Defendant or defense expert has been sued for malpractice or has been the subject of any prior administrative licensing matter." (Defs' Mem. of Law 4-7.) Of course, had Dr. O'Neil actually been proposed as an expert, Plaintiff would have had an opportunity to file a challenge to his qualifications. Defendants should not be able to hide behind the fact that Dr. O'Neil is not testifying when his qualifications are, in fact, at issue due to the permitted reliance on local physicians by out-of-state experts.

The test for determining whether a witness is qualified as an expert is "not rigid" and can be found in Idaho Rule of Evidence 702. West v. Sonke, 132 Idaho 133, 138-39 (1998). A qualified expert is one who possesses "knowledge, skill, experience, training, or education." I.R.E. 702. The proponent of the testimony must lay foundational evidence showing that the individual is qualified as an expert on the topic of his or her testimony. State v. Burrow, 142 Idaho 328, 330 (Ct. App. 2005) (citing State v. Winn, 121 Idaho 850, 855 (1992)). It is axiomatic that Defendants also be prepared to lay foundational evidence that the expert behind the expert be qualified on the topic of his or her testimony -- and that Plaintiff be permitted to explore that evidence through cross-examination.

The Idaho Rules of Evidence further provide that "[t]he expert may testify in terms of opinion or inference and give the reasons therefor without prior disclosure of the underlying facts or data, provided that the court may require otherwise, and provided further that, if requested pursuant to the rules of discovery the underlying facts or data were disclosed. The expert may in any event be required to disclose the underlying facts or data on cross-examination." I.R.E. 705. This is all Plaintiff wishes to explore here. Dr. O'Neil is the "underlying fact" of Defendants' experts' testimony, and his competence and credibility should be required to be "disclosed."

c. Alternatively, the Court Should Treat Dr. O'Neil as an Absent Expert and Permit Examination of his Conduct as Evidence of his Competence, Credibility and Motivations.

Even if Dr. O'Neil was a testifying expert, Plaintiff would be able to examine his past misconduct as evidence of his credibility and competence. Idaho law is clear that expert credibility is a question for the jury. Lunders v. Estate of Snyder, 131 Idaho 689, 698 (1998). Based on this reasoning, the Court in Raybeck v. Danbury Orthopedic Assocs., 805 A.2d 130 (Conn. App. 2002) upheld the trial court's admission of evidence that an expert witness treated his own wife's wrist fracture with a cast where he asserted the standard of care was to use pins, noting "it is well settled that the credibility of an expert witness is a matter to be determined by the trier of fact." 805 A.2d at 142. Here, Dr. O'Neil is essentially an absent expert, and his credibility should be explored for the jury's benefit.

Consistent with the Raybeck decision, courts across the country have routinely permitted cross-examination of an expert witness regarding prior acts, professional license suspension, or malpractice suits in order to probe the witness's competency, credibility, and motivations. See Navarro de Cosme v. Hosp.l Pavia, 922 F.2d 926, 932-33 (1st Cir. 1991) (permitting cross-examination of an expert witness concerning the suspension of his license as a notary for failure to submit required reports, as such inquiry was determined to go to the expert's "standing in the community"); Ferris v. Tenn. Log Homes, Inc., 4:06CV-35-M, 2010 U.S. Dist. LEXIS 26272, *8

(W.D. Ky. Mar. 19, 2010) ("plaintiffs' cross-examination regarding [expert's] prior disciplinary proceedings would be probative of [his] competency"; Wischmeyer v. Schanz, 536 N.W.2d 760, 766 (Mich. 1995) (evidence of prior failed surgeries performed by expert witness admissible to show witness's lack of competency); Hock v. New York Life Ins. Co., 876 P.2d 1242, 1257 (Colo. 1994) (permitting cross-examination of defense medical expert about a civil suit in which the expert was a party because the questions were relevant to the expert's credibility and bias); Hayes v. Manchester Mem. Hosp., 38 Conn. App. 471, 661 A.2d 123, 126 (Conn. App. 1995) (trial court erred in precluding plaintiff from questioning defense expert about a medical malpractice suit brought against him; an "important function of cross-examination is the exposure of a witness's motivation in testifying"); Underhill v. Stephenson, 756 S.W.2d 459, 461 (Ky. 1988) (trial court erred in prohibiting plaintiff from cross-examining defendant's medical expert regarding unrelated medical malpractice case pending against him to show expert's bias); Irish v. Gimbel, 691 A.2d 664, 674 (Me. 1997) (trial court erred in barring cross-examination of defense expert with respect to a settlement, without an admission of liability, of a prior medical malpractice case; the excluded evidence was relevant to a "crucial issue, bias or interest, and if admitted, could have had a controlling influence on a material aspect of the case, i.e., whether defendant deviated from the applicable standard of care"); Willoughby v. Wilkins, 310 S.E.2d 90, 97-98 (N.C. App. 1983) (trial judge erred in barring cross-examination of defendants' medical expert regarding prior medical malpractice claim; "evidence of prior medical negligence claims brought against the expert witness is admissible to show bias or interest on the part of the expert.")

This line of cases illustrates that the cases cited by Defendants in fact represent a minority and narrow view regarding the exclusion of evidence about an expert's malpractice or license revocations. Notably, three of the cases cited in Defendants' brief excluded such evidence because of its extremely prejudicial effect on the expert personally. See Noble v. Lansche, 735 S.W.2d 63, 64 (Mo. Ct. App. 1987) (evidence that expert physician voluntarily surrendered license to dispense narcotics would have revealed that the expert suffered from personal addiction); King v. Byrd, 716 So.2d 831, 835 (Fla. 4th DCA 1998) (involved "highly extraordinary cross-examination with matters involving the doctor's handling of female patients"; court's main concern was that counsel conducting examination had formerly represented the expert in the disciplinary proceeding); Morrow v. Stivers, 836 S.W.2d 424, 429 (Ky. Ct. App. 1992) (subject testimony about relinquished license would have involved implication that expert had sex with patients and contracted hepatitis, making it unduly prejudicial). Here, no such salacious details are present, and Dr. O'Neil will not even be on the witness stand to potentially face embarrassment about his disciplinary actions.

In another of Defendants' cases, Heschelman v. Lombardi, 454 N.W.2d 603 (Mich. Ct. App. 1990), the court forbade "[m]ere unproven accusations of malpractice stated in a complaint" because such accusations "cannot be used as a basis for attacking a physician's knowledge or credibility." Here, the accusations go far beyond mere allegations, and were instead the basis of formal disciplinary proceedings and orders.

For all of these reasons, Plaintiff must be permitted to explore Dr. O'Neil's qualifications, competence, and ability to serve as the sole source of Defendants' evidence regarding the applicable standard of care. Therefore, Defendants' first and second motions in limine should be denied.

2. DEFENDANTS' THIRD MOTION IN LIMINE SHOULD BE DENIED.

a. Defendants' Retained Expert, Dr. Gregory Laurence, has been Charged with Federal Felony Offenses Related to his Medical Practice and the Criminal Charges and Evidence Underlying the Criminal Charges are Admissible.

Defendants have retained Dr. Gregory Laurence of Tennessee and intend to call him as an expert witness on the standard of care. To buttress his testimony and credibility, Defendants seek to admit in evidence at trial Dr. Laurence's curriculum vitae, which expounds on his accomplishments, honors, awards, and purported standing in the medical community, and have him also testify to these various matters before the jury. (See Exhibit N, Dr. Laurence's CV and Defs.' Ans. to Pl.'s Third Set of Discovery 42, July 22, 2013 ("Dr. Laurence will testify regarding his various publications, honors and university appointments as set forth in his curriculum vitae . . . . He will also discuss his various society memberships . . . .").)

In presenting the foregoing picture of Dr. Laurence to the jury, Defendants seek to conceal that Dr. Laurence has been charged with serious federal criminal felony offenses related to his medical practice. These charges, which Defendants euphemistically characterize as "tax evasion," arise out of his medical practice and call into question his character for truthfulness, his fitness to practice, and his qualifications to render an opinion concerning the standard by which Idaho physicians practice. Additionally, Dr. Laurence faces the very real possibility of prolonged imprisonment, imposition of substantial fines, other financial penalties, and the loss of his license to practice medicine. These significant financial consequences bear on Dr. Laurence's potential motive to serve and testify as a retained expert in this case.

b. Dr. Laurence Is Charged with Federal Criminal Felonies Arising Out of his Medical Practice.

On May 8, 2013, a federal grand jury in the District of Colorado returned a six count indictment charging Dr. Laurence and two co-defendants with various felony offenses ranging from Conspiracy to Defraud the United States to Corruptly Endeavoring to Obstruct or Impede the Due Administration of the Internal Revenue Laws. (See Exhibit K, Indictment, United States v. Eva Melissa Sugar, Jerry Lynn Roberts and Gregory Nathan Laurence, U.S. District Court, District of Colorado, Criminal Case No. 13-cr-00-193 JLK.) Dr. Laurence was charged with this latter crime, as well as Obstruction of Justice. (Id. at Counts 5 and 6.) After being charged, Dr. Laurence was ordered to surrender his passport and remains free on a personal recognizance bond pending trial. (See Exhibit L, Docket No. 19 (Order Setting Conditions of Release as to Gregory Nathan Laurence on PR Bond); Exhibit M, Docket No. 22 (Receipt of Surrendered Passport as to Gregory Nathan Laurence).)

Dr. Laurence's medical practice is central to these felony charges. The Indictment at the outset of Count 5 alleges: "At all times relevant to the Indictment, Gregory LAURENCE was a resident of Tennessee. LAURENCE was a doctor who operated two businesses, Germantown Aesthetics, LP ("GA") and Germantown Family Care & Obstetrics, LP ('GFCO')." (Indictment at ¶ 14.) The Indictment proceeds to describe a sophisticated scheme whereby Dr. Laurence, over a nearly seven year period, set up various fictitious trust accounts and entities using his wife to facilitate their operation and caused GFCO to issue checks payable to the fictitious trust entities, which payments he falsely claimed were legitimate deductions or costs of goods sold, thereby reducing GFCO's taxable income. (Id. at 12-13.) The Indictment further describes how Dr. Laurence disguised the existence of his cosmetic medical practice, Germantown Aesthetics ("GA"), and how Dr. Laurence did not file federal income tax returns for this entity for a five-year period. (Id. at 13-14.) It is further charged that Dr. Laurence used another fictitious trust entity to pay himself and his employees at GA and GFCO as "independent contractors" to avoid paying taxes, that he failed to issue those employees required tax forms, and that he improperly used funds from a so-called Banking Unincorporated Business Organization ("BUBO") account to pay for business expenses, school tuition for his children, cars, and credit card payments. (Id. at 14.)

In Count 6 of the Indictment charging Dr. Laurence with Obstruction of Justice, it is alleged that, after he was contacted by federal agents and served grand jury subpoenas related to GA and GFCO, Dr. Laurence signed and sent to these federal agents, through the US Attorney's office, certain documents including "Public Servant's Questionnaires" requesting the investigating agents provide personal information about themselves and "Disclosure Statements" advising the agents that their failure to respond would result in "Commercial Dishonor," financial penalties, and "being a participant in fraud." (Id. at 15.) Dr. Laurence also is alleged to have sent another document styled "Notice of Default and Dishonor of a Lawful Public Servant Questionnaire" to one or more federal agents. (Id.) It also is alleged Dr. Laurence failed to comply with Orders issued by the federal district court in Colorado compelling production of the subpoenaed records. (Id.)

Germantown Aesthetics or "GA," as used throughout the Indictment, is the entity used by Dr. Laurence to practice cosmetic medicine. Defendants note as much in their expert disclosure by which they list: "Gregory Laurence, M.D., Germantown Aesthetics." (See Exhibit N, Defs.' Ans. to Pl.'s Third Set of Discovery 37, July 22, 2013.) Dr. Laurence describes himself in his CV as the Medical Director of Germantown Aesthetics. Similarly, Defendants' disclosure touts Dr. Laurence's obstetrical experience, and his CV likewise lists his long association with GFCO, the other medical practice described throughout the criminal Indictment.

c. Evidence of Criminal Conduct by Dr. Laurence in the Operation of His Medical Practice is Admissible, as are the Pending Charges.

Trial courts in Idaho are afforded broad discretion in cross-examination and in allowing parties considerable latitude in impeaching an opponent's retained experts. The scope of cross examination rests in the court's discretion. Quick v. Crane, 111 Idaho 759, 727 P.2d 1187 (1986); State v. Wheeler, 109 Idaho 795, 711 P.2d 741 (Ct.App.1985). In Harmston v. Agro-W., Inc., 111 Idaho 814, 820, 727 P.2d 1242, 1248 (Ct. App. 1986), the Idaho Court of Appeals rejected appellants' claim that the cross-examination of their expert was "disrespectful and abusive." In upholding the latitude afforded counsel on cross-examination of a retained expert, the Court noted that "[o]ur system of dispute resolution permits and encourages challenges to the credentials and opinions of an opponent's experts. The limiting and control of cross-examination is within the province of the trial judge." (Id. (citing State v. Cypher, 92 Idaho 159, 438 P.2d 904 (1968) and State v. Linebarger, 71 Idaho 255, 232 P.2d 669 (1951)).

Defendants argue that the pending criminal charges against Dr. Laurence are not relevant, or, if relevant, outweighed by the risk of unfair prejudice, and not admissible under IRE 608(b) and 609 because Dr. Laurence has not yet been convicted. Defendants, however, read IRE 608(b) too narrowly. Moreover, an Idaho Court of Appeals opinion issued just last week discusses the distinction between IRE 609 and 608(b) and the broad discretion of a trial judge to permit evidence of a witness's character for truthfulness under I.R.E. 608(b) -- which discretion should be exercised in this case to permit evidence of Dr. Laurence's untruthful character.

In State v. Bergerud, the trial court precluded the defendant from impeaching a witness on cross-examination based upon that witness's conviction of a misdemeanor for lying to police. ---- Idaho ---, --- P.3d ----, 2013 WL 5716821 (Ct. App., October 22, 2013). The trial court held that such impeachment was not permissible under IRE 608 and 609, which the trial court held applies only to felonies. Id. at *4. On appeal, the Idaho Court of Appeals held that the trial court erred in not separately considering the admissibility of such evidence under IRE 608(b) and the discretion of a trial judge to permit such evidence. Id. at *5-6.

Specifically, IRE 608(b) provides:

> Specific instances of the conduct of a witness, for the purpose of attacking or supporting the credibility, of the witness, other than conviction of crime as provided in Rule 609, may not be proved by extrinsic evidence. They may, however, in the discretion of the court, if probative of truthfulness or untruthfulness, be inquired into on cross-examination of the witness concerning (1) the character of the witness for truthfulness or untruthfulness, or (2) the character for truthfulness or untruthfulness of another witness as to which character the witness being cross-examined has testified.

(Emphasis added).

As noted by the Court in Bergerud, although Rule 608(b) prohibits extrinsic evidence of a witness's past conduct to attack credibility, it expressly allows cross-examination of the witness concerning instances of the witness's conduct if it is probative of the witness's truthfulness. (Bergerud at *5 (citing State v. Araiza, 124 Idaho 82, 90, 856 P.2d 872, 880 (1993); State v. Guinn, 114 Idaho 30, 38, 752 P.2d 632, 640 (Ct.App.1988)). With respect to whether the misdemeanor conduct was relevant, the Court further held that "[m]aking a false statement to a law enforcement officer, like perjury, is an act that is intimately connected to credibility. In fact, it is itself a crime." Id. at *6 (citing I.C. § 18–705). "It not only indicates a willingness to be dishonest when it serves one's own interest, but a willingness to defy authority and break the law when doing so." Id.

The described conduct of Dr. Laurence in attempting to obstruct and impede the due administration of the laws of the United State and in obstructing justice is far more egregious than the witness conduct at issue in Bergerud. Similarly, the described conduct "indicates a willingness to be dishonest when it serves one's own interest" and it also shows "a willingness to defy authority and break the law when doing so." Of even more significance is the fact that this conduct related directly to the medical practice upon which Dr. Laurence relies to testify in this case. That he operated and concealed his medical practice through sham trusts, ginned up business deductions, sent federal agents phony forms accusing them of fraud, and sought to extract financial penalties is relevant and bears on his character for truthfulness.

Furthermore, the described conduct demonstrates Dr. Laurence's contempt and disdain for the legal process in refusing to comply with the Colorado district court's order that he produce grand jury materials directed at his medical and cosmetic medicine practice. If Dr. Laurence refused to honor multiple court orders specifically directed at him and his medical practice, how can it be assumed that he complied with the legal requirements associated with rendering testimony in this case, including the requirement that he adequately familiarize himself with the local standard of care? This demonstrates a willingness to "defy authority and break the law," particularly when he believes it serves his own self-interest. Accordingly, Plaintiff should be permitted to inquire of Dr. Laurence regarding this contempt of the legal process, which is probative of his character for truthfulness under IRE 608(b).

Additionally, Dr. Laurence's character for untruthfulness exists through his medical licensure, including in Idaho where he is now licensed. Dr. Laurence testified at his deposition that he had not informed any of the three states where he is licensed, including Idaho, of his pending felony charges. (Laurence Dep. 168:17 – 169:9, Oct. 2, 2013.) In Idaho, a physician is required to report not only a felony conviction but the "commission of any act constituting a felony." Idaho Code § 54-1814(1) (licensed physician required to report conviction of a felony); Idaho Code § 54-1814(21) (licensed physician required to report commission of an act constituting a felony or crime of moral turpitude). In addition, a physician in Idaho, upon renewal of his medical license, is required to report, among other matters, whether they have been "charged with or convicted of a felony...." (See Exhibit O, State of Idaho, Board of Medicine, Physician and Surgeon License Renewal Application Form.)

Notwithstanding the foregoing, Dr. Laurence chose to not report his Indictment and underlying actions to the appropriate regulatory boards, including the Idaho Board of Medicine. This is probative of his character for truthfulness and thus admissible.

As set forth above, the foregoing evidence is, in fact, relevant, and contrary to Defendants' IRE 403 argument, this relevance is not outweighed by any prejudice Defendants attribute to the subject evidence. Dr. Laurence is a redundant defense expert on the issue of standard of care. Defendants have identified two other physicians they intend to call to address the standard of care, one from Idaho and one from Spokane who also maintains a practice in Coeur d'Alene. The notion that they will be unfairly prejudiced if the court denies their limine motion and/or if they choose to not call a third standard of care expert from Tennessee is unavailing. Moreover, it is Defendants who did not adequately vet this expert and were surprised when they learned for the first time of Dr. Laurence's indictment at deposition. Plaintiff should neither be faulted, nor disadvantaged, simply because Defendants were unaware of Dr. Laurence's criminal issues or because Dr. Laurence chose to conceal the subject information from defense counsel. In fact, it is Mr. Ballard who will be unfairly prejudiced unless he is allowed a full and fair opportunity to cross-examine this expert -- a process our systems "permits and encourages." Harmston, 111 Idaho at 820.

d. The Significant Consequences and Penalties Facing Dr. Laurence Are Admissible.

If convicted, Dr. Laurence faces three years imprisonment and a $250,000.00 fine on Count 5 and ten years imprisonment and a $250,000.00 fine on Count 6. (See Exhibit P, Information Sheet accompanying Indictment (Docket No. 2-3), United States v. Gregory Nathan Laurence, U.S. District Court, District of Colorado, Criminal Case No. 13-cr-00-193 JLK.) In addition, Dr. Laurence faces additional significant financial consequences as a result of a prolonged history of failing to file required income tax returns and an alleged attempt to minimize his tax obligations through phony deductions and sham trusts.

More significantly, Dr. Laurence is likely to lose his medical license upon a felony conviction. See Tennessee Code Annotated 63-6-214(a)(10) (grounds for medical license revocation include conviction of a felony). As noted above, Dr. Laurence is also licensed in Idaho where, like other states, a felony conviction is grounds for revocation of a physician's medical license. Idaho Code § 54-1814(1). Committing acts constituting a felony is likewise grounds for discipline and a physician is required to report such conduct. Idaho Code § 54-1814(21).

The foregoing, looming consequences and termination of his income stream provide Dr. Laurence with a strong motive to work with Defendants and express a favorable opinion that will result in additional, lucrative expert witness work. As such, these charges and myriad of consequences are probative and admissible to show motive. IRE 404(b) (evidence of other crimes, wrongs or acts may be admissible to show motive). In addition, such evidence is admissible to show bias on the part of Dr. Laurence. State v. Araiza, 124 Idaho 82, 91, 856 P.2d 872, 881 (1993) ("[T]he bias, prejudice, or motive of a witness to lie concerning issues presented in a trial is always material and relevant to effective cross-examination."); see also Cosgrove By and Through Winfree v. Merrell Dow Pharmaceuticals, Inc., 117 Idaho 470, 476-77, 788 P.2d 1293, 1299-1300 (1989) (discussing impeachment of expert by evidence of amount earned testifying in court).

Accordingly, Defendants' motion in limine concerning Dr. Laurence should be denied.

3. DEFENDANTS' FOURTH MOTION IN LIMINE SHOULD BE DENIED TO THE DEGREE DR. KERR OPENS THE DOOR FOR CROSS-EXAMINATION ON THE ISSUE OF LIABILITY INSURANCE.

Plaintiff generally agrees that "evidence of Defendants' [liability] insurance is not relevant to this case . . . ." (Defs' Mem. of Law 2.) Plaintiff also acknowledges the command of I.R.E. 411. However, Plaintiff should not be precluded from eliciting testimony and/or from introducing evidence demonstrating the existence of Defendants' liability insurance coverage if Defendants open the door on this issue.

Should Dr. Kerr or any other defense witness suggest that no such insurance coverage exists, or alternatively, that financial hardship would follow an adverse jury verdict and judgment in this matter, Plaintiff should be allowed the opportunity to cross-examine on this topic not only to challenge the truthfulness of the witness, but also to neutralize the unfairly prejudicial effect Defendants themselves recognize by their motion.

4. DEFENDANTS' FIFTH MOTION IN LIMINE SHOULD BE DENIED TO THE DEGREE IT SEEKS TO PRECLUDE PROPER CROSS-EXAMINATION OF DEFENDANTS' EXPERT WITNESSES.

By their fifth motion in limine, Defendants seek to preclude any mention of "the fact that any of Defendants or any of the defense witnesses have ever been previously represented by [defense counsel]." (Defs' Mots. in Limine 3.) Because this motion seeks to preclude Plaintiff from conducting proper cross-examination of Defendants' expert witnesses on the issue of bias, Defendants' motion should be denied accordingly.

As an initial matter, "[t]he scope of cross examination rests in the [C]ourt's discretion." Cosgrove By & Through Winfree v. Merrell Dow Pharm., Inc., 117 Idaho 470, 477, 788 P.2d 1293, 1300 (1989) (citing Quick v. Crane, 111 Idaho 759, 727 P.2d 1187 (1986); State v.

Wheeler, 109 Idaho 795, 711 P.2d 741 (Ct.App.1985)). And "[a]lthough the Idaho Rules of Evidence do not specifically address impeachment of witnesses by evidence of bias, the right to do so is unquestionable." D. Craig Lewis, Idaho Trial Handbook 342 (2d ed. 2005).

The reason for this is simple: "Proof of bias is almost always relevant because the jury, as finder of fact and weigher of credibility, has historically been entitled to assess all evidence which might bear on the accuracy and truth of a witness' testimony." State v. Thumm, 153 Idaho 533, 540, 285 P.3d 348, 355 (Ct. App. 2012) (quoting U.S. v. Abel, 469 U.S. 45, 52, 105 S.Ct. 465, 469 (1984)) (emphasis added). For this reason, because "[i]t would not be unusual for a medical expert to have a bias in favor of the party who is paying his expert witness fee . . . cross-examination as to who is paying for the expert is almost always allowed when the expert is testifying." Poss v. Meeker Mach. Shop, 109 Idaho 920, 925, 712 P.2d 621, 626 (1985).

As the above-referenced tenants of Idaho law demonstrate, the jury is entitled to hear all evidence as it pertains to the possible bias of Defendants' expert witnesses. If parties are typically allowed to cross-examine expert witnesses as to who is paying them for their testimony, Plaintiff should be allowed the opportunity to cross-examine Defendants' experts as to the full breadth and scope of their relationships with the parties or attorneys who retain them. Surely, if the compensation received by the defense experts in this case is probative as to possible bias, so too must evidence demonstrating a relationship extending beyond the instant litigation.

Therefore, to the extent Defendants' motion seeks to preclude Plaintiff from conducting a proper and thorough cross-examination of Defendants' expert witnesses, their motion must be denied.

5. DEFENDANTS' SIXTH MOTION IN LIMINE REGARDING OBAMACARE IS UNOPPOSED.

By their sixth motion in limine, Defendants seek to preclude evidence pertaining to "the effect of this, or any medical malpractice case on the cost of health care or the implementation of the [A]ffordable [C]are [Act] also known as "Obamacare." Because Plaintiff has no intention of offering evidence or argument pertaining to either of these issues, Plaintiff does not oppose the instant motion.

Q. (BY MR. HADDAD) Go ahead.

A. I have not.

Q. Okay. Is it fair to say that in the questions that you formulated in your mind to ask and discuss with Dr. O'Neil, that you utilized the answers given by Dr. O'Neil during this 45-minute conversation with him to gain an understanding as to what the standard of practice was in Boise in 2010?

A. To the extent that you can without practicing there at the time, yes.

Q. Okay. Now, have you done, other than that one AMA page on staff privileges, have you done any other research, medical research, associated with this case?

A. Aside from my previous training and experience, I have looked over a few things, I've looked at some of the surgical prep solution recommendations, looked at some of my textbooks about techniques for fat transfer and -- I think that's mainly it.

Q. All right. Now, surgical prep solution recommendations, resources you might have looked at, what resources did you use?

A. I don't recall the specific resources, I didn't print

BY MR. HADDAD:

Q. Have you spoken with any attorneys or any of the doctors in order to understand the standard of practice as it might exist in Boise?

A. I have.

Q. Okay. So when I say, have you spoken to anybody else, that would include that doctor. Is there -- who did you speak with?

A. Dr. O'Neil.

Q. Okay. What's Dr. O'Neil's first name?

A. I do not know. It would be in my e-mails.

Q. Okay. Other than Dr. O'Neil, have you spoken with any other physician in order to gain an understanding as to the standard of practice for cosmetic physicians practicing in Boise?

A. I have not.

Q. Now, when you worked for Mountain -- first of all, when is the first occasion that you would have performed cosmetic procedures?

A. Other than residency where we did -- as a general surgeon, we were in plastic surgeries, and we did cosmetic procedures in residency.

Q. Okay.

A. Otherwise, I started my fellowship in 2007, I believe. And that's when I started.

Q. Okay. Basically, counsel for Dr. Kerr told you, "You need to learn what the standard of practice was in 2010, and here's the guy that can tell you what the standard of practice is," and they named Dr. O'Neil, correct?

In the Matter of the Accusation Against: KELLY J. O'NEIL, M.D. 42400 Via Nortada Temecula, CA 92590 Physician's and Surgeon's Certificate No. A36888 Respondent.	NO. 09-93-26899 L-9612025 STIPULATION IN SETTLEMENT AND DECISION

Complainant, Ron Joseph, Executive Director of the Medical Board of California, by and through his attorney, Daniel E. Lungren, Attorney General of the State of California, by Steven H. Zeigen, Deputy Attorney General, and Kelly J. O'Neil, M.D. ("respondent"), by and through his attorney Richard K. Turner, Esq., hereby stipulate as follows:

1. Complainant Ron Joseph is the Executive Director of the Medical Board of California (Board) and is represented by Daniel E. Lungren, Attorney General of the State of California by Steven H. Zeigen, Deputy Attorney General.

2. Respondent, Kelly J. O'Neil, M.D. is represented by Richard K. Turner, Esq., who has met with respondent and advised him concerning the effects of this stipulation. Respondent has carefully read and fully understands the contents of this stipulation.

3. The Division of Medical Quality of the Medical Board of California, Department of Consumer Affairs ("Division") acquired jurisdiction over respondent by reason of the following:

A. Respondent was duly served with a copy of the Accusation and First Supplemental Accusation, Statement to Respondent, Request for Discovery, Form Notice of Defense and copies of Government Code sections 11507.5, 11507.6 and 11507.7 as required by section 11503 and 11505, and respondent timely filed a Notice of Defense within the time allowed by section 11506 of the code.

B. Respondent has received and read the Accusation and First Supplemental Accusation, which is presently on file as Case No. 09-93-26899, OAH No. L-9612025, before the Division. Respondent understands the nature of the charges alleged in the Accusation and the First Supplemental Accusation, and that the charges and allegations constitute cause for imposing discipline upon respondent's license to practice medicine which was issued by the Medical Board of California ("Board").

4. Respondent and his counsel are aware of each of respondent's rights, including the right to a hearing on the charges and allegations, the right to confront and cross-examine witnesses who would testify against respondent, the right to present evidence in his favor and call witnesses on his behalf, or to testify, his right to contest the charges and allegations, and other rights which are accorded to respondent pursuant to the California Administrative Procedure Act (Gov. Code, § 11500 et seq.), including the right to seek reconsideration, review by the superior court, and appellate review.

5. Respondent freely and voluntarily waives each and every one of the rights set forth in paragraph 4.

6. Respondent understands that in signing this stipulation rather than contesting the Accusation and the First Supplemental Accusation, he is enabling the Division to issue the following order without further process.

7. For the purpose of resolving Accusation and First Supplemental Accusation No. 09-93-26899, respondent admits he committed repeated acts of negligence in the care and treatment of patient J.G., as alleged in paragraph 5 of the Accusation, and repeated acts of negligence in the care and treatment of patient V.F. as alleged in paragraph 15 of the First Supplemental Accusation, which are attached as exhibits hereto. Respondent hereby gives up his right to contest that cause for discipline exists based on these charges. The remaining allegations in the Accusation and First Supplemental Accusation are dismissed.

Complainant shall not file any case against respondent which did not arise from facts occurring subsequent to the date this agreement was signed by the respective parties.

8. The admissions made by respondent herein are for purposes of this proceeding, for any other disciplinary proceedings by the Division, and for any petition for reinstatement, reduction of penalty, or application for relicensure, and shall have no force or effect in any other case or proceeding.

9. It is understood by respondent that, in deciding whether to adopt this stipulation, the Division may receive oral and written communications from its staff and the Attorney General's office. Communications pursuant to this paragraph shall not disqualify the Division or other persons from future participation in this or any other matter affecting respondent. In the event this settlement is not adopted by the Division, the stipulation will not become effective and may not be used for any purpose, except for this paragraph, which shall remain in effect.

10. Based upon the foregoing, it is stipulated and agreed that the Division may issue the following as its decision in this case.

ORDER

IT IS HEREBY ORDERED that Physician's and Surgeon's Certificate No. A36888 issued to Kelly J. O'Neil, M.D., is revoked.

Respondent may enroll in the Physician Assessment and Clinical Evaluation (PACE) program at the University of California at San Diego, School of Medicine (UCSD). The subject matter of the program shall pertain to patient assessment, plastic surgery and anesthesia, or any subject matter determined appropriate by the program administrator following assessment of respondent. The exact number of hours and specific content of the program shall be determined by the PACE program. The effective date of this order shall be no sooner than the date upon which the PACE program first offers respondent a position in the program.

Respondent, while in attendance at the PACE program at UCSD medical facilities, may practice medicine for the limited purpose of participating in the PACE program. For all other purposes, respondent's medical license is revoked and he may not resume the practice of medicine until and unless he is notified in writing by the Division that he meets the conditions set forth in accord with this paragraph.

If Respondent successfully completes the PACE program, and all examinations required by the PACE program pertaining to the program's contents, the Division shall timely notify Respondent.

Upon written notification to respondent that he has successfully completed the PACE program, the revocation previously issued shall be stayed and respondent shall be placed on probation for five (5) years on the terms and conditions set forth below. Within 15 days after the effective date of this decision, respondent shall provide the Division, or its designee, proof of service that respondent has served a true copy of this decision on the Chief of Staff or the Chief Executive Officer at every hospital where privileges or membership are extended to respondent or where respondent is employed to practice medicine and on the Chief Executive Officer at every insurance carrier where malpractice insurance coverage is extended to respondent.

1. EDUCATION COURSE

Within 90 days from the effective date of this decision, and on an annual basis thereafter, respondent shall submit to the Division or its designee for its prior approval an educational program or course to be designated by the Division, which shall not be less than 40 hours per year, for each year of probation. This program shall be in addition to the Continuing Medical Education requirements for re-licensure. Following the completion of each course, the Division or the course provider may administer an examination to test respondent's knowledge of the course. Respondent shall provide proof of attendance for 65 hours of continuing medical education of which 40 hours were in satisfaction of this condition and were approved in advance by the Division or its designee.

2. MONITORING

Within 30 days of the effective date of this decision, respondent shall submit to the Division or its designee for its prior approval a plan of practice in which respondent's practice shall be monitored by another physician who shall provide periodic reports to the Division or its designee.

If the monitor resigns or is no longer available, respondent shall, within 15 days, move to have a new monitor appointed, through nomination by respondent and approval by the Division or its designee.

3. RESTRICTION OF PRACTICE

During probation, respondent agrees not to use general anesthesia in his accredited surgery center. Respondent further agrees that during probation he shall comply with the requirements of the Accreditation Association for Ambulatory Health Care (AAAHC) concerning the staffing of his surgery center.

During probation, respondent agrees to limit the amount of aspirate withdrawn during any one liposuction procedure to 5,000 ccs or less.

During probation, respondent agrees not to remove more than 3,000 ccs of aspirate during any liposuction which is done as part of multiple cosmetic procedures in one sitting.

4. OBEY ALL LAWS

Respondent shall obey all federal, state and local laws, all rules governing the practice of medicine in California, and remain in full compliance with any court ordered criminal probation, payments and other orders.

5. QUARTERLY REPORTS

Respondent shall submit quarterly declarations under penalty of perjury on forms provided by the Division, stating whether there has been compliance with all the conditions of probation.

6. PROBATION SURVEILLANCE PROGRAM COMPLIANCE

Respondent shall comply with the Division's probation surveillance program. Respondent shall, at all times, keep the Division informed of his addresses of business and residence which shall both serve as addresses of record. Changes of such addresses shall be immediately communicated in writing to the Division. Under no circumstances shall a post office box serve as an address of record.

Respondent shall also immediately inform the Division, in writing, of any travel to any areas outside the jurisdiction of California which lasts, or is contemplated to last, more than thirty (30) days.

7. INTERVIEW WITH THE DIVISION, ITS DESIGNEE OR ITS DESIGNATED PHYSICIAN(S)

Respondent shall appear in person for interviews with the Division, its designee or its designated physician(s) upon request at various intervals and with reasonable notice.

8. TOLLING FOR OUT-OF-STATE PRACTICE, RESIDENCE OR IN-STATE NON-PRACTICE

In the event respondent should leave California to reside or to practice outside the State or for any reason should respondent stop practicing medicine in California, respondent shall notify the Division or its designee in writing within ten days of the dates of departure and return or the dates of non-practice within California. Non-practice is defined as any period of time exceeding thirty (30) days in which respondent is not engaging in any activities defined in Sections 2051 and 2052 of the Business and Professions Code. All time spent in an intensive training program approved by the Division or its designee shall be considered as time spent in the practice of medicine. Periods of temporary or permanent residence or practice outside California or of non-practice within California, as defined in this condition, will not apply to the reduction of the probationary period.

9. COMPLETION OF PROBATION

Upon successful completion of probation, respondent's certificate shall be fully restored.

10. VIOLATION OF PROBATION

If respondent violates probation in any respect, the Division, after giving respondent notice and the opportunity to be heard, may revoke probation and carry out the disciplinary order that was stayed. If an accusation or petition to revoke probation is filed against respondent during probation, the Division shall have continuing jurisdiction until the matter is final, and the period of probation shall be extended until the matter is final.

11. COST RECOVERY

The respondent is hereby ordered to reimburse the Division the amount of $5,000.00 for its investigation and prosecution costs. Respondent shall pay the entire amount within the five year period of probation in amounts to be agreed upon between respondent and the Division. Failure to reimburse the Division's cost of its investigation and prosecution shall constitute a violation of the probation order, unless the Division agrees in writing to another payment plan because of financial hardship. The filing of bankruptcy by the respondent shall not relieve the respondent of his responsibility to reimburse the Division for its investigative and prosecution costs.

12. PROBATION MONITORING COSTS

Respondent shall pay the costs associated with probation monitoring each and every year of probation. Such costs shall be payable to the Division at the beginning of each calendar year. Failure to pay such costs shall constitute a violation of probation.

13. LICENSE SURRENDER

Following the effective date of this decision, if respondent ceases practicing due to retirement, health reasons or is otherwise unable to satisfy the terms and conditions of probation, respondent may voluntarily tender his certificate to the Division. The Division reserves the right to evaluate the respondent's request and to exercise its discretion whether to grant the request, or to take any other action deemed appropriate and reasonable under the circumstances. Upon formal acceptance of the tendered license, respondent will no longer be subject to terms and conditions of probation.

We concur in the stipulation and order.

After the results of Phase 1 are reviewed, Dr. O'Neil shall complete Phase 2. Phase 2 comprises five (5) days (40 hours) of Clinical Education in respondent's field of specialty. JURISDICTION

3. This Accusation is brought before the Division of Medical Quality, Medical Board of California (Division), under the authority of the following sections of the Business and Professions Code (Code) and the Disciplinary Order in Case No. 09-1993-26899.

4. Section 2227 of the Code provides that a licensee who is found guilty under the Medical Practice Act may have his or her license revoked, suspended for a period not to exceed one year, placed on probation and required to pay the costs of probation monitoring, or such other action taken in relation to discipline as the Division deems proper.

5. Section 2234 of the Code states:

"The Division of Medical Quality shall take action against any licensee who is charged with unprofessional conduct. In addition to other provisions of this article, unprofessional conduct includes, but is not limited to, the following:

"(a) Violating or attempting to violate, directly or indirectly, or assisting in or abetting the violation of, or conspiring to violate, any provision of this chapter [Chapter 5, the Medical Practice Act].

"(b) Gross negligence.

"(c) Repeated negligent acts.

"(d) Incompetence.

"(e) The commission of any act involving dishonesty or corruption which is substantially related to the qualifications, functions, or duties of a physician and surgeon.

"(f) Any action or conduct which would have warranted the denial of a certificate."

6. Section 125.3 of the Code provides, in pertinent part, that the Division may request the administrative law judge to direct a licentiate found to have committed a violation or violations of the licensing act to pay a sum not to exceed the reasonable costs of the investigation and enforcement of the case.

7. Section 14124.12(a) of the Welfare and Institutions Code provides, in pertinent part, that upon receipt of written notice from the Medical Board of California that a licensee's license has been placed on probation as a result of a disciplinary action, the department may not reimburse any Medi-Cal claim for the type of surgical service or invasive procedure that gave rise to the probation, including any dental surgery or invasive procedure, that was performed by the licensee on or after the effective date of probation and until the termination of all probationary terms and conditions or until the probationary period has ended, whichever occurs first. This section shall apply except in any case in which the relevant licensing board determines that compelling circumstances warrant the continued reimbursement during the probationary period of any Medi-Cal claim, including any claim for dental services, as so described. In such a case, the department shall continue to reimburse the licensee for all procedures, except for those invasive or surgical procedures for which the licensee was placed on probation.

8. Section 2271 of the Code states: "Any advertising in violation of Section 17500, relating to false or misleading advertising, constitutes unprofessional conduct."

9. Section 651 of the Code provides in part that "(a) it is unlawful for any person licensed under this division or under any initiative act referred to in this division to disseminate or cause to be disseminated, any form of public communication containing a false, fraudulent, misleading, or deceptive statement or claim, or image for the purpose of or likely to induce, directly or indirectly, the rendering of professional services or furnishing of products in connection with the professional practice or business for which he or she is licensed. A 'public communication' as used in this section includes, but is not limited to, communication by means of mail, television, radio, motion picture, newspaper, book, list or directory of healing arts practitioners. Internet or other electronic communication.

(b) A false, fraudulent, misleading, or deceptive statement, claim or image includes a statement or claim that does any of the following:

(1) Contains a misrepresentation of fact.

(2) Is likely to mislead or deceive because of a failure to disclose material facts.

(3) (A) Is intended or is likely to create false or unjustified expectations of favorable results, including the use of any photograph or other image that does not accurately depict the results of the procedure being advertised or that has been altered in any manner from the image of the actual subject depicted in the photograph or image.

(B) Use of any photograph or other image of a model without clearly stating in a prominent location in easily readable type the fact that the photograph or image is of a model is a violation of subdivision (a). For purposes of this paragraph, a model is anyone other than an actual patient, who has undergone the procedure being advertised, of the licensee who is advertising for his or her services.

(C) Use of any photograph or other image of an actual patient that depicts or purports to depict the results of any procedure, or presents 'before' and 'after' views of a patient, without specifying in a prominent location in easily readable type size what procedures were performed on that patient is a violation of subdivision (a). Any 'before' and 'after' views (1) shall be comparable in presentation so that the results are not distorted by favorable poses, lighting, or other features of presentation, and (2) shall contain a statement that the same 'before' and 'after' results may not occur for all patients.

(4) Relates to fees, other than a standard consultation fee or a range of fees for specific types of services, without fully and specifically disclosing all variables and other material factors.

(5) Contains other representations or implications that in reasonable probability will cause an ordinarily prudent person to misunderstand or be deceived.

(6) Makes a claim either of professional superiority or of performing services in a superior manner, unless that claim is relevant to the service being performed and can be substantiated with objective scientific evidence.

(7) Makes a scientific claim that cannot be substantiated by reliable, peer reviewed, published scientific studies.

fraudulent, misleading, or deceptive within the meaning of subdivision (b).

(f) Any person so licensed who violates any provision of this section is guilty of a misdemeanor. A bona fide mistake of fact shall be a defense to this subdivision but only to this subdivision.

(g) Any violation of any provision of this section by a person so licensed shall constitute good cause for revocation or suspension of his or her license or other disciplinary action."
